At one small town, where it seemed to be the custom for passengers to descend and refresh themselves at the wayside inn or tea-room, I was offered, quite hungry I joined them at the bar, the only place to be served, and had two huge and generously buttered slices of bread, a cup of the national drink brewed so strong that one forgot all one's enemies, but a bit more cream (Eire has no restrictions as to food) and a little more sugar brought it down almost to the Canadian norm. They did not like to see me eat "dry bread". As I lolked at the Alpine heights of butter I questioned the term "dry" but accepted a huge slice of cheese, which to a Hastings County person was nothing extraordinary. But the bread was tasty and with none of the unpleasant smell that flour gets when the vital elements are removed and vitamins bolstered.

The talk, chiefly of the different methods of cutting peat in Eire and in Denmark, went at full speed considering the handicap of a mouth full of bread, butter, cheese and tea. The beer drinkers had all the advantage and I was submitted to the usual questionnaire. The bus waited patiently outside, apparently the schedule being arranged to suit contingencies.

There was one place on this route where the fuchsia hedges are bushes, almost trees, rather untidy as a hedge but the flowers themselves of the utmost beauty and a little distance on the road curves suddenly to a high rhododendron beige of the most wildly gorgeous tints of purple, majenta and deep crimson with a soft blue background of the distant hills on one side and the jade green of the bays of the sea on the other. There was still some of the Mediterranean heath in bloom. The Lavelle Sockenbach collected for me a bunch of heath and of bell-heather, not quite in bloom, so that I could study the difference in form. The autumn coloring in our own north country is as beautiful but of a completely different type. The moisture in the air in Ireland gives a soft coloring that one can find very restful.

Achill means eagle and is pronounced Acahl. But there are now eagles. Perhaps, they missed the mountains which are only so many and perhaps they were just shot down by those humans who so love to kill all the beautiful creatures of creation. But there were many chaffinches, songbirds, linnets, redbreasts, very many of them, and of course the gulls swinging in from the shore. There are no good Nature books in Ireland, not even in that large and splendid book shops, Dublin. One would say that old age who had seen more than ten miles from home — and with four sons in Australia — would have stayed on the land of the bus-line, but helped out on a few names. She was sweet and rosy and clean and could read and write.

The families are large in this most wretched section, and the grudging soil can be nurtured only in small patches, a little oats and potatoes, a few pigs, a few cattle, a few sheep and some fishing, so the people depend much on the tourists and the cheques from America.

While working up an appetite for the almost dinner time, I had time to collect sea-pinks along the shore in a long walk towards the high cliffs that hold back the Atlantic. It was a day of mountains, moorlands, black and distant bogs and continued sunshine, and when I returned to the Inn, called Annsbrayt, my hostess had found for me an exquisite dainty little native orchid. She, by the way, like so many resort managers here, was from England. I should dearly like to see that Inn dropped down on the edge of some of our lovely lakes in Ontario, so unique it was and capable of seating large numbers and with one long side of little boys, each only large enough for a table for two to four.

Much as I enjoy a fire of peat, the sight of the dreary peat bogs where men, women and children are cutting block by block, with spades and piling them in heaps to dry, is almost as depressing as coal-mining, sections. The poor little overturned donkeys, the hopeless attitudes of the humans in their rags and there is an unhappy and unforgettable meaning. In the evening I was grateful to the young man in the lounge of the hotel, who quickly drew me up to the chair by the fire-place and kept it replenished for me. But peat is not the driftwood from trees chopped down in the woods.

The next day was interesting to note the different ways of stacking the peats to dry in different parts of the country and in different countries.

The man-hours spent in digging turf, in building the miles of stone wall that enclosed little fields could have constructed enough houses and barns and schools and churches to raise scores of villages in a more prosperous land.

The next day being Sunday seemed an appropriate day to climb the holy mountain of St. Patrick. The sky was a sport blue in the beautiful Protestant church and one of the most beautiful interiors to be found anywhere. The frescoes are modern and tell the Christian story in a satisfying way. The singing was good and the sermon encouraging and on leaving, a last look at the solid stone steeple let me see something. After the midday meal I drove along the south shore of Clew Bay to the foot of the mountain from which the Saint chased away the reptiles and pests, the snakes, the toads also, but certainly not the flies for I saw none at the gate of St. Michael's Church in Cootehill, County Cavan.

I was fortified with a booklet by Father Anselus giving instructions to be Faithful for their spiritual aid and comfort and noted that Pope Leo gave a plenary indulgence to those who climbed the hill, 2,500 feet high, on the proper day and the proper prayers. Up to the top of the hill St. Patrick had rollicked and had fasted forty days and forty nights, on the cloud-smothered top.

But I went only a short distance up to the ruins of the Saint while a kind, helpful and silent chauffeur led me over the rough rocks alongside the rapid little mountain stream It was a pleasant if difficult climb. Over the hill black storm clouds were massing, a cold wind blew but the sun still shone. Did the saint listen to the music of this stream? Did he stop to comfort the ancestors of these pale primroses and bluebells by its side? Or perhaps sheer bliss had by time from his prayers to listen to the song of the birds?

It is a cold and forbidding hill stands up of hard and splintery quartzite covered here and there with dull grass on its shallow soil. A few sheep browsed at the base of the statue where I stopped to rest before beginning the unpleasant descent and pondered on that day I commemorated this year by a new issue of Eire postage stamps) when the Saint rang his bell, threw it over the hill with all the bewitched snakes following after. Angels brought back the bell again and again until all the snakes were disposed of, possibly into Clew Bay. It must have been a grand day for St. Patrick and the angels. But he had a hard time of it trying to convert the pagan Irish to Christianity and just how did he ever get the idea of coming to attempt it?

About the year 300 there was a well-organized Church in Britain and they sent over missionaries to Ireland by way of Wales. More than a hundred years later the Irish, who were noted pirates in those days, captured a Welsh ship in which was a lad named Patrick. He was taken to Ireland and worked as a slave herding sheep for his master in the sweetly peaceful vale in Ulster. It was in Sunday some weeks later that I first saw it in the holy light of the slowly setting sun and but it could not do much for those seven years of Patrick's slavery spent in tending sheep and meditation. He learned the language and after his escape came back to Ireland as a missionary.

Talking about the afternoon at the tea-table a rather rude commercial traveller asked me impolitely did not believe a word of the legend that St. Patrick could do that why didn't he come back and throw all the politicians into the sea? As I had no inside information as to the workings of the spiritual powers I ate my scones in silence.

About nine that evening a club of young women who had been having a meeting in the hotel, barged into the lounge and there was more tea, talk, and lemon squash. My day was finished and I nearly so when one bright young thing asked: "What is Canada like?"

To be continued next Saturday.

GREAT CITY'S WATER SHORTAGE

New York City's water shortage has drawn the attention of many municipal leaders in every part of the world. For it has brought their thoughts to deal with questions of water supply. Water is an essential of life and wherever man is whether in the city of millions or in a hamlet or on the desert he must have a supply of water that will never fail.

Water is wasted freely as everyone knows. It is apparently so plentiful and so common that people are careless in its use. Yet in New York the time has come when a Friday was tried out as a shaveless and bathless day. The shortage had come to such an acute state that this recommendation which would never have come to people's minds before was made and proposed to the citizens to try and cut the consumption.

New York usually has a plentiful supply but under recent conditions the supply did not hold out at the maximum demand.

The Ottawa Journal speaking of the question of shortage notes that most people use water extravagantly taking it as a gift of Providence in never-failing abundance.

"What they forget is that sometime, somewhere every drop of this water must have fallen in rain, that water from most sources must be treated and purified at heavy expense before it is fit for human consumption, pumped and distributed by means of an intricate and costly plant.

"But the cost of the water, it is clear, is more in the waste of it than in its legitimate use. Purified water is used for industrial fire-extinguishing and lawn purposes because there cannot be two systems — one for consumption and the other not. And because we have never learned economy in its use we let the tap run while we brush our teeth or wash our hands; when a teacup would suffice, fill a tub when we could have as good a bath (at least as cleansing a bath) with six inches of water; keep up with leaky taps and toilets because it just didn't occur to us that we are "unning hard cash down the drain."

FARTHEST NORTH CITY REBUILDS

The city farthest north in the world, Hammerfest, Norway, was fired by the Nazis when they retreated from the stout kingdom in the latter part of 1944 and is rising from its ruins. It will be a solid, well built community of about 4,000 persons. Temporary barracks were erected after the collapse of the enemy and recovery has been steady. Over 250 structures have been built of timber and concrete and most of them are housing units. Over three years ago a new electric plant was completed. This was of especial pride to the Hammerfest folk. A new trade school has been completed which specializes in mechanics and carpentry and there are a new post office and telegraph building as well as a new fire station.

Hammerfest looks to the fishing industry to be a source of its future importance. The city formerly had an Arctic Ocean fishing fleet of 30 vessels and of these only one remains. New and productive industries are termed vital to the city which is bound to the sea and its products.

IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES

The United States Department of Labor recently made a study of food prices in terms of wages in various parts of the world. It discovered that, for most items, the American worker had a definite advantage over his counterpart in foreign lands.

Take the matter of bread, for example. The American worker can buy five pounds of bread for what he earns in a half hour. The Russian worker would have to work 12 hours to get that much bread. In Austria, it would be an hour and a quarter; in Italy, an hour and a half.

For butter, the contrast is even greater, as The Milwaukee Journal notes. The American can earn a pound of butter in about a half hour. The Russian would have to work 18 hours and the Czech, who would have to go to the black market, would have to work more than 14 hours.

If a short list of groceries is put together (including eggs, butter, beef, tea, bread and milk), where the American can acquire that list for five hours of work, the Australian would have seven hours, the Briton seven and a half, the German twenty-five, the citizen of the U.S.S.R. fifty-two, and the Czech on the black market, ninety.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1949, Edgar A. Guest)

BEST OF ALL TASKS

So many duties I have done
That list them all I never could.
Or, countless errands I have run.
I've carried in the coal and wood.
The dishes I have often dried.
I've shovelled paths through snow-drifts white.
But should you ask me, I'd decide
Life's happiest task is mine tonight.

I've often carried ashes out.
I've dug the garden in the spring.
I've moved the furniture about.
In fact, I've done most everything.

I've beaten rugs; I've cut the grass.
I've opened windows painted tight,
But nevertest of all I'd class
The task that I shall do tonight.

I've swept the walk; I've raked the leaves.
I've stirred the batter for a cake.
Though this, perhaps, no one believes,
The beds I've even helped to make.

But on this night of nights I'd call
Whatever life has asked of me,
The best, most welcome task of all
Is this: to trim the Christmas tree.

Boy's Hobby Big Business Now

Winnipeg. (CP)—A home-operated business which grosses about $6,000 annually is the proud accomplishment of 16-year-old Alan Hull of that city.

The youth, who has named his enterprise Canadian Dreadnecrait, began making models as a sideline and figurines a few years ago, just for fun. Starting on $100, he built his hobby into a thriving industry which today serves a large part of Eastern Canada.

One of his customers is a large department store, working on opening a chain of mail-order offices, and although this store has markets many of his products.

In a recent interview here, Alan said he learned the figurine trade while visiting in Rochester, Minn., and on his return he "set up" a basement factory in his home. He spends about two hours after school and Saturday working on his wares, as well as all day Saturday. His father has to hire extra help to keep production abreast of demand.

Moulds for his figurines are made from special rubber which is heated to melting point, and then encased around a completed figurine. After cooling, the rubber is removed from the figure and into the impression goes liquid plaster, which hardens and forms a new model.

"A number of models break before we get the moulds," Alan explains, "and extreme care must be exercised in the early stages of production." He uses about 100 pounds of plaster of paris daily.

The figurines Alan manufactures many types of figurines, including miniature animals and window-sill ornaments. He also makes ash trays, candle holders and candy dishes, and recently embarked on production of lamps in the same style as his figurines. His factory is capable of producing 100 lamps a day.

"I enjoy it very much," he says, "and although it started as a hobby, it pays much better now." Alan plans to stay with his business until he obtains a "more stable job."

Sailor Finds Career In Five-Tone Yodel

Vancouver, (CP)—The yodel that lifted Sailor Jimmy from Donn Reynolds was deck hand on a coastal steamer has turned into a career.

Donn dropped in at his Vancouver apartment after several years of being a top entertainer in New Zealand. He has also left the Hollywood making movie contacts and plans to return there shortly.

He attributes his success to his yodel with "five tones all at once."

"I don't use it very often," he says. "Only when I'm feeling good. It took me seven years to perfect it."

Indeed, the explain of the tourist boat on which Donn sailed from Australia to Vancouver to the lad's noises and demanded silence.

After leaving the coastal service, Donn served a stint in the Royal New Zealand Navy. At the end of the war, he worked his way to Hollywood and made a hobby. He's been yodelling for money ever since.

FOUR CRITICALLY INJURED

Brantford, Dec. 24 — (CP) — Four persons were critically injured Thursday in a truck-automobile crash seven miles east of here, a hospital said Friday. Dead are Mrs. Barbara Henwood, George Harding and Bill Reynolds, all of Brantford. Police said the four were in a car that collided with a truck.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHO ARE YOU?

How well do you know yourself? Have you ever asked yourselves? Certainly not very well. We often flounder for years until we single out what we have talent as an artist, writer, or speaker. Perhaps some unfortunate experience puts us in a new light, and we suddenly discover face to face as a new individual.

Seymour Hadley, Whitney's brother-in-law, was a noted physician, but also a collector of etchings and paintings. Suddenly he did he become in collecting, however, but in the knowledge he could etch, and so at the age of 50 he began etching and became one of the outstanding etchers of his time.

We all need to get better acquainted with ourselves. We can do one more, and be more, than we think. We know ourselves better than anybody else, therefore we should be able to discover new ways and means by which we can improve ourselves, conquer our weaknesses and develop our strength.

Every once in a while some one else discovers a new person in someone else that that one never suspected! Lot sof people spend a greater part of their lives asleep. They never wake up to discover a teeming world all about them. They meet themselves anew, and do things. How much better never to fall asleep! We never know how to live until we try. The psychologists, and other scientists, are finding many a one to discover himself. Intuition is a great gift, if we let it to the individual himself. It is the voice speaking that one would only dispense with his inner guide.

We wonder why other people do not get acquainted with us, but that is the fault of the lack of us know ourselves. Long ago Socrates said, "Know thyself," and many people ask ourselves who we are and why we are here. That alone would help to wake us up to a new way of life.

Robert Frost had been writing an occasional poem over a period of twenty years. Then one day he came upon one of his poems, and decided that it wasn't bad. Then he discovered that he was meant to be, but a poet! Subsequently he became one of our greatest poet, honored and beloved by millions.

Ah, the Pleasure Of State Ownership!

(Peterborough Examiner)

The Bell Telephone Company has been denied the ten per cent. increase which it wanted to charge. This is a fine measure of its services. It must bide its time until March, when the Board of Transport Commissioners will hear what it has to say, and give a decision.

How different is the position of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario! A week ago its rates were raised by a simple announcement from the chairman, Mr. Robert Saunders, that it would be so.

Observe, dear readers, how efficient the system of government ownership is! No costly hearing was necessary before Mr. Saunders raised the rates; no briefs had to be prepared; no time was wasted; it was a matter of moment, and up went your power bill. You don't even have the think about it.

What a glorious thing it is that we have governments to protect us against the rapacity of private companies! And how wonderful life would be if all services were in government hands, so that we would never have to use our heads about what we were simply have to do what we were told (as in the case of Hydro) for of course protest is against evil things is not merely useless but positively dangerous, and highly suspicious. And we, mustn't be suspicious, must we? Except, of course, of private enterprise.

Any Port in Storm When A-Bomb Comes

London, (CP)—In case of atomic attack, it is best to take shelter in a shelter than in the street.

Even if it's one of those surface shelters built during the air raid days of the Second World War, it will be "better than nothing".

Kenneth Younger, parliamentary secretary of the Civil Defence, told the House of Commons this afternoon that, in general, the deadly radioid tissue in the throat before or after treatment of any kind is not pathological but normal. Therefore, in my opinion the practice of taking a child out or any one else to the major operation is completely unjustified.

Shore Mills, Lancashire, England—(CP)—Britain and Ireland can tell the time of day live in a pond at the mill here.

They're fish, however, just before the men stop work, the fish muster close to the surface and wait for scraps of food.

The same thing happens at lunch over their tea, and after work they vanish into deeper water.

The fish belong to a local club, since the mill recently changed hands, and are looked after by the new owners.

VESSEL TALKS WATER BACK

Halifax, Dec. 24 (CP)— Here's good news for thirsty New Yorkers. The Italian liner Vulcania, first of seven ships proceeding to New York, took aboard water for the first time Thursday. Ship officials said the water will be put "to a variety of uses in New York" but declined further comment.

SO THE THUMUS WAS ENLARGED!

Today I received another clipping of a report of a medical convention of tonsillectomy. In this instances, as in many similar ones, the post-mortem investigation revealed "greatly enlarged thymus gland" and the coroners, the doctors who did the operation and/or the reporter who wrote the story—just who, the story left to conjecture—implied that the enlarged gland pressed on the windpipe or something of the sort and caused the sudden death of the child.

I thought that old hokum had been relegated to medical history. The truth is that if newborn infants are examined with particular reference to the thymus gland of a child in the course of the following removal of tonsils and/or adenoids, it will be found that believe is convenient but actually it doesn't explain a thing. In these tragic cases it is a matter of the—no expert, but just a plain practitioner—trying to conceal the truth to say the child succumbed to hemorrhage shock, atelesis (spasm of the glottis of the lung from lodgment or normal blood, pus, mucus or food in the main bronchus) or embolism (entrance of minute fragment of tissue or clot into circulation) or plugging of vital artery in brain, heart, lungs, liver or some other organ. Not only fail to mention but quit what I believe is a fact of decisive importance, namely, that the operation of tonsillectomy and/or adenoid tissue in the throat before or after treatment of any kind is not pathological but normal. QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Easy on the Arteries

I have hardening of the arteries and would like to know what effect the salmon diet therapy would have, on high blood pressure? (R. M. E.)

Answer—Don't we all? We begin to have "hardening of the arteries" the day we reach the peak of growth and development—say when we are 30 or 35 years of age, and it is all downgrade. Cardiovascular degeneration, which is the C-V-D for short. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope to Answers Who Know. It deals with heart and artery conditions in full. You don't say about high blood pressure. From your letter I infer that you live in Toronto. If so don't drive the altitude (6038 feet) another thought. Only cardiovascular degeneration going from sea level to a few hundred feet above sea level to Denver (mile high), Cheyenne, Phoenix, Santa Fe or Albuquerque and stop off for a week or more half way up. Then you will gradually adjust itself to the changed environment.

Silver Blackens

Why does sterling silver turn black when I wear it? (Mrs. S. T.)

Answer — From the silver fillings in your mouth and/or sulfur compounds in sebum or human sweat and after many pounds in egg and other foods.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

This being one of those two-day holidays, when all highways and bus lines are jammed to the roof; the highways are packed, the railroads overcrowded and all gathering are more easily staged. Something of the old-fashioned spirit of Christmas emerges whenever the holy day falls on a Saturday, Sunday or Monday.

But slowly and surely, a good deal of the old neighborliness of Christmas is coming back to the festival. Years ago, when the cities were small and the towns smaller, when the villages were built around a lively skating pond, when there was a church, a hotel or a store, Christmas was a community affair, and the joy of it was not kept behind closed doors. We used to walk up to go and visit a merry Christmas to your neighbors and friends. It was unthinkable that you should forget to rap at all your neighbors' doors to say a hearty greeting. It was a far more active day of visiting than New Year's.

Even now we have the motor car and the telephone. We can travel swiftly, and with great ease. So we greet more. We hold our Christmas with, possibly, a small intimate family gathering for dinner.

Perhaps the Sunday before the history of holy days, and how they came to be, will tell you that Christmas has already lost much of its religious significance. Christmas has been, for centuries, the rare day of the year when all men and women could go out of their way to seek out their neighbors, meet every body with warmth and affection, with a cordial word and a hearty warm, for a day.

Even the most familiar greeting we might add this inexpensive but most welcome Christmas present of all.

"How well you look! I have never seen you looking better!"

Staff Carries On In Peanut Project In East Africa

London, Dec. 24 (AP) — Food Minister John Strachey told Prime Minister Attlee today the staff of Britain's much-criticized $100,000,000 peanut project in East Africa will carry on with their task.

Strachey arrived in London yesterday from a lightning tour of the territories being developed by the government-owned Overseas Food Corporation in an effort to make Britain less dependent on foreign countries for her edible oil needs.

Attlee's office issued a statement interpreted as meaning that the Prime Minister supports the food minister, criticized in parliament last month after he fired the chairman of the project. The firings followed disclosure that the plan has so far fallen far short of expectations.

Strachey told Attlee, the statement said, that there will be no resignations from the staff, who have started their daily stint to make the scheme as now set-tled a success."

STUDENT PILOT CONFESSES

Centralia, Ont., Dec. 24 — (CP) — A 19-year-old student pilot Thursday admitted to low-flying and freed his 25 flying mates from their barracks. His name was not revealed. The entire training class at the R.C.A.F. station here was confined to barracks until a pilot who "became annoyed" with Cpl. Cook and St. Thomas owned up.

KNOCKS SELF OUT

Blenheim, Dec. 23 (CP)—A sales clerk literally knocked herself out Wednesday in planes. A customer, Mrs. Mary Modrzwski of Blenheim, refused confirmed to remove an article, fell, hit her head on a counter, and slumped two feet to the floor unconscious. She was taken to hospital suffering concussion.

PICTON

Says Company's Policyholders Using More Care Guarding Against Fire

Picton—In his review of the current year of activities of Bay of Quinte Mutual Fire Insurance Company, secretary-treasurer Hilton McCartney said that "the company's policyholders as a whole are taking more care to assure their farm buildings and properties against loss by adhering to recommendations of their new system of inspection." Mr. Hendricks, a qualified electrician, who has been engaged as a company inspector has been on duty since November. Already he is finding keen co-operation on the part of the policy holders to comply with suggestions made.

Mr. McCartney, who has been associated with the company for 12 years, succeeded the late Arthur Davis. He was formerly a company director and also an agent.

More Insurance Minded

He told the directors who had gathered at the annual meeting, that methods and machinery, the increased value of livestock and buildings were making people mindful that they cannot accept such loss themselves and that today vast increases in insurance were necessary.

Among those attending the annual dinner which was held at the Globe Hotel were: President and chairman Howard Leavens, Adolphus Roblin, Ross Eaton, Hamilton Welsbanks, Douglas Burr, Belleville, Hilton McCartney, B. Anderson, Frank Hawkins, Neil Parks, A. P. McKinnon, E. Greer, Wellington; Arthur Rightmyer, Bloomfield; E. B. Purtelle, R. E. Small, K. I. Mitchell, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Consboro; Harold Noxon, W. G. McLean.

Mr. McCartney explained the company's affiliation with other mutuals for re-insurance and how this method of covering loss protected the company by spreading a loss. He spoke of a further means of protection in the method of automatic coverage with no elapsed clauses and how this safeguarded the company. He said a method of supplementary insurance included forty companies. "We are in a better and safer position than we were at this time last year because we do not shoulder the entire risks that are to taken," Mr. McCartney said.

Much Carelessness

He pointed out that 50 per cent of losses were due to carelessness. About 50 per cent are classed of unknown origin. "While we have little control over electrical storm losses, other losses can be controlled with proper care and good electrical installations. Some threshing fires have been due to inexperienced workers but the filing of sprinklers can cut these losses greatly."

Mr. McCartney said that the inspector's recommendations to policyholders were followed by a letter within 30 days which inquired as to the precautions taken to protect the property for fire loss. He said it was the company's intention to help policyholders become aware of losses which can be overcome through minor precautions.

President Howard Leavens presided as chairman. Everyone present spoke briefly.

A gifted speaker, Ross Eaton gave a thought-provoking address on Character which was greatly appreciated. He said that "life without a goal is like a ship without a rudder and that life is like a ladder, every step is either up or down."

Regret Absence

Three of the company's longest active members, directors Adolphus Roblin, E. B. Purtelle, and Hamilton S. Welbanks expressed regrets of absence of the late Arthur Davis. Mr. Roblin said he had been a member forty years and that he was once the youngest member of the Board. Ed. B. Purtelle, a member for 32 years, said he believed much of the company's success was due to the good fellowship which existed among directors, agents and policyholders, throughout his associations, he said, "I have been amazed at the fairness of the policyholders" and told of experiences of the honesty of the policyholders.

Hamilton S. Welbanks, whose father was the first policyholder back in 1872, who has been a member for 30 years, also spoke briefly, and extended compliment of the season to the company members and policyholders.

Frank Hawkins, also a past director; vice president Benjamin Anderson of R. R. Greer, K. I. Mitchell, Inspector Hendricks of Belleville, A. P. McKinnon, Harold Noxon, Douglas Burr, Belleville, W. G. McLean also spoke.

Enviable Position

Auditor R. B. Small said his association with the company had been interesting. He said the company has an enviable position and that the community should feel grateful that they have such coverage at the low premiums paid.

Neil Parks, youngest member, felt that progress had been made this year and that the new inspection service would yield valuable results in the future.

Mr. Arthur Rightmyer, policyholder guest of the directors expressed season's greetings on part of policyholders.

The dinner was enjoyed in a home-like atmosphere of good fellowship with the added touch of attractive seasonal decorations and good food.

Prices of Fowl Remain Steady, Market Smaller

There was a comparatively small attendance on the local market on Saturday with the offering of fowl being somewhat smaller than was in evidence on Tuesday and Thursday.

Prices for fowl, however, remained steady with turkeys being quoted at 60 and 65 cents. Geese sold up to 65 cents with ducks being quoted at the same figure. Chicken sold at 40 cents for mature birds and 45 cents per pound for capons.

Eggs levelled off at 60 cents per dozen for firsts with medi-ums being quoted at 35 cents and pullets 37 cents per dozen.

There was a good offering of apples on the outside market with top grade Soys bringing $3 0.e hamper; Delicious and Talman Sweets sold for $2.50, the former being quoted at 75 cents per peck.

Only a very few vegetables were offered with prices holding at previous levels.

Christmas tree vendors were on the few in number but were doing a fairly brisk last minute business with prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.

BRITISH COMMONS IS REBUILT

2 Cars Involved In Sideswipe Collision

A sideswipe collision on the Trenton-Belleville highway involving two motor vehicles delayed two home-going Christmas parties early this morning. Damage to the two vehicles amounted to approximately $700 while two persons were sent to the hospital for a check-up.

Mr. A. James Turney, Montreal was driving west when his vehicle was in collision with an eastbound car driven by W. Caudrest of Gall. The Turney car was turn-ground in the highway while the Caudrest car continued on for 150 feet before going into the ditch on the left side of the highway. Mr. and Mrs. Turney were sent to hospital for a check-up but later proceeded on to Montreal.

The accident, which occurred just west of the Half Way Motors, was investigated by Provincial Constable Harry Pratt.

POPE PIUS OPENS

600 Police on Squad

In the square outside St. Mary Major were mobilized 600 Roman police and caribineri summoned to prevent interference from the Chamber of Labor headquarters across the square. There the disputed peasants meeting had been scheduled after police banned a demonstration at the colosseum. The meeting was cancelled when only about 200 persons were able to get through the police cordon.

At St. Peter's the pomp and ceremony of the Holy Year inaugural stirred huge crowds to alternating breathless quiet, chorus and applause.

A great shout rose as the Pope lift, in his stiff ceremonial robes and heralded by pealing silver trumpets, was carried on a portable throne from the altaline chapel to the Holy door at the portico of St. Peter's.

In the Sistine Chapel, with the cardinals ranged behind him his Holiness had fallen on h's knees before the blessed sacrament exposed in a golden monstrance in the blaze of 63 candles.

The chanting of fiebly-wrought incense burners, swung by altar boys, broke the few moments of intense silence and the Pope rose to his feet to incense the altar three times.

He chanted the first line of the hymn to the Holy Ghost. The papal choir picked up the simple melody, which rose to the lofty roof of the chapel and spread out into the marble halls of the vatican.

The procession then wound past clusters of monks and friars, representing all the religious orders—sandalled franciscans in brown corded robes, dominicans in black and white cloth shaved head, beared and cowled capuchin frairs.

Lit by Candle

Pilgrims standing in the vast square before St. Peter's heard the solemn singing move slowly towards them.

The Pope's chair, descending slowly in the throng of cardinals and brilliant guards, was lit by a painted candle and surmounted by a crimson and gold canopy and 10 huge ostrich-feather fans.

But the cardinals and the citizens of Rome waiting in the square saw nothing of the splendor as the procession turned into the Portico of St. Peter's, blocked off by temporary tribunes built between the gigantic columns for distinguished visitors, diplomats accredited to the Holy See, and the press.

Six silver trumpets broke suddenly into the solemn chant of the choir, their twin crystal notes quivering through the huge portico, and over the square and into the basilica itself where 500,000 waiting pilgrims stirred in expectancy.

There several hundred dignitaries and correspondents of the press watched with a sudden hush as the Pope took the silver hammer presented him by Italian workmen and approached the door through which 800,000 pilgrims are expected to pass during the 1950 Holy year.

In his Christmas address Friday Pope Pius had said that "in opening the Holy door with three strokes of the hammer we shall be conscious of performing no mere traditional act but a symbolic rite of high import not only for Christmas but for the whole human race."

Strikes Three Blows

The pontiff raised the silver hammer once and struck a small gilt cross at the door's centre intoning in Latin: "Open to me the doors of justice."

The sistine choir responded:—"Having entered them I shall confess to the Lord."

At the second stroke the chanters said: "I will adore thee towards Thy holy temple in reverence before Thee."

Then the Pope struck the third time — a harder blow — and intoned:

"Open the doors, for the Lord is with us."

"Who did wonders in Israel," responded the chanters.

The huge, heavy doors swung slowly open on a special cart and were wheeled away.

With this the bells boomed out the message to the throngs waiting throng inside the church and outside in the square.

The Pope relinquished the hammer, said a brief prayer, knelt and then rose to walk alone through the open doors of the great basilica. He was joined by the papal procession and was carried in the portable throne to the ceremonial altar.

There the Pontiff imparted his apostolic blessing and the ceremony performed for the 25th time in the 1,900-year history of the Roman Catholic Church, was ended.

CONSUMERS

Meanwhile, with prices on domestic markets slipping Mr. Gardiner made the announcement so that "hog producers and the packing industry may have the information before any price is established next week."

Will be Cheese Contract

He assured cheese producers there would be a cheese contract with the U.K. next year, but there was no need for urgency in completion of this agreement.

Because cheese deliveries for the 1950 season would not begin before next May, negotiation of the details of the cheese contract had been deferred until early in the New Year.

Mr. Gardiner said the U.K. may clean off the whole of Canada's cheese surplus next year—and that may run as much as 50,000,000 pounds — 20,000,000 pounds more than the U. K. took in 1949.

But the price would be lower The experts indicated that the U. K. is bidding about 26 cents a pound for cheese and Canada has offered to sell at 25—two cents lower than in 1949.

Mr. Gardiner's bacon announcement was received both quantitatively and pessimistically by spokesmen for Canadian farmers.

Contract Satisfactory

The reduction was "satisfactory" to Agriculture Minister Kennedy of Ontario. In Toronto he declared that he was "very well pleased and thankful" that Canada had a new bacon contract with U. K.

However, H. H. Hannam, President of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said Canadian hog producers will be disappointed with the floor price cut on bacon.

"With practically all costs at a peak, hog producers will be disappointed that the floor price has been cut as low as that," he said.

Mr. Gardiner said the bacon contract would be made possible through the transfer of U. K. funds from purchases of wheat.

The 1950 floor price on bacon will run only during the time it takes for the meat board to ship sufficient bacon to meet the U. K. contract, the minister declared.

After that, it may necessary to unbind restrictions against bacon supplies.

WOMAN CLAIMS

(In Hamilton, Brig. Ernest H. Green, Divisional Commander of the Salvation Army, said money from the fund has been sent through the Salvation Army's National Headquarters in Toronto to the International Headquarters in London, England, with instructions that Mrs. Irving is to be permitted to draw on it as she needs it. He believed the money was sent early enough to reach England by Christmas.

(Brig. Green said donations still are coming in. A cheque for $10 was received Thursday from a Toronto donor.)

Returned in November

Mrs. Irving returned to her parents' home here in November after Canadian doctors told her she is unlikely to live longer than 14 months. Her father and friends raised the money after her plight and her desire to return to England were made known in a broadcast. Mrs. Irving said that an airline offered free passage.

"I arrived here with only £3 left," said Mrs. Irving. "You see, I was relying on the money that was promised.

"I'm still deeply grateful to the people of Ontario for what they did and feel sure some mistake has been made in transferring the money."

She said her husband, employed as a mechanic in Hamilton, had hoped to come to England for Christmas but was unable to do so because there are "several things to be settled" in Hamilton before he can leave.

HYDRO SAVING IMPERATIVE

After midnight, December 24th., the regulations restricting the use of store window lighting enacted October 1st., 1949, again become fully effective.

The Commission wishes to thank store owners and operators for their co-operation in the past, and, at the same time, to point out that because of the sustained heavy demand for power continued rigid adherence to these regulations is essential.

Sincere thanks is also extended to all consumers who are assisting during this difficult period by conserving electricity wherever and whenever possible. However, additional savings are urgently needed at all times and particularly from 8.00 a.m. to 12 noon and 4.00 p.m. to 6.00 p.m. These savings can be effected in the home and at work by avoiding all unnecessary use of lights and electrical appliances. Industries can help during the heavy daylight demand periods by making adjustments, where possible, in their production schedules.

The Commission's ability to get through the remaining winter months without resorting to the allocation of power depends to a large extent on the willingness of consumers to voluntarily cut down on the use of electricity. Please do your full part.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

WINIFRED E. WILKINS

SNOW WHITE

Nature is so anxious to protect her children that they are frequently provided with a camouflage. Birds living in snowy surroundings are white, while dark or very light colored. Occasionally the dark ones splashes on head, wings, or tail actually assist deception, for they appear to be mere shadows in the snow.

Even in winter the Rock Ptarmigan seldom leaves home in the far north of the continent or Greenland. Therefore, at that time of year, it is pure white except for a black tail and a black bar through the eye. Sometimes when patches of earth appear, to be in keeping the white plumage becomes mixed with dark and ochre bars.

The Greenland Wheatear breeding on the eastern Arctic Islands as well as in Greenland, so seldom comes from the wintry landscape that its dress always remains the same: very pale grey above, white below, and black trimmings. For much the same reason, the Greenland Redpoll wears a similar costume though greyer because of the at least a year-round home in high northern forests. When the same colors, with the black rather greyish, the Canada Jay rarely leaves the coniferous forests.

A native of the eastern Arctic, the White Gyrfalcon's plumage is almost immaculate, though it may be given dark flecks. This bird is found in the Canadian Arctic when Nature has clad the country in white. Even the soft, diffused brown and white patterns of the Little Boreal Owl makes it practically invisible in the dim twilight its civilization in winter. At other seasons, in the coniferous forests, this plumage still causes the bird to be inconspicuous.

Only a food shortage brings the Snowy Owl south to the Canadian in winter from its Arctic home. Therefore this species is generally pure white, with occasional dusky barred with dark.

When the Snow Bunting, or Snowflake, comes south to us in winter, there are some rusty marks on but in the breeding season, which stretches northward from the sea of the Canadian lands, its white costume is relieved by just a touch of black. Another member of the Sparrow family, the Arctic Redpoll, is circumpolar, and consequently very light colored. Only irregularly in winter does it stray south to the inhabited parts of Canada. The Horned Lark, living in open country in the Arctic and also sometimes found on the islands there, is likewise pale-hued. Thus are birds living in snow covered territory given a chance of survival.

Watch your posture, warns Movie Star Betty Underwood, when you wear a late afternoon or evening dress that has an off-the-shoulder neckline.

By HELEN FOLLETT

With strapless formals still raging like a house afire, shoulders are in the limelight. If yours are neither too plump or too thin, if the skin surface is smooth, white and of good texture, you can thank your lucky stars. Beautiful shoulders are pulchritude wealth.

Carry yours with a soldierly bearing. This practice is a help in retaining the youthful attitudinette. With shoulders carried properly, with ease and grace, the chest expands, breasts are lifted, the waistline is inclined to be neat and trim. Few women ever give their shoulders a thought. They are the summit of the torso and promote balance. Check up on your posture habits. Cultivate the light step. Let your feathers drag and you won't win any beauty laurels.

The cut of the bodice has an effect upon the appearance of the shoulders. A rounded back is less noticeable if the shoulder seams slant toward the back. Collarless frocks and coats should be avoided if the upper portion of the back bulges.

Getting back to posture, a good column is the main support of the body. It has thirty-four joints that give suppleness of motion. It gives support to the head and it is held in place with innumerable muscles that — if the back is to be straight and shoulders attractive —must be strong and resilient.

Keep the head on the erect line. When it is carried low, the shoulders press forward, arms have an awkward pose, the muscles of the back become stretched and weak. Then one is in for figure trouble.

Wise mothers will teach their little daughters to carry themselves beautifully. Physicians say that round shoulders is a condition not always due to slouchy habits, but may be inherited as a characteristic family physique.

With Maggie Gone

By CAROLYN [illegible]

It was late when old Dan left the laundry where he worked, and snow fell in great flakes from the dark sky. He stopped for a moment along the street, unmindful of the eager passersby and their thoughtless jostling against him in their haste on this last night before Christmas. He lifted his face so that the soft flakes fell against his cheeks and melted in cold little drops of water that sought the deep lines sixty odd years had put there.

Snow was a part of Christmas, and after days of hesitancy it had come—just as he and Maggie had always wanted it. "Snow makes the lights seem brighter in the store windows, along the decorated streets of our little town and in our home on our tinsel-draped cedar tree. We haven't missed many Christmases, Dan, having our snow." It seemed long ago since Maggie had said that. Years, it seemed. Yet it had been only last year that they'd stood at their front window looking out at the dark sky, and Maggie'd said those words almost like a prayer.

Dan sighed and let his chin drop into the upturned collar of his overcoat and started on. He wished the snow hadn't come. With Maggie gone, he could hardly bear its soft falling of down about him. He wanted to close his eyes against its brightness with the street lights shining upon it. He wanted to close his ears against the soft music that came from radios along the streets playing Christmas carols, and "White Christmas" — the song Maggie loved best.

Christmas had come again. But for him there'd be no Christmas—not any more. There'd be only memories of other Christmases eddying about him as the swirling snow, and the plans he and Maggie'd made for this Christmas even before they'd carried out the last would pass without realization, now that Maggie wasn't there to help him carry them through.

He stopped in front of Carter's store, but minutes passed before he realized that he'd stopped there and was staring without actually seeing the array of Christmas toys behind the big plate glass window. His mind was going back. He was seeing again the glow in Maggie's face as each Christmas they'd shop together for others.

He stopped in front of Carter's store, but minutes passed before he realized that he'd stopped there.

Last year it had been the widow Benson and her six little Bensons, who would have been forgotten by Santa if they hadn't bought them gifts. Long ago they'd begun the ritual. They had no children of their own. But Maggie said, "We'll pretend that the children about us are ours." And her whole life had been one of giving at Christmas.

This year they'd planned for the O'Shays. They lived in a little house down back of the old depot. "Little Billy's just four and he's never had a wagon, Dan," Maggie'd said, planning even as they trudged through the snow with their gayly wrapped gifts for the Bensons. "And little Jeep has never had a doll that can talk and go to sleep."

Dan shifted his feet, standing there in front of Carter's, and snow gathered along the stoop of his shoulders. Somewhere among Maggie's belongings was a list of the things she'd planned to buy the O'Shays. He remembered it. Each item came clear to him suddenly as the ringing of a bell, and it was as if Maggie stood by him then, warm and alive. She touched his arm and together they went into the store with its crowd of excited late shoppers.

A clerk came up to Dan. "Something, Sir?" Dan's eyes were filmed, but they were watery from age and being out in the cold wind, the clerk thought.

"Yes," Dan said. "I have a long list of things to buy."

Maggie smiled, he knew he saw her smile, and she was talking like she used to talk when they went out together to buy gifts on Christmas Eve.

"We're like a house, Dan," she said, "We can close the doors and windows and others can't tell what we have locked inside. We live to bring happiness to others and for the good that we can do."

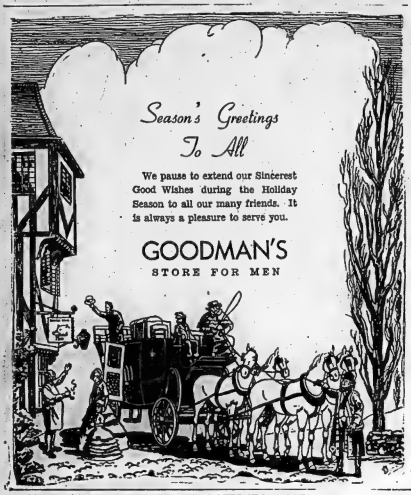
Dan looked up above packages piled high in his arms and smiled. He said to the clerk, "Merry Christmas, and now we'll be on our way."

The clerk looked strange. Old people, he thought, were queer, and he called after Dan, "Merry Christmas to you, too, sir! Merry Christmas!"

Cannon Fire Hails Christmas in Rome

A cannon fired from the historic Castle of San Angelo at sunset on Christmas Eve proclaims the beginning of the Holy Season in Rome. By nine o'clock everyone is in church to witness the colorful and solemn processions of ecclesiastic dignitaries which precede the elaborate midnight Mass.

Since everybody has fasted for twenty-four hours, festive banquets are in order after the religious solemnities. It is a gala after-midnight in Rome: hotels and restaurants remain open, families and friends gather around sumptuous tables in gaily decorated homes; and in anticipation of the festivities, many people attend church dressed in formal attire.



Between Christmas and Epiphany, the Calabrian Shepherds—Pifferari — revisit the homes where they were most cordially welcomed during Advent when they came down from the hills to play their Italian bagpipes before the shrines of the Virgin. The Pifferari play for their Advent hosts during the post-Christmas holidays and receive gifts of wine, dried figs, and small sums of money from their hosts.

The story of how St. Nicholas became associated with secret gift-giving, and even today comes covertly at night to leave his presents, is one of the most important in the history of his life.

Once upon a time there was a man with three daughters, all of them wishing to marry, but with no dowry forthcoming. Sorry, indeed, was their plight. Their father had about decided to sell them as slaves, but the good St. Nicholas heard of it, and filling a purse with gold, went quietly by night to their home. Seeing a window open, he threw in the bag of gold and then stole away in the night. This money enabled the eldest daughter to marry. A second and a third time St. Nicholas made the trip and finally all three daughters were married.

After the Saint's third trip, the girls' father, who had been watching to see who brought the gifts, ran after St. Nicholas and thanked him for his kindness. St. Nicholas made his promise not to divulge his gift-giving and after that he always deposited his presents so secretly that no one ever saw him. Yet people knew, somehow, that it was he who brought gifts during the night, and so whenever they found a package mysteriously delivered they instantly exclaimed, "St. Nicholas has brought it!"

On New Year's Day

By JESSIE WEST

Amy looked out at the bright day and was about to decide it was the loveliest New Year's Eve she'd seen in years when she saw Clarabelle Carter crossing the street; and then she thought the day wasn't lovely at all.

She could hear Clarabelle talking to Mille as she had that day in the store when she'd been standing behind shelves lined with groceries deliberately eavesdropping.

"I do declare, it does look like Amy Wells could get someone," Clarabelle had said. "I suppose she'll die an old maid."

Clarabelle hadn't said anything degrading of course. But from that moment forward, Amy had wondered if people generally didn't assume that old maids just couldn't find any takers.

She took her eyes from the window and Clarabelle going down the street to look at her reflection in the dresser mirror. At almost forty-five, she didn't think she was being egotical in appraising herself as actually looking thirty-five. She had very little gray in her dark hair, and the faint lines on her face were unnoticeable against the startling blue of her eyes and general prettiness of her features.

There'd been a time when she relegated as the most popular girl in Obane; she'd been pictured in the college year-book as "the girl all men want but only one can have."

Of course, Clarabelle and the populace of Donovan, a little town of three thousand, didn't know these things.

Amy looked out the window again, and not seeing Clarabelle on the street now, the day resumed some of the brightness that Clarabelle's presence had blighted, and she got to thinking about a trip that 20 years ago had been scheduled for tomorrow. Memory of the tryst had come to her with the approach of another New Year, but she had not planned to enact a promise that years of separation had cast into youth's frivolous dreaming, disappointment and temperamental pride. Yet, seeing Clarabelle and remembering what she'd said about her somehow filled her with unexpected sentiment.

She had nowhere to go on New Year's Day, and thought of the trip suddenly became entrancing. It would be emotionally uplifting to go back to the old haunts, and no one would know of her foolish living just for a day among memories of a past that through her own foolhardy pride, had led her into the present state of lonely friendlessness.

"If anything ever separates us," Lance had said that night long ago, "it'd be fun just to meet again, sort of a tryst affair, 20 years hence. Maybe in Park Rendezvous where we first met . . ."

They'd talked like that often, then laughed — because they knew they'd never separate. Someday they'd marry. But they didn't marry. Too soon a trivial misunderstanding had risen between them, and she'd had too much pride to admit that she'd been a little wrong, too.

she was startled when someone stood at her shoulder suddenly.

It was almost noon when Amy reached the Park Rendezvous at Obane on New Year's Day. She'd have lunch, she decided, then visit about town. But already she was sensing regret for having made the trip. You couldn't live in the past even for a day without returning to the present with greater pain. How well she knew it now!

She was startled when someone stood at her shoulder suddenly.

"Hello," he said.

Amy's heart fluttered in recognizing his voice. She ooked up.

"Why, Lance—!" It was all she could manage.

He sat by her at the table and covered her hand with his.

"Looks like we both remembered," he said, chuckling happily.

"But, you married, Lance, I heard." She couldn't help saying it.

"That was false news, dear," he said. "Do you think—but you surely know now! I tried to find you, Amy, but I lost all trace of you."

Amy laughed and her cheeks colored. "I wouldn't have come today," she said wistfully, "but for for a person named Clarabelle . . ."

"Clarabelle!"

Amy nodded. "It's a queer little story, Lance," she said, and then she wondered with a little gloating, what Clarabelle, and all of Donovan for that matter, would think when they heard!

Pagan Rites Basis Of Many Customs

Strange as it may seem, most American Christmas customs stem largely from Pagan rites practiced long before the birth of Christ.

The custom of exchanging gifts is one of the few that springs from the Christian era. Christmas candles, bonfires and Yule logs arise from the heathen festivals observing the winter solstice, December 21, when the days begin to lengthen. That was a time of great rejoicing for ancient sun worshippers who built bonfires to give strength to the "winter sungod."

Pre-Christian Romans ornamented their homes with green boughs and flowers for the Feast of Saturnalia which began December 19. Druids gathered mistletoe for that season, while ancient Saxons used holly, ivy and bay. Modern mistletoe and holly wreaths come from those peoples.

Christmas trees, too, spring from the ancient German days when Germanic tribes made sacrifices to the sacred oak tree of Odin. When the missionary St. Boniface travelled to Germany in the Eighth Century and saw these celebrations he persuaded the natives to substitute a fir tree for the oak and to adorn it in a tribute to the Christ Child.

During the Middle Ages the entire Christmas season was celebrated in equal fervor with that now shown on Christmas Day, in some lands the celebration lasted from December 24 to January 6—Twelfth Night — and in others from December 21 to February 2. By the year 1644, Christmas in England had become such a wild orgy that the Puritans forbade its celebration by law.

Some Safety Rules For Holiday Season

It only takes a small amount of carelessness to turn the joyful Christmas holiday into a tragic event. The Christmas tree is the danger spot. There are a few simple precautions that will assure a safe and merry Christmas.

Never burn real candles on your tree.

Don't risk using frayed cords and broken plugs.

Avoid placing powerful lamp bulbs near fancy ornaments, synthetic materials, paper or cotton.

Don't go away and leave your tree lighted.

Be very careful when smoking around Christmas package wrapping material.

"Belleville's Largest Insurance Office"

BY WILLIAM TREMON

Every day for a week old Oliver had been passing their house in his wagon loaded with pine and cedar trees.

"Christmas trees cheap!" he shouted, "Christmas tr-e-e-s—two dollars. On-l-y-y two dollars . . . "

He was passing now, and Marge, washing the few dishes she and Denny had soiled at their noonday meal, wished she couldn't hear the sound of his shouting voice.

Joe always bought old Oliver's trees. "Old Oliver needs the money," he'd say. "And our old car just wouldn't take the bumps of a hunt for a tree in the country around here."

Old Oliver hesitated in front of the little house, repeating his chant until Marge thought she must go to the door and tell him to stop. She and Joe had explained to him the first time they'd bought a tree just the kind they liked. It had to be a cedar with clusters of blue berries on it. Old Oliver always had the kind of tree they wanted.

Little Denny ran into the kitchen from the front room.

"Mommy, there's ol' Oliver," he said. "Mommy, he has our tree . . . "

Marge dried her hands and knelt to gather little Denny in her arms.

"I know he has, dear," she said, making herself look at him. Since last January when the horrible car accident had taken Joe away from her, she'd had difficulty in looking at Denny. Denny had Joe's rumpled dark hair, his dark eyes, the deep cleft in his chin. A sob caught in Marge's throat. "Denny dear," she said thickly,

"Denny dear," she said thickly. "we're not going to have a tree this Christmas, Daddy isn't here to help decorate it, and besides—Santa will come without a Christmas tree."

"we're not going to have a tree this Christmas, Daddy isn't her to help decorate it, and besides—Santa will come without a Christmas tree."

"I'll help decorate it," Denny said. "I did last year."

Marge pressed Denny close. "I know, dear," she said. Poignant memories of last Christmas crowded her so that she couldn't talk for a moment. She could see Joe teetering on the ladder to put the star in the top of the tree.

"I can help, Mommy . . . " Denny insisted.

"You could, dear, but we don't want a tree with Daddy gone. Someday, dear, — oh, I hope it never comes to you — you'll understand why Mommy didn't want a Christmas tree!" She rose to her feet hurriedly feeling a rush of tears. "I'll get your wraps, Denny, and you can play outside in the snow for awhile."

Shadows lengthened in the little house before it came to Marge with frightening realization that it had been all of three hours since Denny'd left the house.

"Denny — Denny!" she ran out on the porch and down the steps, her slim unprotected feet and legs sinking into the deep snow that had banked there. "Denny—!" The echo of her voice came back to her in mocking horror across the white stillness of the little yard.

A cold wind swept against her as she stood at the gate looking up and down the street and calling Denny's name. It was a horrible moment, one in which she knew she must have aged twenty years, and one in which she saw in heart wrenching clarity her unfairness to Denny in harboring a self-centred grief over her loss of Joe to the extent of his safety, his protection, his veritable happiness.

A families wagon made the turn at the end of the street, and Marge recognized old Oliver and his load of Christmas trees. His chant rang out again, "Buy your Christmas tree now! On-l-y two dollars . . . "

Marge shrieked against the wind, "Oh, don't — please don't!" Then she saw Denny — little brown garbed Denny sitting up in the seat by old Oliver!

The wagon stopped by the gate, and old Oliver grinned as Denny climbed down into Marge's reaching arms. "He likka th' ride. He . . . "

Marge didn't give him a chance to talk. "Do you have our tree, Oliver?" she asked.

Old Oliver chuckled and jumped down from the wagon. "All's week I've had your tree," he said.

"Just put it in the yard," Marge told him. "Why, Denny and I couldn't do without our tree!"

Flowers Are Part Of Yule Legends

There are several flowers appropriate during the Yuletide season which are connected with the birth of Christ by the legends of history.

Sainfoin, or "Holy Hay," is said to have cradled the infant Christ in the manger. The snowdrop is the flower of the Virgin Mary, and is said to be the emblem of the candles she lighted on Christmas.

According to legend, the Christmas rose was divinely created. A shepherd maid wept at having no gift to lay before the Babe in the manger. Suddenly an angel appeared to her. On hearing why the maiden wept, the angel touched the ground where her tears had fallen and immediately the place was white with Christmas roses, which the maid gathered and laid in the manger.

The chrysanthemum is said to have appeared first on Christmas Eve near the manger as a sign to the Wise Men that they had reached the spot where the star had bidden them.

Pine Cone Legend

Once upon a time— according to Harz mountain legend—a poor miner's wife was gathering pine cones in the forest. It was just before Christmas, her husband was ill, and there was no money in the house for food. So, she gathered the pine cones and sold them to the villagers for kindling — obtaining enough for the day's necessities.

One morning while she was looking for such cones, a little imp jumped out of a huge fir tree.

"Here, here are the biggest, driest cones of all! Take these," he shrieked, jumping up and down excitedly.

Suddenly, there was such a shower of cones that the poor woman was frightened. She tried to run away, but could not move until the little imp had filled her basket. And, having started home, the basket grew heavier and heavier — she wished the elf hadn't disappeared, he might have helped her.

When she finally reached her hut, she called the children to help carry the basket inside. Emptying the basket, they found that every cone was made of solid silver.

Commemorating this legendary silver cones, gilded pine cones are sold in modern stores, to decorate our homes — to burn and crackle gaily in our Christmas fires.

Parents Can Spoil Children's Play

Here's a Christmas resolution for parents. It's one that ought to be made before New Year's resolutions are even considered. It goes, "I will keep my hands off the children's toys all day on Christmas."

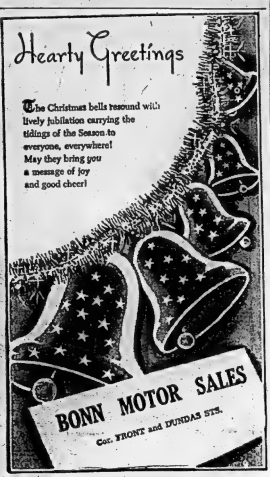
It'll be a hard one to keep because Mother likes to fuss with Ann's doll. She pretends she is showing Ann how to put on the bonnet, but she's actually having a grand time playing. And once Father gets his hands on the train, or the auto that winds up, the boys can't get near them.

It isn't fair. The children are crying for a little peace and freedom. After all, adults can play with toys for the next 364 days if they want to.

Christmas Music By Bach, Handel

For a great many people the music of Bach and Handel make difficult listening — until Christmas comes around. Then, suddenly, everybody starts singing and humming tunes by the two old masters.

The reason for this is that both Bach and Handel were church musicians. One of their tasks was to compose songs for church congregation to sing. They proved themselves masters of beautiful, easily followed melodies in their Christmas music. Our most famous Christmas oratorios and carols come from Bach and Handel.



"How Brightly Beams the Morning Star" was composed by Bach and his "Christmas Oratorio" contains the themes of several other popular chorales.

In almost every town and village in America this Christmas a church choir will render at least a portion of George Frederick Handel's title "Messiah." When carolers sing "Joy to the World" they'll be singing part of the "Messiah" too, for that carol comes from themes found in the great oratorio, Handel also composed the musical themes of "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks."

It is a strange fact, but both Bach and Handel were born in 1685, lived for many years within thirty miles of each other, and never met. Yet today, the Christmas music they wrote is sung by men, women and children in countless churches of many faiths all over the world.

SOMEONE AT CHRISTMAS

By CARLE FRIEMAN

The little gift shop was crowded when Nancy entered it, but almost immediately she noticed Larry Bryant. She sensed the casual disinterance at sight of him, and recalling the trend of her thoughts for the past several minutes brought a flush of warmth to her cheeks. She'd been thinking, somewhat recentfully, as she went along the busy streets of the little town, how unfair it was that Christmas had come before she could get acquainted with someone in Davenshire — Larry Bryant, for instance, departmental head at the electric plant where she worked. Christmas wasn't Christmas unless it could be shared with someone.

And now Larry was standing at the dish counter deciding about a pair of little green rabbit salt and pepper shakers. It didn't matter particularly that he'd buy the shakers — aside from the significance of such an act—but she'd had her own heart set on them more or less for, a week. Larry had been in the shop every afternoon that she'd been there, but this was his first time at the dish counter. The little shakers were as good as gone.

The other day when she'd looked at them, the sales girl had said, "Better buy them. These are the last ones, and they are a bargain at eight dollars. They came all the way from Sweden."

"I know—" Nancy had said, but she had thought they'd be an extravagance and look out of place on the little table in her corner kitchenette at Lil Ransom's old rooming house. Then there'd be no one to admire the — only herself.

"They might be gone the next time you come," the girl had said when Nancy left the counter.

But they'd been there the next time Nancy went back to the little gift shop. Every afternoon for a week they'd been there, as if awaiting for her to make up her mind to buy them.

The other day when she'd looked at them, the sales girl had said, "Better buy them."

Nancy held her breath as she watched Larry from a distance. For now, she knew that if he didn't take the shakers, she'd buy them herself.

But even as Nancy watched, she saw him hand the shakers to a clerk.

She tried to push her disappointment aside and select an inexpensive little gift for one of her co-workers at the plant. Tomorrow was Christmas Eve, and the employees and officials of the plant had drawn names as part of a gift-giving program they'd planned to have about the huge, gayly decorated tree in the arched entrance.

Nancy dreaded the occasion, more so now than before. She regretted the day she'd left her home town to take a better job in Devenshire. Why hadn't she waited until after Christmas to make the change!

When the time came the next day for the program, Nancy took the gift that was handed to her and slipped from the crowd. She wouldn't be missed, she thought bitterly, as she hurried from the building. Snow fell softly about her in a gentle burst from the dark sky, and the ring of voices from the plant followed her in a kind of haunting, sad beauty.

Inside her apartment she looked down at the gayly wrapped package in her hands through a blur of tears. It was the only Christmas gift she'd receive, and it had been given only because someone had drawn her name.

She unwrapped the package, and suddenly the blur cleared to reveal the little green rabbit salt and pepper shakers with the long, saucy ears,— one up and one limping down provocatively.

Her heart thrummed in her throat. Larry had drawn her name. But the cost of the gifts they were to exchange was not to go over twenty-five cents!

Lil Ransom called up the stairs, "You're wanted on the phone, and 'tis a man."

Nancy placed the little shakers carefully on the table and turned to the door. The hum of "Silent Night" came from Lil Ransom's radio up the sweep of stairs, and Nancy found herself singing the words softly as she dashed down them, for she knew even before she heard his voice who was waiting for her on the telephone.

Have Tree Base Stand in Water

Christmas trees, like flowers, will respond to being kept with the base in the water. Here are two simple things to do if you want your tree to stay green and fresh.

Buy a tree which has been cut as recently as possible.

Cut off the end of the trunk diagonally, at least one inch above the original cut. This will expose a moist surface which will absorb water. Stand the trunk of the tree in water at once, and, if it is not to be taken into the house for several days, keep it in a cool place.

Kitchener, Dec. 24, (CP)— No inquest will be held into the death of Archie Beal, 76, found shot dead in his nearby Kingsdale home Wednesday, Chief Hilbert Scheidewitz of the Waterloo township police said today.

Fingerprints found on a revolver lying on the bed near the corpse were those of the dead man, police said.

CLEAN OUT STORE

Toronto, Dc. 24 —(CP) — Fur coats, valued at nearly $10,000 were stolen Wednesday night in two robberies in the city. A westend store was cleaned out of 43 coats valued between $7,000 and 8,000 and three coats were taken from a mid-town apartment, valued about $1,750.

Thieves used a truck to clean out the store.

Poinsettias FOR THE Spirit of Christmas

EUPHORBIA PULCHERRIMA (POINSETTIA)

Care of Poinsettias

Protect the Poinsettia from draft, keeping it in a temperature of seventy degrees in the daytime and not more than sixty-five at night. Water twice a day with tepid water, not ice water from above. When it has finished blooming and begins to drop its leaves, set it aside and give it only enough water to keep it from drying out. In April, the plant may be cut back hard and repotted in a rich light soil. They are kept growing in a well lighted position and in early June are planted in the garden, where they remain until late September.

Moroccan Arab Dinner Fascinating Event

(Editor's Note: The author of this article is professor of political economy at the University of Washington in Seattle and is now visiting Europe and Africa on assignment for the United States War Department.)

BY VERNON McKENZIE

Moulay-Idriss, French Morocco . . . It had been my intention to travel, some thousands of miles on my own, through French Morocco, but by the time I arrived at Meknes, in some way about which I am not quite clear, it seems that I have acquired a bi-lingual Arab driver, a Balkan dragoman, a tchaouah (messenger) and a French economist. The last three have decided they would like to come along for the ride.

Immediately on reaching Meknes, Commandant Thabault, chief controller of the Zaghoun district, not me, and announced that, subject to approval, we were to be guests of Caid Bacha-nahss-ou-Brahim, at Moulay-Idriss, some 20 miles away. This city dates from the eighth century, and for several centuries since there has been an annual eight-day pilgrimage to the holy place, in honor of the founder.

No Hotels

So to dinner we went. This was the first of the eight days and I was told that Moulay-Idriss' normal population of 5,000 would quickly be swollen to some 50,000. But this begins would present no problem in hotel accommodation. For one thing, there are no hotels. Pilgrims were already setting up housekeeping in tents, or merely lay sprawling on the ground. New arrivals, in seemingly a never-ending swarm, were arriving on foot or donkey, on camel, in rickety buses and even more rickety jallopies.

I found my first Moroccan Arab dinner a fascinating social event —and problem. Nine of us gathered around a table in the main room of Bennaissa-ou-Brahim's modest palace. We sat on cushions, high enough to stretch our legs, facing a round table about 18 inches high.

The room was that of a typical well-to-do Arab and could have accommodated at least 70. Our table took up one end. The floor and walls, as is customary, were tiled in blue and white.

Ceremony Begins

The ceremony began. A bare foot man-servant brought in a basin, soap and towel. Also, a brass tea-pot filled with warm water.

I was somewhat embarrassed when he approached me first, but I took the towel and soap, and guessed that I should stretch out my hands, let the servant pour water over them, soap them, then submit them for more water pouring. I could work out that the next step was to dry my hands. Each guest performed his ablutions in grave ceremonial, and the ritual was concluded when the basin was held before the caid.

Then the food appeared. The first dish was pastella, a deep, flaky, sweetish meat pie, with the superficial appearance of a cake, about two feet in diameter. There were no knives, forks or spoons, but I had heard enough about Arab meals to know that one helps himself with his finger. But what I didn't recall was that it is good form to use only the right hand. As I started to use both, to extract a sizable hunk of the succulent-looking pie, my dragoman whispered to me that this was a faux pas.

Just then, I thought of a very important problem. How many courses would there be, so I could enjoy each one and yet gauge my consumption capacity accurately? My dragoman didn't know, Captain Thabault said he couldn't guess closely, as courses may vary from four to 14, depending on the whim of the caid and on the occasion. So I proceeded cautiously, recalling the disastrous effects which had once resulted when I first tackled a Spanish dinner of 14 courses (and compulsory seconds!) at the home of Vincente Blasco Ibanez, author of "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Arab-Style Roast Chicken

For a second course we had Arab-style roasted chicken, dipped in sauce, with lemon-flavored olives floating around the perimeter of the dish. Into this dived for and nibbled olives until I could observe the technique of man-handling chicken joints with one hand. I got up courage to break off a section of chicken (there were several in one huge container, roasted whole) and try my luck. Automatically, I started to use my left hand in the endeavor, when I noticed that my Arab host was looking at me with interest and seeming amusement. So I gave up hope of surreptitious cheating and stuck to one hand. Arab bread was passed around.

Then came a dish of mutton and egg plant — and, I was pleased to see — glasses of water. I recalled with satisfaction that Arabs are teetotallers. The generous supply of food needed a liquid to wash it down.

The next course I could not name. I was told it was a famous dish, cous-cous. It seemed to be a sort of semolina pudding, combined with boiled mutton and vegetable marrow. Somewhat surprisingly, I found it very tasty.

When this was followed by fruit, I sensed that there would be no more than five, or perhaps six, courses, and I wished that I had eaten more cous-cous. The fruit included luscious green grapes and yellow and blue fresh figs. As a side dish there were cakes with a generous core of almond paste. These, I learned, because of the flavor are called "Horn of the Gazelle."

Fragrant Tea

The dinner ended with a ceremonious serving of tea, Arab style prepared by the host at a separate small table. In a large pot he first put in tea, then boiling water. Next, he crushed into the pot green leaves which gave the tea a mint and geranium flavor. Finally, he put in what looked to me like a hunk or rock salt. I discovered that this is the form in which sugar is kept.

When Si Bennaissa handed the first glass of tea to his servant, to be passed to me, I tasted it somewhat gingerly. It was delectable. I wondered what those who take no sugar with tea would think of it.

Between courses, and even during the progress of a course, frequent washings were had to the towel. At the end of the meal the water and soap containers appeared again. At last it seemed permissible to admit that one had two hands.

Cigarettes were passed around. Twenty years ago I swore off cigarettes in favor of a pipe, but now —for the third time in two decades — I decided that it might be a discourtesy to decline: so didn't.

No Food Wasted

One thing perplexed me after every course: dishes went away from the table with no more than 10 per cent consumed from each container. What happened to the 90 per cent? Surely even wealthy Arabs wouldn't be that wasteful.

Being a curious reporter, I asked. The dragoman answered. We counted as principal guests, got the first chance at the food. Each dish then went to the next most important guests, and then to lesser guests. And so on, down the hierarchy of hospitality. Lowly members of the family took pot-luck after guests had eaten. Finally, the servants, in strict order of their status . . . I suppose the least of the menials, or maybe beggars, were permitted to scrape the bottom of the dish, or lick the platter clean!

Don't Let Death Take Your Holiday

The wreath is a traditional symbol of Christmas. In windows and on front doors of homes all over America, the bright red and green of holly will signify the joyous festivities of the holiday season.

For Christmastime should be a time of happiness. Every family looks forward to the joy and celebration that the holiday period should bring. But every year thousands of families in our country see Christmas joy turned into suffering and tragedy because of needless and preventable accidents.

The National Safety Council points out that hundreds of persons are killed and thousands more injured by accidents during the Christmas-New Year's holiday season — the year's peak accident period. The No. 1 killer is traffic, and its death toll on Christmas Day is about twice the annual daily average.

To keep death from taking your holiday — or the holiday of your loved ones — is a simple thing. It costs nothing, takes no time and requires only a little effort. It only means being aware of the extra holiday hazards and of the extra caution, common sense and courtesy needed to overcome them.

Refuse to drink if you are driving. Don't obscure your view with parcels when shopping. Wait for the light to change. Yield the right-of-way. Discard a string of Christmas tree lights with worn insulation. Throw away gift wrappings as soon as presents are opened.

These are little things — but they pay off in big holiday happiness. These little extras go a long way toward keeping the lights on in your home and the red and green holly wreath on your door.

They will preserve for you and your loved ones the joy and delight that is America at Christmas.

Charles Dickens Talks This Christmas

By MARK PRIESTLEY

"It is over 100 years since Charles Dickens wrote the Christmas Carol," said the Editor. "What a wonderful Christmas page it would make if only you could make a journey through time and interview Charles Dickens today."

"It would indeed," I agreed, and I don't pretend to know how it happened. I heard the merry bells pealing as they pealed in the olden time. I heard the happy laughter of children, young and old. Fantasy? Of course. But, believe it or not, every word in this "interview" can be found in the great novelist's speeches or writing.

"People will tell you Christmas is not what it used to be," said Mr. Dickens. "Never heed! In your room be smaller than it was, or your glass filled with reeking humanity instead of wine, put a good face on the matter — and thank God it's no worse."

"Were things as bad in your day, then?" I asked. "Did you have strikes, strikers?"

"We are groaning under the brigandage of the butcher," he added "which is being carried to that height that I foresee resistance on the part of the middle-class. As to strikes, I cannot represent myself as feeling the spirit on that all strikes are necessarily wrong," the great novelist nodded gravely, "because I do not think so. It seems to me an absolute impossibility to direct the spirit of the people until It shows itself. If they would begin to bestir themselves, in the vigorous national manner, array themselves peacefully but in vast numbers, make themselves heard like the sea, I for one should be in such a movement heart and soul."

"But what of the difficulties in your own socialist Britain?"

"Whatever is done for the comfort and advancement of the working man must be so far done by himself," Mr. Dickens insisted. "My faith in the people governing is infinitesimal; my faith in the people governed is illimitable."

Misdirected Efforts

He sighed deeply, gazing out at the garden of Gad's Hill, "I have tried to understand the heavier social injustices, and to help set them right" he said. "Oh, the ghastly absurdity of that sad labyrinth of misplaced men and misdirected things which has made England unable to find on the face of the earth an enemy one-twentieth part so potent to effect ruin and misery of her noble defenders as she has herself . . ."

"I mentioned Karl Marx, and Charles Dickens sniffed. "Setting class against class! That's the very parrot prattle we've heard so long." Then I asked Mr. Dickens whether he'd had any American visitors at Gad's Hill this year. He smiled and shook his head.

"I was asked about last Christmastime," he said, "whether an American was not at some disadvantage in England as a foreigner. The notion was so absurd to me that my gravity was quite overpowered. Enough in England to be an American to be received with the readiest respect and recognition anywhere."

"You see no strain in Anglo-American relations?"

"Points of difference there have been," he admitted. "Points of difference there are, probably always will be, between the two great peoples. But broadcast in England is sown the sentiment that those two peoples are essentially one, and that it rests with them jointly to uphold the great Anglo-Saxon race and all its achievements throughout the world.

Must Stop Russia

"You consider the atom bomb makes no difference?"

"It would be better for this globe to be riven," cried Mr. Dickens, "than that it should present the spectacle of these two nations, each of which has in its own way and hour, striven so hard and successfully for freedom, ever again being arrayed one against the other. Yet I conceive that Russia must be stopped."

I could hardly believe my ears at this modernity. "But Mr. Dickens," I gasped, "just now you mentioned a broadcast."

He put on a look of distaste in the drollest way, and took a turn or two up and down.

"An public theatricala," he declared, "are so intolerably bad, the machinery is so cumbrous, the parts so ill-distributed, the managers have such large families and are so bent upon putting those families into what is theatrically known as 'first business,' not because of their aptitudes for it but because they are their families, that——"

"You'll be saying next that you go to the movies!" I exclaimed.

"I am strongly disposed to believe that there are very few debates in Parliament so important to the public welfare as a really good picture," he agreed.

Charles Dickens stopped in mid-stride. "Joe Whelks, of the New Cut, Lambeth, is not much of a reader, but will take a story that the lofty of live men and women dressed up, confiding to him their innermost secrets, in voices audible half a mile off: and Joe will unravel a story involving its entanglements, and sit there as long . . . as you have anything left to show him."

Novel Effect

"But, Mr. Dickens, you've surely never seen a movie?" I cried in bewilderment.

On the contrary. He had apparently just seen a revival of 'Caesar and Cleopatra,' and he waxed ecstatic over his experience.

"To have all those noble Romans alive before me, and walking in and out for my entertainment, instead of being the stern taskmasters they had been at school, was a most novel and delightful effect. The mingled reality and mystery of the whole show, the influence upon me of the music, the continuity, the smooth stupendous changes of glittering and brilliant scenery, were so dazzling and opened up an illimitable regions of delight that when I came out into the rainy street, I felt as if I had come from the cloud, where I had been leading a romantic life of ages, to a bawling, splashing, umbrella-struggling muddy, miserable world."

So said Charles Dickens, and the curtain of time seemed wearing thin. There was a hammering in my ears . . .

"The carpenters are absolutely maddening," I heard Mr. Dickens apologizing. "They are always at work yet never seem to do anything . . ."

My interview was slipping away. "But we were talking of Christmas," I cried in the uproar.

"Christmas!" said Mr. Dickens. "Would that Christmas lasted the whole year through, as it ought!"

A Merry Christmas

Now the noise in the room was perfectly tumultuous, for there were more children than I could count, "not forty children counting themselves as one," as Mr. Dickens said, "but every child conducting itself like forty."

"A Christmas Family Party!" cried Mr. Dickens again. "We know nothing in nature more delightful!" And he looked at me in such a kindly way from beneath his bushy eyebrows, and his hand gave his head such a comical quiff, that I laughed and forgot the world old and new and joined in the fun. A merry Christmas to us all, my dears. God bless us. God bless us all, every one.

Simple Rules for Christmas Safety

1. Use extra care for the extra holiday hazards.
2. Put the Christmas spirit of "good will" into your attitude toward drivers and pedestrians.
3. Don't let Christmas packages obstruct your vision when walking.

Don't drive if you drink — and vice versa.

4. Start in time and take it easy. Allow for winter weather and extra holiday traffic.

HOME

1. Check your home for anything that might cause an accident.
2. Keep your Christmas tree in water and away from flames.
3. Use electric tree and window lights — no lighted candles ever. Don't leave tree lights on when you are out of the room for a considerable time.
4. Check your electrical connections for faults and worn-out wires.
5. Keep flimsy Christmas decorations and wrapping away from the fireplace.

25 MISSING IN FLOOD IN CENTRAL CYPRUS

Nicosia, Cyprus, Dec. 22—(Reuters)—Twenty-five persons were missing and many more were feared drowned today in floods near the village of Asnia in Central Cyprus. Floods swept away the bus they were travelling in and their fate remains unknown.

KILLED AS FISHBOAT SMASHES INTO ROCK

Vigo, Spain, Dec. 22—(AP) The 123-ton fishing vessel Aralar smashed into a rock during a heavy fog Wednesday, killing 12 men aboard. The deaths brought to almost 100 the toll among Spanish fishermen in the last 10 days of difficult sea weather.

Britain to Face Water Famine Within 20 Years

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 23 (CP)—Despite abundant rainfall, Britain will be faced with a water famine within 20 years unless a way can be found to cut its use or build more reservoirs quickly.

A growing population, and wider public liking for modern plumbing are outpacing construction of new storage facilities. Use of water has increased 30 per cent in 10 years and already some communities are unable to satisfy all demands.

Industry and agriculture are competing with the domestic user for more water. So fast is consumption of the wet stuff soaring that engineers estimate demand in 1970 will be double what it was when the Second World War began.

The war interrupted expansion of the reservoir system. Now shortages of labor and materials make difficult the launching of a program big enough to ensure adequate supplies at the current rate of increase in consumption.

The average Briton is using 50 gallons a day. That is modest compared with some western standards. Water-short New Yorkers, for instance, use an average of 110 gallons a day in their homes.

A committee of experts designated by the Ministry of Health to look into the problem found elimination of waste the most practicable immediate solution. It estimated wastage at from three to 16 gallons per capita daily.

The experts rejected metering of water as too expensive. Instead they recommended an intensive public relations campaign to win the co-operation of consumers. It urged more research into means of detecting underground wastage and suggested industry re-use wherever possible.

The experts found a lot of British homes still getting along with antiquated plumbing. The report said:

"Despite the progress which has been made during the past 20 or 40 years there remains in industrial towns a surprisingly high percentage of houses possessing limited facilities. Many still have no more than a cold water tap and water closet."

PERFECTION IMPOSSIBLE

Wallington, Surrey, England—(CP)—The judge considered that "no one is perfect in this life." So Jennifer Herring, though she had a perfect score in the Croydon Music Festival, got only 99 marks instead of 100.

Season's Greetings

December, 1949

The pages have fallen off our calendar faster than ever this year. The brilliant sunshine on crisp snow is a reminder that Christmas and the New Year are fast approaching.

1949 has been a "jittery" type of year with rumors of depression, that didn't come; industrial unrest around the world and international frictions. We believe that unsettled conditions may well be carrying us to a better world. Men and women are more conscious of what they want from life and are giving more to get it.

By and large it has been a pretty good year. Our associations with you and your friends have been pleasant. They have been bright spots that relieve the worries and problems we all have. We hope our dealings with you have left pleasant and profitable memories.

However, we here want to send to you our warmest greetings for the holiday season and the best of good wishes for 1950.

CHRISTMAS

Avis stood inside the spacious hall of the Carron home with her small overnight bag at her feet and greeted the slim girl approaching her. "Merry Christmas, Barbara! Oh-h, it's snowing beautifully outside!" She looked down at the snow on the toes of her small white boots. "I hate to track it in," she said.

"Don't worry about that. I'm so happy you came," Barbara smiled and helped Avis remove her snow-covered garments.

"Oh, I wouldn't have missed coming for all the world." Avis said, and meant it, now that she was actually there. Her dark eyes swept the attractive, decorated home, and the inviting fire that roared about the huge logs in an immense fireplace in the room beyond.

"I hope you'll enjoy yourself, Avis," Barbara said. "My guests have not all arrived. Would you like to go up to your room first and—"

"Take the shine from my nose! Yes, thanks so much." Avis responded eagerly, knowing that she needed a few repairing touches after the long trip out to the Carron home by bus.

As she ascended the stairs she thought, how right Barbara had been when she'd told her the other day, after inviting her to her home for the weekend and a Christmas party, "You can't stay in your apartment alone on Christmas. You can't become a recluse just because some fellow preferred another girl to you. You should start all over again."

Barbara was like that. At times Avis couldn't help envying Barbara's carefree, unstable attitude toward men. Barbara would never know the sting of loneliness, the bitter yearning for someone who had become the purpose of life itself.

Avis hadn't told Barbara, nor anyone, everything about her acquaintance with Steve Ross. She hadn't even told Barbara his name. There was no point in going into detail, and revealing: "I crossed three states just to get away from the sight of him constantly with the new blonde who came to town."

Avis could hear Barbara's response to such a revelation. "No battle was ever won by an army of cowards!"

But Avis wasn't built that way. She had pride, and from observation she'd learned that one-sided marriages never panned out.

As she ran a comb through her short dark hair she thought of Steve. It had been two months since she left the little town of Allen Glen. He and Ann were married now of course. They'd spend their first Christmas together.

Her eyes filmed, but she quickly brushed aside the threat of tears and hurried from the room to join Barbara and her guests below. She was glad she'd come. She wouldn't have a chance to think of Steve.

Avis started down the stairs but stopped midway when she saw Steve Ross smiling up at her from the hall below.

He said, "I'm not a ghost, Avis! Merry Christmas, and — well, aren't you glad to see me?" He looked uncertain.

Avis moved down the stairs. "But I didn't know you knew Barbara—"

Steve reached for her hands. "Our dads were acquaintances away back," he said. "Was it quite fair for you to skip town, Avis, and not say a word about where you were going?"

"—I didn't think you'd miss me," Avis stammered.

"Miss you?" He pressed her hands. "Avis, what's that old saying about absence makes the heart grow fonder? Anyway, I've had a terrible time tracking you down, until I thought of Barbara."

"Barbara never said a word," Avis said, still amazed.

Steve chuckled. "She's a regular cupid. She told me to come tonight and explain more fully about the run-away girl I was trying to find. Then after I got here she told me to wait in the hall, there'd be a Christmas gift appear on the stairs. I suspected them, of course."

Avis laughed, and her eyes glowed as they lifted to meet Steve's. "Christmas gift indeed!" she said.

Christmas Customs and Superstitions

Strange superstitions, relics of the remote days when Britain's people were pagans, still linger in many parts of the country and are remembered at Christmas time. Here are some of them:

"Devil's Knell"

For the last 700 years, for instance, a bell, known locally as the "Devil's Knell," has tolled on Christmas Eve in the village of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, in the north of England. Local legend says that the custom was begun by a baron, who gave the bell to the parish church as a penance for killing his servant, and ordered that it should be rung every Christmas Eve to remind him of his crime. By tolling the bell once for every year since the birth of Christ, the final stroke being timed to ring at the hour of midnight, local people believed that the devil would be kept from the parish for the next twelve months.

Legend of St. Fillian's Stones

At Killin, Perthshire, Scotland, the villagers pull rushes each Christmas from a nearby stream to make a resting-place for a number of stones taken from the gables of an ancient corn-mill. They are not ordinary stones, for the villagers believe that they were used centuries ago by their patron saint, St. Fillian, to cure ague, sprains, and other ailments and injuries.

Boar's Head Feast

Queen's College, Oxford University, has a Boar's Head Feast on Christmas Day, which originated in the story of a student who was attacked by a wild boar some 500 years ago, while studying Aristotle during a walk. He killed his formidable adversary by thrusting the volume down the animal's throat. Today a papier mache head replaces the 90-pound specimen under the weight of which two attendants used to stagger in bygone days, but the spirit of the ceremony remains unchanged. As the choir sings the last notes of a traditional carol, the head is placed on the table of the Provost, the Principal of the College. The Provost then presents the ornaments and embellishments one by one to the choirboys and visitors, the solo singer receiving the orange.

Charming the Orchards"

Old Christmas Day, or Twelfth Night, has its own celebrations in Devonshire in the south of England, famous for its apple-cider, the custom of "Charming the Orchards" was handed down until almost within living memory. Local farmers and their men went to their orchards after dark on Twelfth Night, carrying guns and a great jar of cider, with a large piece of toast or cake floating in it. No gun was considered to be too old, if it was able to hold the priming, and the more noise it made the better.

When the party had reached one of the largest apple trees, the farmer addressed it while the guns were discharged. The cider was then handed round, and the sop of cake eaten, but care was taken to see that a good-sized piece was left in a fork of the tree for the robins, for if this was left undone the charm would have no effect. Finally the men returned to the farm house to drink more cider and to tell tales round the fire until morning.

Like many old superstitions, this custom was founded on a practical belief; the shot was supposed to fear the bark of the tree and to quicken the fruiting in a similar manner to the action of beating a walnut tree.

"Holly Night"

In Westmorland, in the north of England, Old Christmas Night is known as "Holly Night," or "Holling," from an annual procession which took place in the town of Brough. Here an ash or holly tree, lighted at the top of the branches to which combustible material had been tied, was carried in procession through the streets. About eight o'clock in the evening the torches were lighted and, accompanied by the town band, the tree was carried in stately procession around the town. Rockets and squibs were discharged and many of the people also carried torches and lighted branches.

Carolling Children

The "milly-box," lined with sugar and oranges and containing two small figures, which is still occasionally carried by Yorkshire children when they go carolsinging from house to house on Christmas Eve, is a relic of the ancient custom, common in the northern counties of England until the close of the last century, of carrying figures of Our Lady and the Holy Child in procession with the carol singers. The word "milly" is a corruption of "Our Lady." In Cleveland, Yorkshire, the same box is called "benself-cup" and the children who carry it say that they are going "a-wassailing" — an invitation to give them a blessing and a love.

Holy Night Weather

Country people in Britain still watch the sky on Christmas Eve

The minstrels played their Christmas tune,
Tonight beneath my cottage eaves;
While, smitten by a lofty moon,
The encircling laurels, thick with leaves,
Gave back a rich and dazzling sheen,
That overpowered their natural green.

Through hill and valley every breeze
Had sunk to rest with folded wings;
Keen was the air, but could not freeze,
Nor check the music of the strings;
So stout and hardy were the band
That scraped the chords with strenuous hand.

And who but listened? till was paid
Respect to every inmate's claim;
The greeting given, the music played
In honor of each household name,
Duly pronounced with lusty call,
And "Merry Christmas" wished to all!

—William Wordsworth

Santa Claus is one of the most precious wonders of childhood. American mothers overwhelmingly agree that he should be portrayed as the spirit of generosity, kindliness, and gift-giving.

Although the modern conception of Santa Claus is American, the Spirit of Santa Claus is neither Modern nor American. The real Saint Nicholas lived in Asia Minor and ever since his death in 343 stories concerning him have been repeated around the fireides of Europe.

The children of Lapland and northern climates naturally picture Santa dressed in fur and dashing through the snow in a reindeer-drawn sleigh. But in Central Europe, St. Nicholas first appeared on his liturgical feast day, December 6, and he was a thin, austere churchman who rode a mule and carried gifts for good children and a bundle of birch rods with which to switch the naughty.

Under Dutch influence St. Nicholas lost his solemnity. The Dutch colonists who brought him to America were very practical people and they decided against two gift-giving days in the same month. Thus, Sinter Klaas started coming around only at Christmas time.

Santa Gets a Sleigh

Eventually, ancient legends were woven into American Christmas traditions. Washington Irving sent St. Nicholas flying through Christmas skies in a reindeer-drawn sleigh in 1809; Dr. Clement Moore's poem "The Night Before Christmas," written in 1822, gave Santa " . . . a little round belly that shook when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly;" and a series of drawing in 1868 by Thomas Nast added much to the traditional pictures and appearance of the Santa we see today.

In every youngster's life there comes the time when he begins to suspect that the various bewhiskered gentlemen, so numerous during this season, are not exactly the real Santa Claus. Wise parents advance the "helper" theory as soon as they are asked questions and teach their children to in the Christmas dreams of less fortunate tots and their families come true.

Thus, the real Santa Claus isn't just myth or legend. He is the Spirit of Christmas who lives in the sparkling eyes of children and in the hearts of all grown-ups who strive for peace and good will among men.

Magi Were Priests Of Persian Religion

Along about this time of the year there's a lot written, said and sung about the Magi. Just who were the Magi, anyway?

The Magi were priests of an ancient Persian religion called Zoroastrianism. The Greek historian Herodotus gives a very favorable account of them and their influence in a society which existed four hundred years before Christ's birth.

According to Herodotus the Magi were powerful in public and private affairs. They conducted the education of the young princes, and were in constant attendance upon the king as counsellors.

This description of a Magi appears in the sacred writing of Zoroaster; "Thou shouldst call him priest, who sits the whole night thru and prays for holy wisdom that enables man to stand upon death's bridge fearless and with happy heart, the wisdom whereby he attains the holy and glorious world of paradise."

The three Magi, or Wise Men, who followed the Star of Bethlehem and brought gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh to the Christ-child remain nameless, but they were the first to recognize the importance of the birth of the Prince of Peace.

JEWELLER

(McCarthy Theatre Building)

The bell, the world's oldest and simplest musical instrument, is the world's most universal Yuletide symbol. Each nation has its individual symbols of Christmas, but the bell will be found somewhere in the traditions of every one.

Bell authorities claim that Pope Sabinianus gave us the first church bells in 604. The custom has grown, until there is no use of church bells so widely known as the ringing of the chimes to herald the advent of the birth of Christ.

In recent years the ancient bell has "grown up" into the carillon a highly sensitive instrument on which Christmas carols seem to find their most perfect expression.

We look forward each year to sharing with our many friends the brightness and good will of the holiday season.

Air Transportation Manufacturing Have Record Year

Both Industries Suffer In Post-War Shakedown

By JAMES J. STREBIG

Washington (AP) — Indications point to a second consecutive record peacetime year for both air transportation and aircraft manufacturing in the United States in 1950.

The two industries which suffered heavily in the post-war shakedown will welcome another profitable year. It should put them solidly in the black by completing recovery of their severe losses in 1946 and 1947.

But industry economists recommend some caution in appraising the new year. They say much depends upon maintaining the current high level of business activity. They warn that economy programs in the defense establishment might seriously affect aircraft builders; that accidents or a particularly long stretch of bad weather might hurt the airlines, and that taxes might affect industry.

The airlines have an estimated profit of about $55,000,000 for 1949, or 12 times the 1948 profit.

The aircraft manufacturers have a profit estimated at about $18,000,000, an increase of $2,000,000 more than 1948. Production of military planes was up substantially. Transport deliveries dropped slightly, and personal airplane deliveries were halved for the third consecutive year to a figure about one-tenth the 1946 record year.

However, the industry does 90 per cent of its business with the military and reacts more sharply to changes in military spending policies than to commercial developments.

Many Planes Made

In terms of numbers of planes, 1949 production included 2,500 military aircraft; 160 transports, and about 3,600 personal planes. The 1950 outlook is for about 2,500 military planes, 120 transports and about 3,500 of the personal craft.

Employment averaged around 218,000 persons in 1949. It probably will decline somewhat in 1950 as manufacturers anticipate the effects of setbacks in military orders for delivery in 1951 and later.

The airlines estimated domestic travel at 6,500,000,000 passenger miles, 11.6 per cent more than in 1948 and eight per cent more than the 1947 record.

Domestic airline revenues totaled about $460,000,000, a gain of 11.5 per cent.

The International Airlines estimated their revenue at $392,000,000, an increase of 17.5 per cent compared with 1948.

Chinese Army In Mass Retreat To Mountains

Hong Kong, Dec. 24 (AP) — The largest Chinese Nationalist army left on the mainland is in mass retreat toward the mountains of Sikang province, a foreigner in Chengtu reported Thursday.

A message from the Chengtu foreign source to the Associated Press here said heavy fighting raged only 10 miles from Chengtu, which was the Nationalist capital until Dec. 8.

The message said the troops, under Gen. Hu Tsung-Nan, have been streaming westward through Chengtu for weeks. Sikang province, which borders Tibet, has been chosen as the base for Nationalist guerrilla warfare.

Crew Squirms Out of Portholes In Escapes Flames

Bonlo., Dec. 24 — (AP) — Squirming out of portholes and struggling through smoke-filled companionways, 40 crew members and two stewardesses escaped in neighborhoods early Fri. as explosions and flames wrecked the middish decks of the moored Norwegian freighter, Fern Bay.

One crew member suffered burns in the blaze which caused loss estimated at "between $100,000 and $500,000."

Flames ate through the five-deck superstructure of the 10-month-old 8,000 - ton vessel. Her cargo was crude rubber and tea.

BANDITS GET $1,800

Toronto, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Two masked men, one armed with a Luger pistol, Thursday night robbed the Wellesley meat market in mid-town Toronto and escaped with $1,800 in cash and $600 in cheques.

Sam Appleton, 32, proprietor of the market said he was working late when the two men walked into the shop and ordered him to get into his office. The money and cheques were removed from a cash drawer, and Appleton was trussed to a chair before the men left, fleeing in a car.

WHISKY-MAKERS SEE LITTLE HOPE OF MORE CUTS

Bourbons and Ryes Back in Volume

By JACK R. RYAN

New York (AP) — Normal lively competition returned to the United States distillery industry in 1949. But it brought few liquor price reductions and the whisky-makers see little hope of more cuts in the year to come.

It was the coming to age of the post-war whisky stocks which sparked the revived competition. Many millions of gallons stored away for aging in 1945-46 after distillers had devoted more than 1,500 years to war alcohol—became four years old and ready for market.

For the man who likes a nip now and then, maturing of those stocks meant that straight bourbons and ryes were back on the market, as were Scotch, Canadian brands, which had all but vanished during the war in favor of blends combining whiskies with neutral spirits, returned to the fight for the consumer's dollar.

The public has been slowly switching from the blended whisky which outsold the blends before the war. This shift will continue in 1950, but it's unlikely to be extensive, says Arthur D. Straight, president of Park and Tilford, importers, which produces both varieties of all leading types.

Americans drank about 172,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits during 1949. That estimated consumption is up 10 million gallons, more than 1948. And it's far less than the record year 1948 when the jubilant post-war country, with plenty of money to spend and consumer goods still scarce, downed 231,000,000 gallons.

Taxes are High.

Liquor-makers insist prices can't be trimmed much with liquor taxes what they are.

They say their basic prices on many brands have not been raised—except to include new taxes—since before the war. Yet their own costs for labor, cooperage, warehousing, packaging, advertising and insurance have soared.

Consumption of Scotch eased slightly in 1949, partly because United States distillers have held off buying, half-expecting import prices would be lowered following devaluation of the pound sterling (it wasn't.)

The National Association of Alcoholic Beverage Importers says sales of Canadian whisky are expected to show gains, however. So are French and Italian champagnes and sparkling wines, Italian table wines, French and Spanish cordials and brandies, and British and Dutch gins. European currency devaluation already has meant lower consumer prices for many of these items.

Two Children Die Under Dirt

Wichita Falls, Tex., Dec. 24— (AP) — Two five-year-old boys died Thursday under dirt and debris apparently pushed over them by a bulldozer they played in a shallow gully.

A forlorn dog, playmate of the boys, led to the discovery of Billy Rogers and Donnie Tolton and ended a five-hour search by hundreds along the banks of the Wichita River.

The bulldozer was owned by Billy's father.

Victoria 36th Municipality In Canada With City Manager

Victoria, B.C., Dec. 24 (CP)— Early in the new year, this capital city of British Columbia will become the 36th municipality in Canada with a city-manager form of city government.

At the civic elections Dec. 8 electors in this city of 62,000 voted 6,744 to 1,691 for a city manager. City Council promptly passed a by-law ratifying the vote and called for applications for the job by Jan. 22.

Victoria will be the first B.C. city to have a city manager. Elsewhere in Canada, the system is most popular in Quebec where 30 cities and towns have managers including the city of Quebec. New Brunswick has four, Saint John and Woodstock; Ontario two, Niagara Falls and Chatham; and Alberta one, Lethbridge. Latest available figures show 111 cities in the United States with city managers. One of the largest is Cincinnati, a city of 455,000, a pioneer in this form of city government under which the manager administers policy laid down by council.

The campaign for a city manager in Victoria began in 1938 when voters rejected the system 2,592 to 1,938. In that year John Dean ran for mayor on a city-manager platform and met decisive defeat. Talk of a manager arose again when cost of an by-law. This shift will continue in 1950, but it's unlikely to be extensive, says Arthur D. Straight, president of Park and Tilford, importers, which produces both varieties of all leading types.

Americans drank about 172,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits during 1949. That estimated consumption is up 10 million gallons, more than 1948. Taxes are High.

Liquor-makers insist prices can't be trimmed much with liquor taxes what they are.

They say their basis prices on many brands have not been raised—except to include new taxes—since before the war. Yet their own costs for labor, cooperage, warehousing, packaging, advertising and insurance have soared.

Consumption of Scotch eased slightly in 1949, partly because United States distillers held off buying, half-expecting import prices would be lowered following devaluation of the pound sterling (it wasn't.)

The National association of Alcoholic Beverage Importers says sales of Canadian whisky are expected to show gains, however. So are French and Italian champagnes and sparkling wines, Italian table wines, French and Spanish cordials and brandies, and British and Dutch gins. European currency devaluation already has meant lower consumer prices for many of these items.

Briton Wounded By Unknown Man At Bratislava

Prague, Dec. 23 (Reuters) — An unknown assailant Thursday night shot the director of the British Institute at Bratislava, Donald Brander, at his home, it was reported today. First accounts of the shooting said Brander's injuries were "not too serious."

Surgeons operated on Brander in a Bratislava hospital Thursday night. One of his wounds were in the thigh and one in the hand. Two of the bullets were removed and he was said to be "resting comfortably."

He was able to give full information to the Bratislava police and they began a hunt for the unknown man who entered the bungalow, where Brander lives with his wife and two children, about 8:30 P.M. and fired the shots.

Officials at the British embassy in Prague said today there was no reason to believe there was anything involved in the attack other than an armed robbery.

Brander has been director of the British Institute at Bratislava Institute for 3½ years.

Brander is in his early 40s.

Trade Talks End As Briton Held In Hungary

London, Dec. 24 (AP) — British trade talks with Hungary on financial talks with Hungary broke up suddenly Saturday as follow a British consul-general in see a Briton arrested in Budapest a spy.

The foreign office announced Friday that the month-long talks were suspended last Monday.

The Briton concerned is Edgar Sanders. Along with Robert C. Vogeler, an American, he was arrested in Budapest Nov. 22 on charges of espionage. Both Vogeler and Sanders are officials of the American-owned International Telephone Company, of New York.

The request to see Sanders was refused formally Nov. 30 and subsequent British requests—have been rejected since.

The trade talks between the British and Hungarians were discussed would have involved an annual trade exchange of about £6,000,000 ($18,000,000).

PATCH OF DANDELIONS

NO CANCELLATION OF AIR CONTRACT EXPECTED SOON

Canada Will Await Conclusion of US Talks

Ottawa, Dec. 24—(CP)—An External Affairs Department spokesman said Friday he would "be very surprised" if Canada's Air Transport Board takes any action to cancel Colonial Air Lines' licence before Canadian-American inter-governmental air agreement talks are concluded.

The talks have been adjourned, probably until January. The Board reserved decision last week after challenging Colonial to show cause why its licence to fly into Montreal from New York should not be cancelled for staying unfulfilment of the agreement signed June 4 by the two countries.

Made Impressive Case

The official said the American delegation to the talks had "made quite an impressive legal case" in challenging the air transport board's action in rebuking Colonial, American Air Line. They argued that under the agreement no such Canadian authority has the right to suspend an American Air Line flying into Canada because of action it took in the U.S. courts.

The Americans had argued that evidence given in the U.S. courts —Colonial has challenged the U.S. Government's right to use courts—could not be used by a Canadian administrative body such as the A.T.B. in taking action against an American line.

Evidence given before the board at its Colonial hearing consists of evidence produced in U.S. hearings. Board counsel argued then that this established that Colonial has engaged in "procedural delays" which violate the agreement.

Do Not Accept Stand

The spokesman said the Canadian group at the talks did not accept the U.S. stand and maintained that the board can take any action it sees fit involving a Canadian licence under any powers.

"But," he said, "we want to study their stand further if we possible that the board itself would want to study it carefully. The government felt it would be "unfortunate" if Canada, through the board, took action which the U.S. might challenge as being outside the agreement. This could lead to use of a section in the agreement which provides for special arbitration of disputes with a neutral chairman presiding.

The spokesman said the American government has taken the view that Canada, in signing the agreement, must accept the consequences of the U.S. constitution. This is under Colonial's challenge of the agreement. The U.S. Supreme Court struck down rule in a few months on the challenge and that was not too long for Canada to wait.

REMOVAL COST RISES

Peterborough, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Fred Robinson, local contractor, must have thought he was getting a bargain when he bought a house for $500. However, the three-storey house had to be moved from behind a dairy to make way for a business location. When he had it moving it to a new site was completed, the most of the moving ran into four figures.

Christians May be United in Struggle Against Redism

Pope Pius May Make Move In 1950 Toward This End

By DON GILBERT

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 24 (CP)— Approach of Holy Year has stirred interest in Britain in the possibility that Pope Pius will make a move in 1950 toward uniting Christians in a struggle against Soviet Communism.

A special article in The Times said: "There is widespread hope that Rome will make a gesture to the Christian world in keeping with the realities of the hour." Publication of the article has brought sacks of letters to The Times. Anglican bishops, Catholic priests and intellectuals, laymen of all denominations aired their views on whether a rapprochment is possible, or desirable, between the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches.

Many thought that if agreement on dogma and worship were out of question, at least a united front could be formed on political and moral matters such as the Soviet threat to christianity in Eastern Europe.

"The struggle against Marxian paganism, in which the Roman church has given an unequivocal a lead, is creating a common Christian sympathy," said The Times article. "It is the duty of all to support the view that the time now is ripe for re-examining the relations between Rome and the other Christian bodies."

Public Opinion.

In a subsequent editorial summing up the exchange of views The Times said the volume of correspondence "shows how deeply public opinion is engaged by these questions."

Justification for the discussion The Times said, could be found in the fact the Roman Catholic church is being fiercely persecuted in many countries and "behind the iron curtain it provides the only organized representation of the western tradition in thought and morals."

To members of the Anglo-Catholic or "high church" wing of the Anglicans, the debate revived memories of the conversations at Malines during the early 1920s, when the late Cardinal Mercier of Belgium and the late Viscount Halifax sponsored exploratory talks on healing the wounds of the Reformation.

Many Anglicans considered that Pope Pius XI closed the door to reconciliation when he issued his 1928 encyclical "Mortalium Animos." This view was countered by the current exchange of opinion by Robert Sencourt, Catholic writer, who went on

Ready to Co-operate

"The Roman Catholic church not only recognizes good in other Christian bodies, but is ready to co-operate in good works . . . in short, the way is open to resume conversations as at Malines and to enlarge their scope."

One of the most widely-discussed proposals came from a Benedictine Father, Rev. Columba Cary-Elwes of Ampleforth Abbey, York. Dom Columba urged:

1. Joint action by the churches on political and kindred issues.

2. Meetings between representative Roman Catholics and Anglo-Catholics to discuss ways and means of achieving "the great return, not by ways of bargaining but by that of understanding."

To Very Rev. Arthur Duncan-Jones, Anglican dean of Chichester, the correspondence revealed "a more widespread desire for Christian co-operation on the part of Roman Catholics than some would have suspected."

Christmas Messages Are Exchanged by the President, Pontiff

Washington, Dec. 24—(AP) — President Truman told Pope Pius XII that mankind looks to the United States "gladly rededicates its efforts to the creation of a peaceful and prosperous world order."

The Pontiff said in reply:

"We invoke the light, assistance and blessing of the Christ Child upon Your Excellency's person and work, as well as upon all your fellow citizens, who courageously strive to find and follow the road leading to a peaceful future for mankind."

The White House today made public the exchange of message

Santa Declares War on North Pole

By PETER DAVIS

Do you believe in Santa Claus? At all events, all properly stamped letters to Santa Claus are duly forwarded. Before the war such letters were either destroyed or returned to sender but then the United States Post Office pointed out that there is really a Santa Claus — a little hamlet with that name in Indiana.

Today over 5,000,000 letters and parcels flood through the tin-roofed extension to the post office in Santa Claus' little general store. Nearly all the 60 inhabitants earn overtime as seasonal postal workers and Postmaster Wally van Winkle — no known relative to Rip of the same name —rubs his hands briskly as he adds up his extra sales commission.

Flood of Letters

It all began when his predecessor, Postmaster Oscar Phillips, began wondering what he could do about the annual flood of letters from children and asked government permission to pass them on to charitable organization and American Legion posts.

"These youngsters believe in Santa Claus, so it's up to me to get their letters to him," he explained.

Entering into the Christmas spirit, the government agreed. Twenty other states who tried to set up rival Santas were subsequently refused, By Act of Congress, Santa Claus, Ind., has the only post office permitted the title and by the same Act the village name can never be changed. In Post Office records, Wally van Winkle is officially listed as "Acting Chief Santa of Santa Claus."

Scenting a novelty, a New York store offered to have its Christmas cards postmarked Santa Claus as a special service. The idea caught on and was widely copied. Ten months of the year, sleepy Santa is an agricultural community with scarcely 20 letters a day. In November big mail trucks rumble back and forth, the U.S. Post Office department sends special cancelling machines and the rush begins.

Re-directing children's letters is now a minor detail in the yuletide task of re-mailing millions of letters and cards for grown-ups. A Chicago department store sends cards for re-mailing in batches of 10,000 at a time. The cards arrive by the crate-load, each card with its envelope ready stamped for cancellation with the Santa Claus post-mark, which includes a tiny picture of Father Christmas.

Heads New Business

Despite austerity, even English people can send their greeting cards on the long route via Santa Claus by enclosing return postage coupons. In America, thanks to a sentimental quirk, more, and more people are buying their Christmas gifts from Santa Claus —and so Wally van Winkle now also heads a flourishing mail-order business.

The appeal is obvious. Yet Santa Claus today is fighting a rival. North Pole, Alaska, has joined in the yuletide goldrush. A Brooklyn kiddy made the mistake of writing to Santa Claus in care of North Pole, Alaska, and the letter was passed to a radio executive in Fairbanks. He was so touched by the child's appeal, that he sent gift and then staged a meeting of philanthropic business men to ask why a real North Pole shouldn't be founded.

Map Out Town

Six miles north of Fairbanks they bought 80 acres of frozen land and built six houses and a reindeer stable. On paper they've mapped out a future town built around a statue of Santa close to a giant toy-market. Unlike Indiana's Santa Claus, the organizers vow they will never sell, trade or commercialize the town. A Santa Claus trust fund for buying toys has been deposited with the Bank of Fairbanks and 200,000 gifts to needy children will soon be organized by this non-profit venture.

"Last year the new townsfolk of little North Pole obtained the names and addresses of thousands of children and sent each a hand-written letter signed "Santa Claus." With a Fairbanks postmark, a stamped note indicated that the letter was sent via North Pole.

The work was farmed out throughout the Fairbanks region. Cars were mobilized to take envelopes and notepaper to housewives, in the long Alaskan winter northern mothers found that Christmas gave them something to do. Annoyed at the hint of competition, however, Wally van Winkle is post-marking many letters this year, "From the Original Santa Claus."

PREMIER MACDONALD SAID SOON TO RETIRE

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 23—(CP)—The Sydney Post-Record today quotes "informed sources" as saying that Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia will retire from politics after the next session of the Nova Scotia legislature. The newspaper added that Mr. Macdonald, 59, would be appointed to the Supreme Court of Canada and would be succeeded by Attorney - General Malcolm Patterson.

Both schools in massed formation sang "Sleigh Bells Ringing" and "Rudolph"; and both schools gave a presentation of "Why the Chimes Rang" in three acts. When the special gift for the Christ child came to the altar then the chimes rang out.

Recitations were given by Rasburn Scott; Cail Jeffs; Ray Spencer and David Potts.

Misses Lola and Marilyn McConnell sang, "Don't Wait Till Christmas to be Good" with Miss Betty McConnell, as pianist.

Eight girls of the Williams school presenrd a very pretty rose drill; while the Allan school presented a short play "The Truth Telling Machine" and dialogue, "Grandfather's Visit" was given by the William's school.

The program closed with two choruses, "Santa Claus is Coming" and "Merry Christmas".

Special thanks was tendered the two teachers and both spoke briefly, thanking all for their co-operation.

Santa Claus arrived with treats for all the children, and helped to distribute the gifts.

The children had an enjoyable evening with lots of various gifts. The proceeds was over $51.00.

A Very Merry Christmas

They Sell Lingerie to the Eskimos

By MARK PRIESTLEY

Fifty - three - year - old Philip Crester started work at 14 in a Derbyshire lace-mill. By dint of ambitious striving and study into the long hours of the night, he became a chartered accountant. Today he is the acting chieftain of Britain's biggest, brikest, oldest and most Christmassy exporting company.

Among other enterprises, he runs a trading post within 700 miles of the North Pole, complete with a modern four-bedroomed house for the trader's wife; controls two dozen oilwells in Alberta; sells violins to Indians and wins a startling $100,000,000 worth of business every year.

Granted Charter in 1670

The Hudson's Bay Company — or to give its full stirring title, the Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay — was granted its charter by King Charles II in 1670. But it's just 300 years since the two founders of the company of shrewd fortune-hunters rudely known to posterity as Radishes and Gooseberry, first began swapping furs along those frozen shores.

They risked death by starvation and massacre by Indians but they held a trading post against all comers. Then the royal charter gave the Adventurers a trading monopoly which was long since abolished. In 1859 1,500,000 square miles of land territories held under the charter were surrendered to the Infant Dominion of Canada in exchange for 10,000 square miles and a £300,000 cash. Yet today, spry and vigorous, the Bay Company is 330 years young.

Nor is it solely a snow-bound Arctic concern. To be sure, the Company still handles the bulk of the world's fur sales and sold 2,000,000 raw skins in London this year. Thirty of its 230 trading posts lie in the Arctic itself. Its schooners, sealers and ice-breakers annually sail 60,000 miles through the ice-floes and the Company trades overland into the far north with everything from airplanes to dog-teams. But that's just the beginning.

Bosata First Shipment

The H.B.C. boasts that it sent the first shipment of lingerie to the Eskimos at Aklavik on the shores of the Arctic Ocean. The local store manager had his misgivings but the merchandise manager maintained that Mrs. O'Grady and the Eskimo's lady are sisters under the sealskins.

Both departments were partly right. The Eskimo women snapped up the chemises but thought them much too pretty for underwear. They wore them on top of their usual clothes.

They have now learned better. They even buy perfume. The H.B.C. hasn't yet sold ice-boxes to Eskimos but it sells refrigerators at its department store in chilly Yellowknife, where incidentally it boosted its gross sales to $1,000,000 last year by staging a mannequin parade of New Look fashions. Zestful for such experiments, the Company has even tried selling aluminum canoes to Indians.

Admittedly, they were not too successful. "Too noisy" the braves reported. Or, the other hand, the Eskimo fashions his igloo with a Hudson's Bay snow knife, the James Bay Indians spend their treaty money on cowboy records and the Company bakes its own bread, makes its own ice-cream and pasteurizes Arctic milk.

Queer Quirk

Similarly, the "Bay Co" struck a strange quirk in native mind when it started selling machine-made moccasins. A shoe machine company couldn't keep pace with the demand. So the astute Company buys hand-sewn moccasins from a tribe of Indians in British Columbia and retails them to tribes in Labrador.

It learned this trick when purchasing dereliction from Eskimos in Hudson's Bay and selling them to natives along Baffin Bay 2,000 miles away. The old Scottish servants of the Company had no eye on long-term dividends when they taught the natives to saw out a tune on the fiddle. But violins, banjos and ukuleles are still among its steady selling lines.

Every year, too, on behalf of King George, the Bay Company pays out baby allowances to the Eskimos not in cash but in kind. This sideline dollar loss is small compared with the trade it encourages. Every Hudson Bay store runs stocks of baby food, layettes and other household items almost alongside its ammunition and perfume. There are, besides, sell-loads of whisky — specially bottled for the Company in Scotland — and stacks of famous H.B.C. point blankets, specially made in England.

Origin of Name

As useful on the back of an Indian trapper as in a bedroom, the blankets get their name from the three or four stripes — or points woven in one corner. In regions where furs are more valuable than money, the blankets cost one beaver pelt for each stripe . . . and were perhaps the first goods on points. Much of the Company's business, of course, is still done in barter. In one of the huge warehouses of the Canadian headquarters in Winnipeg I recently watched some of the trade goods packed on an assembly line.

Dog-bells from Sheffield, fur traps, Birmingham made beads, absurdly long and heavy men's stockings, red berets and gaudy pullovers . . . these are some of

But the Bay Co. sells everything from coal to cucumbers. In the six large modern department stores it runs across western Canada customers can do everything from lunching to music to having a perm. The Company is particularly proud of the 2,000 honeymoon trips it arranged to Niagara Falls last year. Not to mention the airplane sightseeing tours and other items to draw the crowds.

Big Wholesale Business

Besides all this, the H.B.C. operates a huge wholesale concern with a cluster of shops throughout Canada. It wholesales its own tea and coffee and other groceries. Because northern hooch is supposed to be strong, it also markets that H.B.C. Scottish whisky through the United States.

It owns apartment houses, golf courses, residential suburbs. It runs a 2,000,000 acre ranch in South Africa, a Canadian cargo airline and fur marts in New York as well as London. It also owns — and is developing — the oil and mineral rights to 4,500,000 acres of prairie land. It purveys the oyster rights of some 30 islands it owns in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The oysters are worth a dollar a plate when they arrive in New York.

Among other 'odd sidelines it puts £300 a year to the Bishop of Rupert's Land and feels obliged to supply two elks and two black beaver skins to members of the Royal Family whenever they drop in. Just before the war, when they visited Canada, the King and Queen duly collected.

Britain Benefits

And Britain in turn collects on all the Bay Company's activities — a magnificent contribution to help solve her dollar problems. Financially the Company of Adventurers is 90 per cent. British-owned, with its traditional headquarters at Beaver Hall in the City of London. Sir Patrick Ashley Cooper, the Governor of the H.B.C., is also significantly a director of the Bank of England.

Nor does the old Company in any way intend to forsake its Old Country ties. Philip Chester, the English-born Canadian governor, has his eye on a sufficient number of English — or Scottish — aspirants to maintain the traditions. In a country house in Bedfordshire, the H.B.C. runs a centre to train boys for life in Canada — life in comfort with electricity and hot and cold running water in a Hudson Bay management house in the barren Arctic.

Some Reflections on Meaning And Spirit of Christmas

By GLEN HANCOCK

Bclana is the female counterpart of Santa Claus, or St. Nicholas. Every Christmas this old Palestinian spirit visits Italian children and provides gifts, in the manner of the wisemen, to those who have been good during the year. Into the stockings of those boys and girls who were bad she pours ashes.

Few of us have ever had ashes in our stockings, and no children are so bad that they cannot be forgiven at Christmastime. But we wonder this year, as we have wondered in other years, if some of we older folks do not deserve ashes instead of gifts in our stockings. At least, it is a good time to reflect on the done and the undone things.

Has Many Names

Christmas has many names — Epiphany, Weihnachten, Noel, Christ's Mass; it has not even observed on the same day — on January 6th in some countries and on December 25th in our own—because the exact date of the birth of Christ is unknown. But for everyone who observes the event in the Christian world it means about the same thing —the expense and anxiety of buying gifts and cards and meeting postal deadlines; it means lighted trees, singing, entertainment, wine and food, frankincense, mules, snow (sleigh bells have gone out of vogue with old-fashioned Christmases to last a long time. I think there was a bit more religion in those days. But perhaps not. It depends on how you look at it.

From open doors of churches this Christmastide will come the music of pageantry, carols of a Silent Night, the enchanting sound of bells. The Messiah. A large portion of every community will accept this welcome to worship, to acquaint themselves with their religion, to step for a while out of the darkness into the light and renew their faith in friends. For was not Christ the greatest friend of all friends? Dependable, unerring, unforsaking, wonder of the world, source of goodness. A little babe born in a manger. He was these things. Of his many capacities it is perhaps in that role as Prince of Peace that he is most loved at Christmas; and to a world which makes so little sacrifice in its religion, this inspiration could not come at a needier time. We need the peace of God in our hearts and in our souls. How else can humanity endure? Christmas is no time for old Befana and her ashes.

Go to your own church on Christmas day—tonight. And say a few Amens.

TRUMAN REFUSES TO STEP INTO COAL DISPUTE

Sets Off Talk of Possibility of Strike or Lock-Out After New Year

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP) — President Truman's new refusal to step into the coal dispute set off more talk Friday of the possibility of a strike or lock-out after Jan. 3.

John L. Lewis's miners will work only Tuesday and Wednesday of the next two holiday weeks. After that the big question is whether Lewis will crack down hard and close the mines entirely in a real test of strength.

Those who argue that this is Lewis's plan think he adopted the three-day work week Dec. 1 just to put some Christmas money into the pockets of his hard-pressed miners.

Having done that, some operators reason, he may call the diggers out and try the big squeeze. This would permit operations only by those employers who sign a contract for a 33-cent tonnage welfare royalty and $15 daily wage.

President Truman would not offer any opinion at his press conference Thursday on whether the three-day week was causing a fuel emergency.

He reiterated that if an emergency develops he will take the necessary action to halt it — presumably by seeking an 80-day injunction under the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, which up to now he has avoided.

Coal retailers insist that an emergency does exist right now. They report that they already have put voluntary rationing into effect to share the short supply of bituminous coal available for home heating. The big stockpiles which have received the major attention are those held by industrial consumers, they say.

A lock-out by the operators probably would create an emergency, if it lasted long.

Former Income Tax Assessor Faces Charge

Montreal, Dec. 24 (CP)—Evidence that certain former employees of the Montreal income tax division fleeced the federal treasury for more than seven years was heard in court here Thursday during the preliminary hearing of Paul Ricard who faced a charge of breach of trust.

Picard, a former income tax assessor, also is accused of forgery and uttering income tax reports between 1943 and 1947 and of having obtained $37,344 by false pretenses.

He was ordered to voluntary statement Dec. 29 on the breach-of-trust charge and preliminary hearing was fixed for Jan. 17 on the other charges.

The evidence regarding the alleged fleecing operations came from Pierre Archambault, a former income tax employee.

Archambault testified he had known Picard for years and that both he and the accused as well as a number of other employees knew of a "system" of obtaining reimbursements from the government through deduction claims on income tax reports.

Possessed Approval Stamp

Archambault said Picard possessed an approval stamp and blank employer forms on which amounts of employees' salaries were recorded. In the preparation of false income-tax reports, he testified, names of actual persons were used, but when this was impossible, fictitious' names were supplied.

Archambault identified a photograph of a cheque made out to the order of J. J. Charbonneau for $194. After the government reimbursement cheque was delivered to a St. James Street address, he claimed, he passed it on to Picard who cashed it and gave him a "cut."

J. R. Anderson a federal tax officer from Ottawa, identified four cheques made out to different persons and endorsed by the accused.

Dr. Jean-Marie Roussel, medico-legal expert, testified that the four cheques submitted had all been signed and endorsed by Picard as shown by an examination of the handwriting.

Says Judge Should Be Held in Contempt of Poesy

Edinburgh, Scotland, Dec. 23 — (Reuters) — Judge P. P. Boll of Hamilton, Ohio, who handed down a decision in a divorce case in rhyme, should be held in "contempt of poesy," if not of court, the Scotsman says today.

The newspaper says it hopes the fashion set by the "misguided" judge will not spread to the British Isles.

"Poetry has its own peculiar laws . . . which can apparently be violated with impunity by the bench of Ohio," the Scotsman says.

"The fact that the lady in the case happened to be called Zola Keel Toomb ought not, in a judge, to be held a mitigating factor.

"It was folly on the part of Boll to think it was jolly to make rhymes out of Nolle."

Once a judge started delivering his judgment in rhyme "he would not only have to deliver sentences, he would also have to deliver sentences that rhymed, and that would inevitably lead to scant justice.

"The thought of a judge sending an innocent man to the gallows simply because his name, for example, was Bajowa, is revolting.

"If our own judges surrender their immemorial rights to be prosy, then the future of justice," the Scotsman concludes, "is far from rosy."

Firmer Egg Market in Essex

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 23 (AP)—A firmer egg market throughout Essex County is restoring some of the producers' confidence today, although a base level appears to have been reached with the 23 cents a dozen paid to farmers for Grade A large.

Buyers are making larger purchases than at the beginning of the week when the bottom was falling out of the market and no price was firm.

Consumers also are starting a buying surge with retail prices of 33 cents for grade A large.

In one of the larger retailers in Windsor grade A large select were drawing 29 cents today with the standard grade drawing 33. Medium size eggs were selling for 33 and pullet, 33.

Bill looked up from his overcoat collar. "Hey, be careful!" he shouted.

...ves enough to put a fellow in a morbid state of mind. Last Christmas he'd thought, when he gave Sally the inexpensive little china dinner set, next Christmas I'll give her something really nice. Something she can wear and enjoy. Something expensive. It'll not be practical to fit our Christmas budget, because by then I'll be making more. The tide was bound to turn by next Christmas.

Well, it turned out all right. Fate could have been less callous in the direction to which it had turned the tide. It was even worse this Christmas they, it was last. At least Sally wasn't out making the living and he, a big hulk of a man, staying home.

The doctor had said he'd overcome the heart condition with proper rest.

People were talking. Bill knew. He'd been standing near the living room door the other day when he'd heard Kate Tyler, their neighbor, talking to Sally in the kitchen.

"Well, it just looks a shame that you, such a frail little thing, must work. Bill looks the picture of health. He weighs something near one hundred eighty pounds, doesn't he, Sally?" Kate said, and Bill had visioned with burning resentment her sharp, to-every-body's-business nose twitch with inquisitiveness.

Bill visioned too, Sally's pretty proud head lift when her voice had come in quick sensitive rebellion, "I believe it's my affair about working. I really don't need to work. We have plenty saved up to take us through until Bill is able to go back on his job. I'm working because I want to."

He'd felt like a cad. There wasn't another guy in the whole universe had a wife like Sally, through her loyalty would even tell a falsehood. Sally didn't deserve the hardship he was giving her. And now with Christmas upon them and no money of his own, unless he sold his best suit to the re-sale shop down the street, he felt it would be even better for his old heart to quit ticking than to face it and have Sally say, "Oh, you didn't need to give anything, Bill. All I want is you! We'll have a real Christmas when you get well."

Bill put on his overcoat, hat and galoshes. It was about time to meet Sally coming home from work.

Cold rain interspersed the snow and already the highway in front of their place was getting coated with ice. Cars moved along cautiously.

Their neighbor's boy, Pike, eleven, slid by him on a sled. "Whee-e-e, watch me, Mister Bill!"

Bill looked up from his overcoat collar. "Hey, be careful!" he shouted and went into action with a leap when he saw the sled carrying the boy from the sidewalk into the direction of an approaching car up the highway.

It all happened in a flash. If Bill hadn't been gigantic in size, muscular and agile with youth, he couldn't have saved the boy. "Man, Pike," he panted, standing over him on the sidewalk, "don't ever go along the street!"

"Aw, I could've made it, Mister Bill," Pike said, and dashed back up the street with his sled.

A large mare emerged hurriedly from the big car on the side of the pavement and came up to Bill.

"Thanks, fellow! Say," he said, mopping his forehead, "that was a close call! You certainly used your head."

"I snatched him in time," Bill said.

The man pulled out his wallet. "Here," he said, holding a crisp bill toward Bill. "Take this, fellow."

"But I don't want money for what I did," Bill protested, starting to back away.

The man pushed the money into Bill's hand. "I'd pay a thousand or more to escape what might have happened just now. Think what Christmas would have been for me if it had happened, to say nothing of the kid's parents. Thanks again, fellow — and Merry Christmas!"

He was gone before Bill could do anything.

Bill looked down at the money in his hand. Well, if he felt that way about it. But one hundred dollars . . .

He looked up then and saw Sally trudging toward him through the snow and a happy, secretive smile curved his lips suddenly. He slipped the money into his billfold and went to meet her.

Nut-Bowl Filled From Many Lands

Nuts from all over the world go into your nut-bowl at Christmas. Like Christmas traditions, the nuts so popular at this time of year are a mixture of many varieties and different histories.

The English walnut, for instance, is not English at all. It originated in Asia centuries ago and was called "the food of the gods."

The round little filbert and the almond came from the Old World. Other nuts, so familiar at Christmas, the hickory nut, the black walnut and the chestnut, to say nothing of the pecan, are strictly American. The pecan is native to America and is found nowhere else. Two other American nuts worthy of mention are the chestnut and the butternut.

Although many nuts originated in other parts of the world, almost every variety known is now grown on American soil and experts are constantly searching for more kinds of nuts to transplant to this country.

Good Job . . . How would you like the job of delivering boxes of mistletoe during the Christmas season? Nice work — if you can get it.

Columbus Unlucky On Christmas Eve

America's first Christmas was celebrated by Christopher Columbus. It happened on Christmas Eve of the memorable year 1492.

Columbus was planning to observe the Feast of the Nativity with the Indian chieftain, Guacanagari, who ruled over the Island of Haiti. Already he had received fine presents from the chief who he believed to be the great Khan of Cipango, that fabulous realm of the Orient Columbus mistakenly thought he had found.

But Columbus' plans went wrong. He was so tired from long watches while the Santa Maria cruised the island channels that he retired to his cabin for a nap. While he was sleeping, the next in command also decided to take a rest and went below. The helmsman, as tired as the others, decided that he deserved a rest as much as they and turned the tiller over to a cabin boy

Abandon Ship

The worst happened. Within a few minutes the Santa Maria was fast on a reef. The rolling surf drove the ship higher and higher upon the reef and opened her seams. Soon she fell over on her side and the water poured into her hull. Columbus and the crew were forced to seek refuge on his other ship, the Nina.

Early next morning Columbus sent word of the wreck to Chief Guacanagari. Promptly the chief sent a message to Columbus assuring him that he would give him all the assistance possible.

The noble chieftain was better than his word. He assembled a great flotilla of canoes and despatched them to the Santa Maria to bring all its valuables ashore. Amid the cargo the natives saw many things that made their eyes open wide with envy. Yet so strong was their friendship for the white men and so careful Guacanagari's supervision that not a single article was stolen.

Christmas Banquet

After the last article had been brought ashore, Guacanagari had another plan. His guests had missed Christmas, but there was no reason why Columbus and the men should not enjoy the finest banquet he and his followers could provide.

There was game from the woods, lobster and fish from the sea; and all sorts of tropical fruits and vegetables. A thousand natives danced in Columbus' honor and after the feasting and the climax of the ceremonies came when the chief brought out a coronet of gold and placed it upon Columbus' head. There were also presents of gold for the crew.

In the journal which he was keeping for Ferdinand and Isabella, Columbus wrote: "These people love their neighbors as themselves; their discourse is ever sweet and gentle, and accompanied by a smile. I swear to Your Majesties, there is not in the world a better nation or land."

Christmas Carol

The Christ-child lay on Mary's lap,
His hair was like a light.
(O weary, weary were the world,
But here is all aright.)

The Christ-child lay on Mary's breast,
His hair was like a star.
(O stern and cunning are the kings,
But here the true hearts are.)

The Christ-child stood at Mary's knee,
His hair was like a crown,
And all the flowers looked up at Him,
And all the stars looked down.

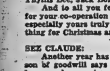
CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

To all yesse grand guys, all of you, who sent us the Christmas Cards. (Sorry, we can't answer all of them); to all sportsmen, and there are many of you . . .

To the "boss" Gord Whelan, my managing editor, thanks for a lot of tolerance; to Frank Rathman, the editor, to Alderman Claude Tyrrell, City Editor; to George Gorman; to Roy Peacock, the best reporter extant; to Mrs. Henderson, the society editor, and to all the rest of the editorial staff we extend our sincere wishes for a Merry Christmas . . .

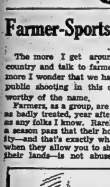


Outside, to the Hardwicks, that family which is so synonymous with this newspaper; to the good guys and gals of the composing room: downstairs to Jim Cordes, Jack Arnold, Doris Whalen and rest of that hard - working tribe we extend the season's greetings; also to Fred Barton, Phyllis Lee, Jack Bond et al . . .

And to all you fellows and others outside, thanks a lot for your co-operation and we, on the staff of this newspaper, especially yours truly join in wishing you the best of everything for Christmas and the New Year.

SEZ CLAUDE:

Another year has rolled around and we approach a season of goodwill even the City Editor, Claude Tyrrell, "it has been a pleasure to co-operate with the sports department in all things that pertain to fine and clean sportsmanship. Looking at the past season of sport from a desk in the editorial room at 4 desk that we used to occupy, it has been one of some accomplishment and it is to be hoped that this will continue. If Santa would be kind to the city he could send a few more parks for children to play in, as the town's ever increased adult sport could be properly conducted and a recreational commission that would organize sport on a city - wide scale. To all a Merry Christmas . . .



New Year.

Farmer-Sportsman Relationship

The more I get around the country and talk to farmers, the more I wonder that we have any public shooting in this country worthy of the name,

Farmers, as a group, are about as badly treated, year after year, as any folks I know. Rarely does a season pass that their hospitality—and that's exactly what it is when they allow you to shoot on their lands—is not abused, be-plied with signs, "Hunting by Permission Only". This enables farmers to look over hunting parties, secure names if he wishes to, and decide each application on his own merits. Therefore, I think the system works out all right.

In some cases the local sportsmen's organizations supply them with signs for both hunting and fishing and they finance all applications for violations of these regulations. Naturally the farmers are both appreciative and co-operative.

yond all toleration.

I own a little piece of land on the outskirts of town where we are building our new home. About an acre of land has been landscaped into lawn and gardens and the rest is allowed to remain in its wild state.

Small Sanctuary

On these five acres live rabbits, pheasants, woodcock, dove and quail. Also, there are a few squirrels and innumerable song birds.

Last fall the matter of posting was discussed and I decided against it. After all, I hunt a great deal on the property of others. Why, then, should I post mine?

The answer to that one came on the 15th day of this present season. Some idiot dropped a live cigarette and the resulting brush and grass fire required the aid of the township fire department to bring matters under control. Almost three acres of excellent pheasant cover was burned clean, dozens of healthy saplings were destroyed and a six-year-old white pine trees were killed.

Next year this land and all of the land adjoining it will be posted solid.

Never do I hunt on a man's property without first asking his permission. Moreover, not once in ten years has that permission not been granted. Nor, for that matter, have I ever found any scarcities that were extended. After all, farmers are reasonable, friendly people.

Most Hunters Fair

By the same token, at least 90 per cent of the hunters and fishermen are solid citizens who would not knowingly cause damage to a farmer's property. However, the other ten per cent, hoodlums mostly, who care little or nothing for law and order, do a great deal of damage and make things increasingly tough for the rest of us.

Knowing all this, both the state conservation departments and the key men in the thousands of sportsmen's organizations about the country have been devising ways and means for the practical approach to this problem of this serious problem.

South Dakota farmers are supFree Seed

Another sportsmen's group purchases annually a large quantity of Korean lespedeza seed. When a member of the group goes hunting, he stops at the local sporting goods store and picks up a pound or so of this seed.

While hunting, if he should find a bare eroding hillside or gully, he scatters a few handfuls of lespedeza over the soil. The next season that waste area holds a crop of seed and cover for game.

Still another sportsmen's organization has conceived the idea of helping farmers install living fences of multiflora rose. Planting a fence of this sort around a field is a large undertaking. Not only do the sportsmen finance the purchase of the plant; also, they aid in the planting and in the cultivation during the first and second year.

Nowadays the wardens are lending a hand in keeping the farmer happy. Working in conjunction with sportsmen's groups, they are tacking up posters, urging hunters and fishermen to behave themselves properly.

The wardens know their areas thoroughly and they see to it that birds and rabbits from the state game farms are distributed fairly. Farmers like to hunt, just as much as we do.

Extended Fishing

Their co-operation extends into the fishing field, also, in the form of "scatter stocking" of trout. This is how it works out:

A farmer, through whose property a trout stream flows, must agree not to post his farm if the stream is stocked with state fish. If he is a fisherman—and he usually is—he wants some of those trout for his use.

If the trout are stocked all in one area, as they used to be, it doesn't take long for the get-your-limit boys to clean out the entire batch. Hatchery trout are pitifully easy to catch when they are first placed in the stream.

Accordingly, the wardens see to it that the fish are "scatter-stocked"—a few here and a few there throughout the whole area. This means much more work but it does give the fish a chance to orient themselves so that good fishing can be had throughout the season.

Ears Ell-Will

With all these things taking place, you would think that farmer-sportsman relationships would be on the up-grade. However, it doesn't take trigger-happy Joe Doakes long to undo all the good that has been accomplished.

With his wire cutters, his careless use of fire, and his complete disregard of property values and individual rights, he does inestimable damage.

If you and I and the rest of us would take the trouble to clamp down on this minority goon squad, reporting violations and working with the wardens instead of against them, it surely would help a great deal.

There aren't enough enforcement men to do the whole job. So let's lend a hand. How about it?

Diesels-Electrics Move Into Second Place of Senior 'B' By Beating Gananoque 13-3

Outplayed, outclassed and outscored, Gananoque suffered a 13 to 3 thrashing at the hands of the Belleville Diesels Electrics as they garnered a solid hold on the second rung of the senior "B" OHA ladder at the Memorial Arena here last night.

In a game that was only blemished by one penalty the fast-skating local crew found it unnecessary to extend themselves against a combination that was just out of their class. It seemed that the Bellevilla boys could score any time they felt like it and the third period saw them coasting along with a 10 goal lead as the bell ended the game.

LeForte in the Diesels' net appeared to be on the spot for a shutout until Tindal sank the visitors' first tally on a solo effort at the 18:40 mark in the second frame. Otherwise the sturdy little netminder had the look of a hero of the evening and performed beautifully whenever threatened by a Gananoque attack.

It was hard to determine which Belleville player starred although the Goyer Brothers, Leo and Vern bore much of the Diesels load and honored themselves by accounting for five of the Bellevillle points. Winger Wardhaugh gathered three while Williams rammed home a brace for the Diesels rolled in the goals.

Gananoque's Tindall was on the firing end of his team's second counter and the Fair to Jackson hookup scored the visitors only other one. McDonald in the cage for Gananoque had more than a southern plantation worker, in the opposing goalie to stem the Diesels' steam rollers.

Boston Braves Hire Walters To Coach Hurlers

Walters, desposed as manager of Cincinnati Reds late last season, accepted an attractive offer to become the Boston pitching coach after lengthy deliberation.

During the Braves' league meetings early this month, Braves officials gained permission from President Warren C. Giles of the Reds, to dicker with Walters. The latter had continued in the Cincinnati organization after dropping the managerial reins.

Last night, from Philadelphia, Walters notified manager Billy Southworth, at home in Sudbury, O., that he had decided to accept the Boston offer.

Southworth, who named Walters as one of his coaches for the 1944 all-star game, made him as an outstanding handler of young pitchers.

Walters broke in with the Braves as an infielder back in 1931, but after being relegated to the minors twice, he was traded to the Phils in 1934, when he switched to pitching and went on to become one of the National League's all-time great moundsmen.

Lucky moved on to the Reds in 1938 and after winning-27 and losing 11 in 1939, he was named the most valuable player in his circuit. He succeeded Johnny Neun as manager of the Reds in 1948.

Mel Parnell No. 1 Pitcher, American Loop

Chicago, Dec. 24—(AP)— Mel Parnell, Boston's slender southpaw, officially became the American League's No. 1 pitcher for 1949 today.

The six-foot, 27-year-old New Orleans product swept the boards with the most victories (25) earned run average (3.78) and completed games (27).

In winning 30 contests, Parnell was nicked for only seven games. He topped a bumper crop of five 20-or-more game winners for the season, including Ellis Kinder, Boston (23-5); Bob Lemon, Cleveland, (22-10); Vic Raschi, New York (21-10); and Rookie Alex Kellner, Philadelphia, (20-12).

Twirling his second full season for the Red Sox—he posted 15-12 in 1948 after being farmed to Louisville of the American Association in 1947 — Parnell beat out Detroit's virgil (fire) trucks in the important "earned run" department, 3.78 to 3.81 third place in this column went to Lemon with 3.89. These three were the only hurlers to average less than three runs per nine inning game. Parnell and Trucks' complete games was five better than Detroit's Hal Newhouser and Lemon, who posted 22 apiece.

Parnell was the strikeout king, whiffing 138 while compiling a 10-11 record. Newhouser, with an 18-11 record, was second in strikeouts with 144. Southpaw Tommy Byrne of New York was wildest of the moundsmen, issuing 179 walks. But Tommy was a valuable asset to the Yankees pennant drive with 15 wins against seven losses.

Ned Garver of St. Louis, Paul Calvert and Sid Hudson, both of Washington, were nicked for the most defeats—each with 17.

Joe Page, New York's peerless fireman, appeared in the most games with 60 and saved more than his record of 13 wins against eight defeats last year. His earned run average was 2.60.

Cleveland on the team pitching crown with a collective earned run mark of 3.36. New York was second in team standings with 3.79 followed by Detroit with 3.77 and Boston with 3.97.

Sports Shorts From Britain

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)—Several county cricket clubs are hunting for suitable captains for the 1950 campaign.

County captains of the past have nearly always been amateurs, but this year by year the problem of finding a simon-pure good enough to lead a first-class XI and wealthy enough to be able to devote five months a year to cricket becomes more difficult.

The prejudice is breaking down, and most counties are coasting around to the view that professional captains soon will be commonplace. Somerset, in the past few days, has advertised for a captain-secretary at £750 ($2,325) a year.

The two leading counties of 1948, Middlesex and Yorkshire, are in the hunt. George Mann has definitely retired from the Middlesex leadership and Norman Yardley is extremely doubtful whether he'll be able to get enough time off from his London business to guide Yorkshire in 1950.

Captain Stuart Symington of Leicestershire has had to give up the reins because of military duties and Derbyshire's D.A. Skinner finds he can't lead his county and devote enough time to his law practice.

Another captain-lawyer, William Ord Hotten of Nottinghamshire, will try to carry on next season but frequently has to hurry from the field to his law courts, changing from flannels to more sober sullings in the back of the car.

Hugh Bartlett, Sussex skipper and member of the London stock exchange, also finds it increasingly difficult to play regularly.

Meantime the big question remains—who will captain England in the forthcoming Test Matches against the West Indies next summer and Australia next winter? No professional has ever yet been chosen to lead England.

Boxing is providing profitable for Jack Acott (Acton), 25-year-old heavyweight from Market Harborough, Leicestershire.

Jack has had 18 bouts in his first 10 months as a professional and won them all except for a technical knockout suffered at the hands of Vern Escoe of Toronto last summer.

His end of the purses has totalled about £7,000 (£21,000), not bad for a chicken farmer who showed little interest in boxing until he joined the army in 1944.

Not only racegoers pick the wrong horses. Sometimes wasps do too.

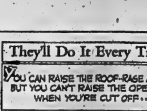
When Stanley Wootton sent his Gay Link to Brighton for the Sealord Plate, wasps got into the boxcar and severely stung Gay Link's travelling companion, Camiache. But Gay Link escaped the attack and went on to a five-length victory.

ONE PINED $100

Oakville, Dec. 24 (CP)—Convicted of stealing six Christmas trees from the estate of Andrey Dorfman near here, Norman Speers of Trafalgar township Thursday was fined $100. A similar charge against Walter Thompson, 19, was dismissed, and Raymond Plumber, also charged, was remanded two weeks.

GUESSING OVER DATE OF BRITISH ELECTION

London, Dec. 24. (CP)— A spokesman for the Labor party's executive council predicted Friday the British election will come within the next three weeks.



He is W. T. Potter, president of the National Union of Railwaymen.

Prime Minister Attlee, who will make the final decision, has yet to give a clue. Most guessers now think he will call the election either for the end of February or some time in June.

Eastern Canada Regains Honors In 1949 Sport

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

It was the East most of the way. That is the story of this year's sport in Canada in East-West competition.

It was a far different story than that of 1948 in intersectional rivalry. A year ago the West climaxed the hockey double — Allan and Memorial Cups — men's senior basketball and Willingdon Cup in intersectional golf play, with Calgary Stampeders' Grey Cup triumph. Here's what the East did in 1949:

Ottawa Senators won the Allan Cup in five games over Regina Capitals. Montreal Royals ended a 32-year hunt for the Memorial Cup with a thrill-paced 8-game series victory over Brandon Wheat Kings; Ontario won the Willingdon title and Montreal Alouettes came up with a 28-15 Dominion football victory over the Stampeders.

In addition, Hamilton Wildcats defeated Vancouver Blue Bombers at Vancouver to retain the Dominion Junior football championship; Ontario repeated in the Canadian women's interprovincial golf tournament; Toronto's Suzanne Morrow succeeded Barbara Ann Scott as Dominion figure-skating champion and Bob Hall, of Toronto, won the Canadian junior golf title.

Henri Rochon, of Montreal, won the Canadian men's tennis title — the first time it has been owned by a native since 1940. Montreal's two-some of Edgar Lanthier and Gordon MacNeil came through with a repeat victory in the men's doubles event and other titles were taken by Americans.

Titles to West

From there in, the West took over in East-West play, and here's how the Westerners did it:

Curling: Ken Watson, 44-year-old Winnipeg Strathcona Club skip, piloted his team to its third Dominion triumph — first man to skip three Canadian title winning rinks.

Lacrosse: Vancouver Burrards knocked over the 1948 champion Hamilton Tigers for the senior title and the Mann Cup, in junior play, for the Minto Cup, British Columbia All-Stars defeated Ontario All-Stars.

Badminton: Vancouver players won most of the honors. Johnny Samis took the men's singles, Mrs. Claude Lovett, and Mrs. Jean Bardsley copped the women's doubles and Mrs. Bardley and Daryl Thompson combined to win the mixed doubles. A lone Easterner, Marjorie Mapp, of Toronto, squeezed in to take the women's singles.

There was an East-West split of the spoils in basketball. Vancouver Clover Leafs whipped the Windsor Assumption Cougars in three straight to take their third successive Canadian senior title and give the West the 20th championship in the 23-year-old cage classic. The junior title went to Toronto Y.M.C.A., victors over Winnipeg Light Infantry in two straight.

Epic, shining brown colt owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto, won the 90th running of the King's Plate at Toronto; Miss Canada IV set a North American water speed record of 138.6 miles an hour at Picton, Ont.

Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League won their third straight Stanley Cup which gave them a few "firsts." They were the first to take the mug three times in a wow; the first to sweep the best-of-seven finals in four games in two successive seasons.

International Contests

Canadian participation in international competition during the year was relatively quiet after the big 1948 Winter and Summer Olympics jaunts to Europe. And in this field, Canadian athletes met varying degrees of success.

India's Thomas Cup badminton players were spilled by Canadian players at Toronto in first-round play and the Dominion's tennis stars lost to Australia, as expected, in the first round Davis Cup play at Montreal. There was some consolation in the big-time tennis competition when Brendan Macken of Montreal, ended Canada's Davis Cup victory-drought against the Down under country with an upset triumph over Billy Sidwell in an opening round singles match.

The Dominion was allowed to enter the Harmsworth speedboat trophy races for the first time and her bid for honors was balked by mechanical trouble to Miss Canada IV, driven by Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, Ont. Sudbury Wolves placed second behind Czechoslovakia in the world's amateur hockey championships at Stockholm and Hull Valley league completed a late-year tour of Europe with a won-lost 15-4 record against British and European teams.

Meanwhile, all year long there was a squabble between educational authorities and hockey officials over the question of hot-shot youngsters leaving school to play hockey. There were charges, but little came of them.

There also was a struggle over ownership of Danny Lewicki, "ten-aged hockey player, who signed for the famous N.H.L. C form, with Toronto Leafs, and who refused — for months — to sign with Leafs. He was suspended from organized professional and amateur hockey and finally joined the (now) Toronto Marlboros— a farm club of the Leafs.

Then there was the round-up of Canadian athletes for the New Zealand British Empire Games next February 4-11. But that is 1950.

Special Leave Granted Three RCAF Members

Special leave will be granted to three members of the R.C.A.F. selected as members of Canada's team in the New Zealand British Empire games.

The Air Force announced Friday that time off will be given to Sgt. Jack Varaleau of Overbrook, Ont., a weight-lifter; Sgt. G. M. Plumb of Toronto, 150-pound wrestler and LAC. A. T. Jones of Saskatoon, coach of the swimming team. Canada's team leaves by air for New Zealand in mid-January.

Fair skiing is in prospect at Collingwood, Haileybury and Kenora for the Christmas week-end, the Ontario Department of travel and publicity said Friday.

Its report added Collingwood, with powder snow, to the spots where enthusiasts can spend the holiday. A report last night listed only Haileybury and Kenora with favorable skiing conditions.

At both the latter centres in Northern Ontario, snow is packed.

Jack Kramer and three of the professional tennis players left New York by air Friday for London. Kramer, Dick Gonzales, Frank Parker and Pancho Segura will play in an English tournament at Wembley Dec. 26-28. They also are scheduled to appear in Paris.

A $500,000 drop in betting during the first 18 days of thoroughbred racing at Tropical Park was reported at Miami Friday. The State Racing Commission said mutuel play was $508,203 below the 1948 figure for the same period. Attendance dropped 1,684.

Defenceman Frank Eddolls of New York Rangers underwent an operation on his left elbow Friday and should be back in the lineup in about three weeks, officials of the National Hockey League Club announced.

Eddolls, a defenceman, was forced to withdraw from a game last Sunday when the elbow gave him severe pain.

CRASH PROVES MYSTERY

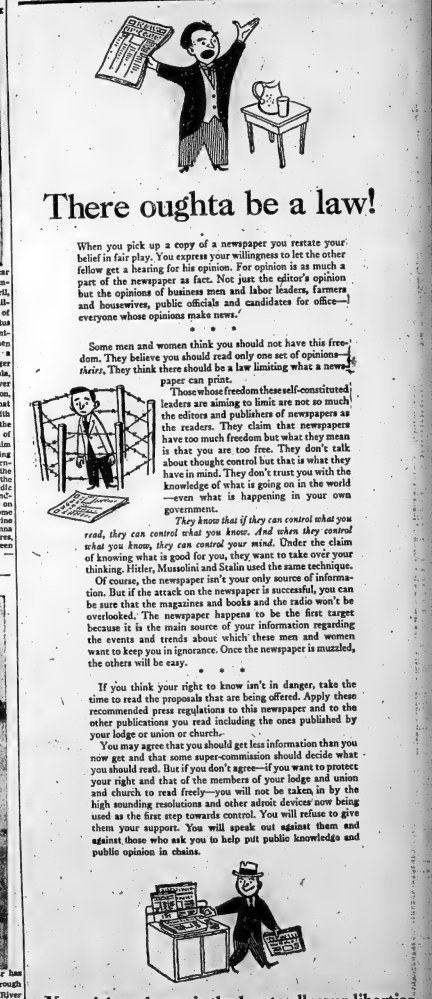
St. Catharines, Dec. 24 (CP) — An automobile which tore through six guard rail posts here proved a mystery to police. Informed of a crash, they found the old car at the side of the road but no driver was in sight. Investigations showed the car had been taken from an auto body repair lot where it had stood for two weeks.

ANOTHER SOVIET DELEGATE WALKS OUT

Russian delegate, Lieut. General Kuzma Derevyanko, is shown as he stalked out of the Four-Power Allied Council for Japan rather than answer General Douglas MacArthur's charge that Russia is forcing thousands of Japanese prisoners to labor in Siberia. After William Sebald, U.S. representative on the council, meeting in Tokyo, had twice tried to call the Soviet delegate to order, Derevyanko stalked out, followed by eight members of his delegation. He is shown leaving with a news reporter at his side. MacArthur has asked the U.S. government to seek Russia's consent to an on-the-spot inquiry into the fate of hundreds of thousands of Japanese prisoners on Soviet soil. — Central Press Canadian.

DEVOUT CATHOLIC ONCE PLANNED TO KILL POPE

Bruno Cornacchiola, streetcar conductor and one-time Communist, made headlines in April, 1947, when he and his three children said they saw a vision of the Virgin Mary at a eucalyptus grove just outside Rome. Recently, he made headlines again when he handed Pope Pius XII a Protestant Bible with a dagger between its pages. Cornacchiola, a devout Roman Catholic ever since, he said he saw the vision, confessed to the Holy Father that he once planned to kill him with the dagger because he felt the Pontiff was the chief enemy of mankind. The Pope pardoned him and gave his blessing, returning the Bible and dagger. Here Cornacchiola, a daily visitor to the Shrine of the Madonna where the vision occurred, places a candle before the grotto where hundreds of the faithful, many on crutches and in wheelchairs, come to pray. Visitors to the shrine have accredited the Madonna with a series of miraculous cures, although this has not yet been confirmed by the Vatican. — Central Press Canadian.



WEATHERMAN PRESENTS SOUTHERN ONTARIO WITH FLOODS AND MUD

Mud was the big problem for suburban Ontario residents and a headache for delivery men. Rain turned unpaved streets into quagmires. This is Delta St., Long Branch, before the temperatures dropped low enough to freeze. — Central Press Canadian.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There are several good slam conventions in bridge these days. Each has its followers. A player usually likes best the one with which he is most familiar.

Naturally I consider the Horse Sense convention the best of all. No other seems as efficient or as accurate. Others may reach the same result. But never with more confidence.

My Horse Sense convention is based on two sets of replies. The first set has to do with responses to four no-trumps. If partner makes a reply of five, he has no more than one ace.

At the same time with his bid of five he can and does announce the number of kings he holds. Whereas five diamonds shows one ace and no kings, each higher denomination shows another king.

We are concluding the discussion of this deal:

NORTH
♠ A K 5 4 3 2
♥ K 10 9
♦ J 6 5 3
♣ None

WEST	EAST
♠ Q 10 6	♠ J 9 8
♥ None	♥ Q J 8 6 5 4 2
♦ 8 7 4 2	♦ 10 9
♣ J 10 9 8 7 4	♣ 5 3

SOUTH
♥ A Q J 3
♦ A K 9 Q
♣ A K Q 6 2

The bidding went like this:

South	North
2 C	2 S
3 H	4 S
4 C	4 H
4 NT	5 S
7 H	Pass

It happens that seven no-trump is easy to make. The seven heart bid will make, too, despite the unusual trump holding in east. The main point is, however, that the convention helps reach seven.

When north shows heart preference, south bids four no-trump as the asker of aces and kings. Five spades is our signal for one ace and two kings. Thus does south learn they have all the aces and kings. It tells him a grand slam should be bid.

Confidence is host when partners know the most.

Slump in Box-Office Receipts Dims Lights on Four Plays

By FAT USSHER
(Candian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 24. (CP) — This is the season to deck the holly and seek the mistletoe — except for theatrical producer and actors.

For them Christmas is not the happy season it is for other mortals. The reason: theatre attendances invariably fall off during the two or three weeks before Dec. 25.

The slump in box-office receipts, hitting the producer where it hurts most, dimmed the lights on four Broadway plays last weekend and blacks out another one tonight. Victims last week were "A Streetcar Named Desire", which had rolled up 855 performances since it opened in December, 1947; "Yes, M'Lord," a frothy comedy about politics in Britain which ran for 87 performances, "Regina," the musical version of Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," after 56 showings, and "The Closing Door," a melodrama written by Canadian-born Alexander Knox, which lasted 22 performances.

Lowering the curtain for good tonight is "Montserrat," with Emlyn Williams. It will have been presented 65 times. Meanwhile, "Mister Roberts," the stage adaptation of the popular Thomas Heggen book, took a vacation lasting through this week. It reopens Dec. 26.

Canada Gets Ballet

Les Ballets de Paris ends its successful run in New York Jan. 14 and will then go on a tour which will include one-week stands in two Canadian cities, Montreal and Toronto ... the newspaper read by one of the characters in "The Madwoman of Chaillot" in a Paris sidewalk cafe scene is the Montreal La Presse, identifiable to the alert play-goer by the full-page advertisement of a Canadian department store.

Face Thai Tells

Two American plays now showing in London call for much strenuous acting that they are taking toll of the principals in the cast. "Death of a Salesman" is to close Jan. 28 because Paul Muni, who plays the central character, salesman Willie Loman, is too tired to go on with it. "A Streetcar Named Desire" will drop its Monday performance after the New Year to give Vivien Leigh the leading figure, a two-day rest each week. "Death of a Salesman" the Arthur Miller drama, opened in London July 28 and "A Streetcar" has been running since Oct. 12.

Footlight Footnotes

"Member of the Wedding" by Carson McCullers, is due to appear at the Empire theatre Jan. 5 after a nine-day tryout in Philadelphia. The play is being produced by Robert Whitehead, Oliver Rea and Stanley Martinelli and is from Montreal. Ethel Waters will star in the play and Julie Harris will have a feature role ... George Abbott and Betty Smith plan to adapt the latter's best-selling novel, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" into a musical for production next autumn.

Movie Column

Hollywood, Dec. 24 (CP) — John Wayne isn't looking for Santa Claus tonight; he already has his Christmas gift.

Being nominated as number two on the box-office list is the best Christmas present I could get," said the rangy star.

Wayne is philosophical about his success and attributes it to the fact that his films show "honest emotion."

"The reason some pictures are so bad," he said, "is that the director or writer or actor is afraid to show sentiment. They'll twist the plot around to avoid it. And they are wrong. The world loves sentiment.

"All my successful pictures were hits because they were frankly sentimental. The women in the audience cried, and they loved it.

Sentiment

"There will be sentiment in my present picture 'Jet Pilot' too. I'll play some scenes with a baby. People will be curious to see how a big bruiser handles a baby."

Acting, he continued, doesn't require any formal lessons. (Wayne received his dramatic training on the U.S.C. football team.)

"Of course, an actor has to acquire poise — either through dramatic schooling or by working in quickies. But lessons don't make an actor."

Smart Actor

Without appearing so, Wayne is one of the smartest actors in the business. He is aware of his limitations and will not undertake anything that is over his depth. He is also not afraid of work.

"I have four pictures already lined up for next year, which means I'm not going to have any time off. But," he added hastily, "I'm not complaining."

Year's Politics Rude to Women, None in Commons

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 224 (CP) —From an election standpoint, 1949 was a dud as far as Canadian women were concerned. But it wasn't for lack of effort.

The year still saw some talented women playing leading roles in the national and international scene, and women's organizations had a good deal to say and do what was both necessary and constructive.

Not a single woman won her colors in the federal election of June 27. When the first session of the 21st parliament opened in September it had the first all-male representation in 28 years, and this in spite of the fact Prime Minister St. Laurent had said he felt "it would be really helpful" to have women in the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister made the statement in a broadcast during his election tour. He also invited the women to write him personal letters.

Hundreds took him up on his letter-writing invitation. But as for politics, the 15 women who tossed their hats into the ring failed to make the grade. Among them was the only woman of the last parliament, Mrs. Gladys Strum, who was CCF member for Qu'Appelle, Sask.

Despite the fact women failed to place in parliament, two members of this so called weaker sex one a senator and the other a member of the British Columbia legislature, made some national and international history.

Senator Cairine Wilson of Ottawa, one of the two women in the Senate, was Canada's representative on the third committee of the United Nations General Assembly. She was called upon to express the Dominion's view on such questions as freedom of information, the draft convention on the suppression of traffic in persons and Polish charges of discrimination against immigrant labor.

History-Making

In British Columbia, Mrs. Nancy Hodges was appointed speaker of the legislature. A 61-year-old newspaper woman, Mrs. Hodges is the first woman speaker of government in the British Commonwealth. She has been Liberal-Coalition member for Victoria since 1941.

On the home front, the Canadian Association of Consumers kept a sharp eye on climbing prices and nudged the government's elbow whenever it saw the need. At its annual meeting in September, the group dealt with resolutions calling for the extension of rent-control, the establishment of consumer study courses in secondary schools, fish juice, vitamin-fortified flour.

Representatives of another group, The National Council of Women, called on the Prime Minister in October to urge the establishment of a national housing policy.

The not-so-serious-minded will remember 1949 as the year when beauty contests began losing ground.

The "Miss Canada" pageant, which the previous year drew a crowd of close to 11,000 persons, failed to draw more than 1,000 in Toronto last August.

Margaret Lynn Munn of Toronto and formerly of Vancouver was crowned "Miss Canada 1949".

NORSE FOLK SINGER

5 Missing Persons Found Safe in Taxi Mired up to Axles

Toronto, Dec. 24 (CP)—The condition of unpaved roads in East York township is bringing bitter complaints from residents in the community. The winter warm spell and rainy weather, which have covered Southern Ontario recently, have turned the roads into quick-sinking bog.

Thursday night police were called to search for two women and three children reported missing. They were found in a taxi cab which had been stuck to the axles on one of the muddy roads.

Bread, milk and ice deliveries to the area are the greatest difficulty. Most of these services have to be made on foot. J. R. Noddis a truck driver to the district said, "The other day a horse drawing a milk wagon sank almost to its neck in the mud. It took a couple of hours to dig the animal out."

TEA FOR CALAMITIES

Brentford, Middlesex, England (CP)—When accidents occur at "Calamity Corner" here, Mrs. John Bryan—wife of the local teapot—is always one of the first on the spot. She is called out at least three times a week to give tea to motoring victims. Her problem: to make the tea-raisin last.

Sunshine Mission Band Sponsors White Gift Service

Ivanhoe—A white gift service, sponsored by the Sunshine Mission Band was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker told of the origin of this service and after the singing of "The Wise May Bring Their Learning", each member of the congregation placed a white wrapped gift on the altar.

After the offering, Beverly McInroy sang "We Are Little Sunbeams."

Mr. Walker told the Christmas story, speaking from Luke 2-15 "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which has come to pass, which the Lord has made known unto us."

The gifts were sent to the Presbyterian Home for girls in Toronto.

Christmas Trade Is Brisk In Local Stores

Despite the fact that Christmas is only a few days away, there is still a brisk trade in local stores, as last minute shoppers rush to complete their purchases.

Many people are spending a Christmas vacation with their families and friends, and this yuletide season. One of the largest individual cheques for any consignment was paid at the local customs house, Thursday. There was $50,000 duty paid on several carloads of Italian dates.

ADOPT CHILDREN FOR CHRISTMAS

Guelph, Dec. 23—(CP)—Several Guelph couples who have no children of their own or whose children are grown up will brighten Christmas for some of the orphans from the Wellington County Children's Aid Society. They have decided to "adopt" the children for the Christmas season.

Christmas Old and New in Britain

Although the big stores and main streets in every town and city in Britain will blaze with lights this Christmas, and the new "silver" illuminations will bring crowds flocking to London's Trafalgar Square to look at the great sparkling fountains rising high above the tall Christmas tree which is Norway's annual gift to Londoners, all this is only the background to the Christmas festivities. The real rejoicings will begin on Christmas morning, as they have done for centuries, in homes, great and small, all over the country when people will keep up, in a simplified form, the expensive traditions of their ancestors, says a writer for United Kingdom Information Office.

600 Years Ago

But all the traditions are not so old as we imagine. Gifts have always been exchanged, but it is only a little over 100 years since the stocking, and even the Christmas tree, became part of the national memory. And the old formality has long since died out, even in royal circles. Today King George VI and Queen Elizabeth spend Christmas at Sandringham, their manor in the English county of Norfolk, where King George can forget his royal rank and become a simple country gentleman, when etiquette is set aside and he can enjoy, as much as his tenants and their children, the party he gives them each year with a giant Christmas tree. But 600 years ago even a noble at the King's court was continually surrounded by his retainers and especially at the festive season.

For instance, the Earl of Winchester led about 100 members of his household into Christmas dinner, which took place at 10 o'clock in the morning! These consisted of his secretary, his counsellors, his marshal, steward, master of the horse, the chaplain and choristers who officiated in his chapel and chanted grace at his table, his constables, heralds, guards and pursuivants, his pages, trumpeters and jesters. When all had assembled, the master steward knocked loudly on an oaken board, a blessing was chanted and everyone seated himself according to rank. This was so important that a huge silver salt-cellar was placed half way down a long table set lengthwise below a dais (on which were the Earl and his close relatives). Below this demarcation line sat the unimportant people.

Christmas Clothes

Some of the fashions popular today have been borrowed from the clothes worn by the women of that period—the little "jewelled" cap which will be seen with smart cocktail suits at Christmas parties, for example, and the long veils with which some of them are bedecked. Even the long pearl-bead necklets twisted round the neck and kept in place with a jewelled brooch which are the latest vogue for evening wear, are not new; you can see their prototypes in any Elizabethan portrait; and when the great Queen Elizabeth Tudor attended chapel in her palace at Whitehall on Christmas morning, 1565, not only did she wear something similar but her gown was actually worth many thousands of pounds in modern currency.

"Her Majesty," said an awe-struck witness in the stately language of the time, "came to service very richly apparelled in a gowne of purple velvet embroidered with silver very richly set with precious stones, with a great collar set with stones. The Earl of Warwick bore the word; the Lady Strange, the traict."

After her return from service the Queen may have returned to her apartments to partake of some turkey — a bird which, had appeared on Christmas tables in England only 23 years previously and was, no doubt, an interesting addition to the elaborate dishes which had been popular for hundreds of years. These included such edibles as swans, bustards and peacocks dished up in their feathers. This last delicacy was usually the last course and perhaps the cook's idea was that the company would already have eaten too much to disturb his work of art. For the skin with the feathers, tail, neck and head, were first removed intact and strewn with ground cinnamon; then the bird was roasted, being meanwhile basted with the yolks of raw eggs. When it was finished and the cook's "work of art" was sewn on again, the beak gilded, the bird's appearance was ready.

Plum Porridge

People enjoyed Christmas puddings, too, but not as families in Britain know them today. Instead, a rich, solid confection did not appear in anything like modern shape until 1670 when it had become a stiffened and, simplified form of the earlier plum porridge. It needed a sound digestion to cope with, the latter, for it was a mixture of meat-suet, raisins, wine, fruit juices and spices, thickened with bread and served in a semi-liquid state as eaten as a first course.

Mother-in-Law Christmas Present For His Wife

Hamilton, Dec. 24 — (CP) — Thomas Winfield Friday had a surprise present for his wife. He brought his mother-in-law, Mrs. Annie Taylor from England.

He got interested in her when he was England only 23 years previously and was, no doubt, an interesting addition to the elaborate dishes which had been popular for hundreds of years. These included such edibles as swans, bustards and peacocks dished up in their feathers. This last delicacy was usually the last course and perhaps the cook's idea was that the company would already have eaten too much to disturb his work of art. For the skin with the feathers, tail, neck and head, were first removed intact and strewn with ground cinnamon; then the bird was roasted, being meanwhile basted with the yolks of raw eggs. When it was finished and the cook's "work of art" was sewn on again, the beak gilded, the bird's appearance was ready.

"We had to get up before seven yesterday morning to go to the station, so I had to tell her," said Mrs. Winfield. "She certainly was surprised. She couldn't say anything and like most women had a good cry."

Mr. Winfield met his wife at Woking, England, while serving with the Lincoln and Welland Regiment. They married a few months before Mrs. Winfield came to Canada in 1944. Mr. Winfield followed a year later.

They now have two children and the visiting grandmother was overjoyed at seeing them for the first time.

Car Fatalities Head List of 53 Violent Deaths

Chicago, Dec. 24 (AP)—Traffic fatalities headed the list of violent deaths today as the United States started an extended Christmas holiday.

Of the 53 violent deaths reported since 6 p.m. (local time) Friday, 49 resulted from motor mishaps.

A Texas farm family of five burned to death and a truck driver was killed after an automobile-gasoline truck collision. The five were trapped in the burning car after the gasoline ignited. A five-year-old Texas boy had to be dead after his playhouse of flimsy boxes caught fire from a cable he played with. The playhouse to light firecrackers.

A six-year-old Newton, Mass., boy, Albert Kevorkian, Jr., was electrocuted as he played in front of his family's decorated Christmas tree. He was killed when he put his finger in an empty socket of a Christmas tree light while lying on an iron hot-air register.

The National Safety Council has estimated 450 persons will be killed in traffic accidents during the holiday period, from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Monday. In the first 10 months this year, the council said, auto accidents killed an average of 83 persons every 24 hours.

There were 396 accidental deaths over the Christmas holiday last year. The toll included 277 traffic fatalities and more than 50 from fires.

Communist-Led Chamber of Labor Calls off Strike

Rome, Dec. 24 — (AP)—The communist-led Chamber of Labor today called off the so-called general strike to protest police measures against a peaceful meeting that would have coincided with the holy year opening ceremonies.

Union executives cancelled the strike 90 minutes after it had been called. Only a skeleton interior Minister Mario Scelba had promised to release 250 persons detained by the police and to remove more than 600 police from the square in which the union headquarters is located.

The square is also the site of the Basilica of St. Mary Major, one of Rome's four major churches in which pilgrims visiting during the holy year were held today. The police had been stationed in the square to prevent interference with the church ceremony.

The Chamber of Labor had originally set its peaceful meeting for the Colosseum, then changed it to the chamber headquarters at the direction of the police. When the heavy police guard filled the square, however, only about 200 peasants were able to reach the union building.

Police said about 100 peasants had been "stopped" — an Italian expression for detaining citizens at police headquarters without a specific charge.

Clerk of Commons Happily Looks Back on First Term

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 24. (CP) — A friendly, youthful-looking man, sitting behind a large mahogany desk in his spacious parliamentary office happily looks back on his first four months as clerk of the Commons.

He is Leon J. Raymond, successor to Arthur Beauchesne. Dr. Beauchesne, who retired last August 7, after more than 30 years service in the Commons.

"I am tired, but I am happy", said Mr. Raymond in an interview before leaving for a week's skiing in the Laurentians. The 47-year-old Manitwaki, Que., notary now laughs easily at some of the things that worried him when he gave up his seat as a Liberal Member of the Commons to accept the clerkship.

"It sounds funny now, but one of the things that worried me was the wearing of the tricorne and gown, the traditional attire of the clerk during sittings of the Commons," said Mr. Raymond, with a wry frown set as Liberal Member for the Quebec constituency.

"I had never worn a three-cornered hat and I was worried as to how I would look in one."

But the hat problem, like many others, cost itself in time during the session from Sept. 15 to Dec. 15.

Transition

The hardest part of the transition from member to clerk, proved to be on the floor of the Commons where Mr. Raymond sits at a table below the Speaker's dais, with members on his right and left. As clerk, he assists the Speaker in the interpretation of the rules and also is generally responsible for the administration of the Chamber.

He cannot participate in debates as he could when a member. He must be impartial to Liberal and opposition members alike.

"I found it very hard at times during the last session to contain my feelings when certain debates were going on or certain speeches were being made," he said. "I think that was the greatest change I felt in the transition from one post to another."

He paid tribute to his predecessor, Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, who had published three volumes on House rules and procedure during the last 30 years.

Mr. Raymond said that in time he feels the rules and procedure will have to be changed to meet recommendations of a Commons Rules Committee and to meet changing times. When that time comes, he hopes to write "Raymond's First Edition on Rules and Procedure".

"I feel at home in my position now," he said. "But if that is so, it is because Rose Macdonald makes an excellent Speaker and because of the co-operation I have received from all members and from the staff of the Commons."

Fifty Ballots Are Being Held For Further Study

Brockville, Dec. 24. (CP)— Fifty ballots are being held for future study as irregularities were uncovered in a recount of votes in the recent municipal election in Elizabethtown Township for the office of reeve.

The present reeve, Frank Murray of Tincap, polled a majority of 25 votes over his opponent, Hilliard Kendrick, of Bellamys, the present deputy-reeve. Murray polled a total of 749 votes, while Kendrick's total was 724. Thursday's recount, Murray is to 721 and Kendrick's to 703.

There were two ballots rejected, seven spoiled and 26 blank. Judge Donald S. Lewis of Brockville, conducting the recount, has held 50 others for further study.

FISHERMEN IN PORT

Lunenburg, N. S., Dec. 23 — (CP) — Every schooner of Lunenberg's deep-sea fishing fleet—largest on the Atlantic seaboard — was in port today as fishermen made for home for the Christmas holidays. Russia Charges Japanese Used Germ Experiments

London, Dec. 24. (AP)—Russia claimed today that Japan's army in Manchuria used human guinea pigs for germ experiments, designed flea-packed bombs to scatter plague and breed bacteria for widespread destruction by germs in the second world war.

The charges came in a Moscow radio broadcast of an indictment which said that Japanese army men as mainsprings in the alleged Japanese germ war program.

The Japanese war chief's "partially utilized" germ warfare, the indictment said.

The germ program, said the broadcast, was directed at the Soviet Union, the Mongolian People's Republic, China and mother states."

The indictment said the germ warfare preparations were carried out at two "special research centres set up in Manchuria on orders from Emperor Hirohito.

The broadcast did not say whether the 12 men indicted were held prisoner by the Russians or what court had indicted them.

The indictment said Gen. Otozaburo Yamada had been made commander-in-chief of the Kwantung army, which occupied Manchuria during the early years of the Sino-Japanese war.

"Experiments were made," the indictment asserted, "not only on prisoners but also on living people, for which purposes an internal prison designed to hold 300 to 400 people was organized." Japanese sought to breed, for war use, germs of typhus, glanders, gangrene, anthrax, typhoid and paratyphoid. The documents charged they were studied to use these germs to exterminate human beings, infect cattle and contaminate crops.

Absolute Pardon Granted Man Convicted Because of Mistake

Columbus, O., Dec. 24—(AP)—An absolute pardon was granted Thursday to a 36-year-old man who had been imprisoned in Ohio penitentiary since Nov. 26, 1946 because of mistake.

Governor Frank J. Lausche, following extensive investigation, found that Ralph Eaches of Richwood, Ohio, was convicted, by mistake, of a grocery store robbery which occurred in August, 1946, at Marion, Ohio.

Eaches, identified by witnesses as one of two men who held up the store, was sentenced to 10 to 25 years in prison.

Earl D. Bircham, now awaiting electrocution in the Kentucky state prison, for the slaying of a policeman, said that he and Charles Hunter—but not Eaches—robbed the store.

Eaches, who was a model prisoner and said "anyone can make a mistake—I hold a grudge against no one," was granted his wish to get home by Christmas to his two children.

Police and F.B.I. Conduct Probe Into Bombing

Detroit, Dec. 24. (AP)—Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation operated virtually hand in hand today in Detroit's big bomb plot inquiry.

An official report of "new developments" in the Reuther brother shootings was made Monday.

Strictest secrecy still prevailed, however, it was learned.

Wayne (Detroit) County's prosecutor, Gerald K. O'Brien, mentioned something about "developments" in the attempted assassinations of Walter and Victor Reuther, but he refused even a hint at what he meant.

The Reuthers began biggest criminal investigations, the F.B.I. and local authorities are trying to root out the origin of Tuesday's night's attempted bombing.

Six Months to Live

By Nancy Garden

"Oh, I think Mr. Riddell is quite interesting," Ann replied as casually as she could. "He seems very fond of travel, and of course it's always nice to meet people who can talk interestingly. I don't think there's a corner of the globe—at least a remote one —that he hasn't visited."

"So that was all there was to it. Perhaps she had been foolish to think that her niece would become seriously interested in practically the first man she met. Well, when they arrived in England she would introduce her to her friends. Her niece had both distinction of manner and mind.

A few days later they entered the English Channel. The weather however, was dull and rainy, and it was not until early they left Southampton and were nearing the west coast that the grim like beauty of England began to unfold to Ann's admiring eyes. "I don't wonder you love England!" she exclaimed. "Aren't the little fields with their hawthorn hedges just like a patchwork quilt?"

"Yes they are," Miss Whiting smiled. "Everything's pretty here, even the buildings, although some apartment houses have recently been built in London that are higher than anything else in the city. Well, here we are at our destination, and as we have a big day ahead of us tomorrow I shall go to retire directly after supper."

Ann was fascinated at the quaint hostelry at which they put up. She could not sleep. Rising from her bed, she sat down by the window. All the haunting perfumes of the countryside were just as Jim Riddell had described. It was wonderfully quiet, and all unknowing her weariness overcame her. Suddenly she felt a choking sensation in her throat. Opening her eyes she found the room filled with smoke. Rushing along the little passages of the quaint inn, she roused the sleepers. Hurriedly everyone scrambled outdoors, while the innkeeper hastened towards the kitchen, where crackling sparks were already making headway about the old-fashioned kitchen settle.

It was not long until the fire was checked and the queerly garbed patrons of the inn filed back to their rooms. As Miss Whiting flung some of her possessions on the bed—for every one had grabbed for something as they dashed from the fire — she idenly espied a bundle of letters. Picking them up, the ribbon around them gave way and they fell on the floor. As she stooped to pick them up one sentence caught her eye: "Now, remember, work the old dame for all you're worth. I'm just about fed up on my job, and I don't see why she should be rolling in riches while I'm slaving here. Your brother, Gerald."

For a moment Miss Whiting was so stunned by her discovery that she let the letters drop unheeded to the floor. A sentence in her sister's last letter swiftly came to mind. She had almost forgotten it — but now— it was too evident Gerald Elder did have much of the Whiting blood in him, and none the principles for which the Whitings had stood so long. Yet her niece had never made any attempt to ingratiate herself with her aunt, no had she ever talked pointedly about money. Whenever she had spoken of Gerald she had given her the impression that he was an industrious young man. Yet that one sentence which she had so inadvertently read revealed all too clearly the type of man he was.

Of course it was, but natural that she should stand up for her brother, even if at heart she knew he was not what he ought to be. Perhaps she had had her troubles with him. Doubtless she would if he took after her father. Picking up the bundle, Margaret Whiting put if out of sight. Mary would probably be happier if she did not know that her aunt had seen the letter. In the confusion she might not have missed the bundle. As Miss Whiting sought repose, her pride in her new found relative was turned to shame and her wrath was kindled against this nephew for whom she might have done so much.

Well, one of these days she would see him. There were moments when she had a strange presentiment about her trip, and an almost unconquerable longing to be home. "Oh, dear," she said as she settled down again. "I'm afraid I must be getting old. I think we'd better cut our stay in England short, for I would like to see Africa before we go home."

A week of sight seeing followed. Then one morning when a deluge of rain was sweeping the country Miss Whiting suggested that they go to London and get ready for their South African trip.

"At least we'll have sunshine, if nothing else," said Miss Whiting, who had found the almost everlasting rain very depressing. Besides, she was afraid it might not improve her niece's health.

"Oh, well, I'm sure I'll enjoy that as much as you. England in sunshine is heavenly, but I don't wonder that umbrella and raincoat makers make fortunes here" said Ann laughed.

Somehow the prospect of South Africa seemed to bring a new interest into Ann's life. Jim Riddell was there. She had not heard from him, as she had forbidden him to write to her. Just before she left Cairo she received a small package containing quaint charm—symbol of good luck — and his prospective itinerary and telegraphic address. She had packed it in the foot of her trunk but once they got on the steamer for South Africa and the smell of the ocean was again in her nostrils she could not refrain from opening the package. It ever see Jim again. Slipping them in her trunk once again, s determined to forget her romance.

Ann thought of Mary and wondered how they would ever manage to straighten things out with her aunt. Whether she would be furious at the deception which had been practised on her or whether she would be a good sport Ann would, of course, fade out of the picture, for the six months would be drawing to an end.

As Ann swung along the deck a new idea flashed into her mind. What if after all, Dr. Wilmot was right and Dr. Symon wrong? Whatever would she do? Her money would not last much longer, for all that she had received from her supposed aunt she had religiously put aside for Mary. With a carefree feeling that was characteristic of the new Ann, she decided to let things slide.

If the unexpected happened, then, something was bound to turn up, she was through with planning for the future. What had it ever brought her? Nothing, so far as she could see.

The long voyage was uneventful and when they arrived at Capetown they were glad to do the sights. All the bleak days that had seemed to depress her aunot when in England were forgotten. Beneath the sparkling sunshine, Miss Whiting became quite energetic. She visited Mr. Harpr, as arranged and they already on their way up country, when one evening after they had all retired Ann was suddenly aroused by a sharp knocking at her door.

Awakened from a sound sleep, Ann hardly realized what was happening till she recognized Jenkins voice: "Miss Lambert, please."

Jumping up, Ann opened the door. It was the ghastl like face of her aunt's guid. "Miss Whiting's got a heart attack, Please come to her si once."

"Have you got a doctor?" asked Ann as she flung on a negligee and hurried to her aunt's bedside.

Margaret Whiting's face was gray and drawn, and through her half-closed lids came a dull occasional moan. Ann turned to Jenkins. "Is she conscious? Can't we do anything for her?"

"I've given her her medicine but it doesn't seem to be relieving the pain. I do hope the doctor will come quickly."

"It's a good thing we stopped off here, for surely in a city this size there should be some good doctors," commented Ann, quietly as her eyes rested on the figure on the bed.

At last the doctor arrived. Half an hour later, as Ann sat by the bedside, his words flashed again through her brain: "She's a very bad state, but we'll try to pull her through." Somehow the very tone of his voice suggested the knelling of a bell.

Next morning Miss Whiting seemed to be a little better. When she saw Ann seated at her bedside she urged her to go and lie down.

"No, but I'm all right, aunt Margaret. Let me sit with you."

"I'd rather you would'n," and a little smile appeared in her sharp brown eyes. "You mustn't get tired out."

"All right, aunt Margaret, I'm glad you feel better. I'll leave you now. Then perhaps I can take Jenkin's place later on," for the faithful maid had signified that it would be best to agree to Miss Whiting's wishes.

"Now, Jenkins," whispered Miss Whiting, "you must get me a lawyer. There's something I should have attended to before."

When Ann returned to her room she found it was impossible to sleep. As she dressed she realized that her supposed aunt was in a very serious state If she should not get over this attack—She must get better, though. Of course, heart attacks made one look rather played out but she had seemed so well on the way up from the Cape—in fact, ever since they had sailed from England.

Surely the doctor could tell her. Of course at two o'clock in the morning it was but natural that his report should sound rather disquietening. That was an eerie hour, and the vitality of healthy folk was often at a low ebb then.

An hour later she waylaid the doctor as he left her aunt's room. "What do you think of her condition now?" questioned Ann anxiously.

"I'm very sorry to tell you that Miss Whiting is still in a critical way. I've sent for a specialist He should be here within an hour. We'll do the very best we can for your aunt but of course the cumulative effect of these attacks is bad. She is very weak today."

"Is there nothing more you can do for her now?" questioned Ann impulsively.

"No. Her maid is taking just as good care of her as though she were a trained nurse, so I think for the present it is better not to call in any outsiders. That might alarm her. Perhaps you can sit with her for a little when the maid needs a rest. The main thing of course is to keep her quiet."

When Ann returned to her room she found a telegram on her desk. Tearing it open she read: "Will arrive in Pretoria Tuesday to escort you on the last lap of your journey. Hope you are both enjoying your trip, Harry Harper."

British Columbia Hit by Worst Blizzard in Years

Road, Rail Connections Blocked by Huge Drifts

Vancouver, Dec. 28. (CP) — British Columbia's central interior is staggering from effects of the worst blizzard in years.

The winter has come on the North Pacific knocked out all telegraph, telephone, road and rail connections with the Prairies and Eastern Canada, blocking the night. Some were restored today.

Snowslides blocked highways leading to the east. Huge drifts on main tracks cancelled rail traffic.

Another storm from the Pacific is expected to bring still more heavy snow to the mountainous interior.

At Princeton, 200 miles east, 30 inches of snow piled up on the fences, grounds, blocking the Hope-Princeton Highway, the southern trans-provincial artery, and isolating dozens of communities in the Fraser canyon. Fifty-three inches of snow fell there. Two buses loaded with Christmas holiday travellers stalled throughout the night.

Three Feet of Snow

More than three feet of snow crippled Kelowna, 375 miles east of Vancouver. Only one bus arrived there from the north.

Farther east, in the Kootenays, two feet of snow blanketed the valleys. Provincial police warned motorists to stay off the highways.

No Canadian Pacific trains arrived in Vancouver this morning, the blizzard had caused a huge slide at Ross Peak, east of Revelstoke, halting both east-west traffic. Six trains, including four trans-continental passenger fliers, were stranded in the area.

Canadian National trains eastbound for Edmonton were eight to 10 hours late.

At dawn today, Prince George, in the northern interior, recorded 40 degrees below zero.

Vancouver, Victoria, the lower mainland and the northern coast escaped Tuesday night's storm with comparatively little. Mild spring thermometers were forecast today. Victoria recorded 50 degrees Tuesday.

Bears Brunt of Storm

Princeton bore the brunt of the storm, but the weather was mild and the snow light on the surface. There are ample stocks of food and fuel.

The snow continued this morning as highway crews took to the road in the early dawn darkness.

A famous ski town, Princeton, where many Dominion ski championships have been held, is used to "big snows". The worst storm was on Jan. 20, 1933, when 63 inches fell, power lines broke and the town was 29 days before service was restored.

Trains were marooned, snow-covered by morning, but their passengers sought shelter in nearby camps, and no hardship was reported.

PRINCE ALY KHAN ANNOUNCES BIRTH OF BABY GIRL

Lausanne, Switzerland, Dec. 28 (AP)—A baby princess was born today to Rita Hayworth, the glamorous red-headed movie star who married Moslem Prince Aly Khan last Spring.

The baby, weighing about 5 1-2 pounds, was born about eight hours after Rita made a pre-dawn dash to exclusive Mon-Choisi Clinic.

The new Princess name will be Yasmin, the Arabic spelling for the fragrant Jasmine flower used in Southern France for making perfume.

Prince Aly, unshaven, haggard but smiling made the announcement, to newspaper men outside the clinic doors.

"Rita had a very tough time," he said but added with a smile: "It has gone off all right. She is very tired."

The Prince said the birth was a natural one, delivered under gas.

Rita's first daughter by a previous marriage was delivered in 1946 by Caesarian section.

Yasmin was born at 9:45 a.m. (3:45 a.m. E.S.T.).

Princess Yasmin, with the mixture of four bloods in her veins Spanish-American from her mother and Iranian-Italian from her father—is the grand-daughter of Aga Khan, spiritual leader of millions of Moslems of the Islamic sect and reputed to be one of the world's richest men.

Block Roads to Traffic

Prince Aly said "I myself think it will be a very good looking girl, but being her father I can't really say so myself."

Power Problem Eased by Rains

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP)—Three days of heavy rain this week put the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission said yesterday. It averted possible hydro power cuts.

He said: "It has done wonders in restoring water levels in our storage basins throughout the north."

The chairman said hydro resources were being strained until the rainfall during the holiday weekend which averted a possible crisis that might have necessitated further cuts next week.

Mr. Saunders said "with continued co-operative effort on the part of all people to conserve hydro, we will get through the winter season with no further cut-backs than are in effect at the present time."

With additional power promised next year from the new Des Joachims power project, he said he would "not anticipate there would be no power cuts after this winter.

DOCTORS STRIVE TO SAVE THREE LIVES AFTER FIRE

Critically Burned by Christmas Tree Fire

Ottawa, Dec. 28. (CP)—Doctors today are striving to save the lives of Lt.-Col. Malcolm Bridge soldier, his wife and five-year-old son suffering critical burns from a Christmas tree fire that turned their temporary cottage room home into a blazing inferno.

In hospital are Sapper E. J. McKwan, 30; his wife Olive, 29; and their son, Sidney, 5. Mc-Ewan is stationed at Kingston with No. 3 Works Company of the Royal Canadian Engineers.

Hospital authorities early today described the father's condition as "bad but not serious or critical."

Mrs. McEwan was described as "critically ill" and the child is on "the seriously ill list."

The three were rushed to hospital unconscious Tuesday after fire had razed their tar-paper shack only a mile south of Billings Bridge on the southern outskirts of Ottawa. It was being used as a temporary shelter while McEwan worked on a new home nearby.

The family of seven were still in the burning building when apparently ignited from the heat of a nearby stove, burst into flames. Within minutes the 16 foot-square structure was a mass of flames.

Awakened by Smoke

McEwan was awakened by the fire and smoke and suffered serious burns while attempting to extinguish the flames. His wife and three of the five children suffered burns.

The McEwan's eldest son, Garry, 9, suffered burns to the palms of both hands when he pulled Sidney from his burning bed. Their daughter, who rushed back into the blazing house to rescue her two sons, suffered critical burns when her clothing caught fire.

The three children—Margaret, 3; Terina, 2; and Vivian, 5—escaped unscathed. They are being looked after by relatives, along with Garry, who did not require hospital treatment.

Within a few hours of the fire neighbors began collecting bundles of warm clothing for the McEwans, who lost all their possessions in the fire.

William Jaffray, 90, Former Publisher, Is Stricken Ill

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 28 — (AP) — William Jaffray, publisher of the now-defunct Toronto Globe, was reported in serious condition today after being stricken with a heart attack Monday night.

Rusty the Cat Travels 1,000 Miles Following Family to New Home

Chicago, Dec. 28 (AP)—Rusty, an orange-and-white cat, is a most remarkable animal.

Joseph J. Tosie, his wife and their three daughters.

Tosie, a lawyer, moved his family to suburban Forest Park last September from Belmont, Mass., a Boston suburb, and left Rusty with his father in Belmont.

Rusty, he said, showed up at his home last week. Tosie said he was amazed to be telephoned his father, John Tosie. He said his father told him Rusty had left his home Sept. 28 soon after the family had moved to Forest Park.

The Tosie family said Rusty apparently did run away — and without ever having been in the Chicago area before, he calmly trekked about 1,000 miles from Massachusetts to Forest Park. Some of Tosie's neighbors have told him it must be just a similar cat.

But Tosie is sure it's Rusty. And their daughters, Mildred, 11, Barbara, 9, and Lucretia, 10, insist the cat is the one they had in Belmont. They back up their claim by pointing out an old injury to one of Rusty's legs and a distinguishing mark of the cat they had in Belmont.

Further, they say, the cat knows it's name. Tosie said Mildred's bed just as it did in Belmont and has other habits which are identical.

Pope Pius Says Vatican Stands Out in World As 'Citadel of Peace'

Vatican City, Dec. 28—(AP)—Pope Pius today has marked his formality that has marked his annual New Year's meeting with the diplomats assigned to the Holy See.

The Pontiff, more than usually busy during the last days with the opening of the Roman Catholic Church's 25th Holy Year, stepped lively into the ceremonial hall this morning. There representatives of some 40 countries were waiting to greet him and extend their New Year's greetings.

Instead of ascending his throne as he did last year, the Pontiff immediately began to greet diplomats and then gave a brief address in French.

The Pope said that the Vatican stood out in the modern world as "a citadel of peace."

He added: "On the morrow of terrible experiences, a longing is awakening in the most serious-minded people and among all nations for a desire together and spiritual brotherhood."

The sincerity and growing solidarity of the Church, the Pontiff said, "we hope, all the vestiges of the recent past" the Pope said.

"It is not in vain that this little territory—the Vatican City—remains as a citadel of peace and reconciliation in the midst of the formidable storm of the present day, and as a great hope for the future as a firm stronghold towards which the eyes of many turn, even those who live outside the church."

The absence of representatives from eastern European countries—some of which are predominantly Catholic — underlined the struggle now in progress between the church and Communism.

In his Christmas address Friday the Pontiff called upon all men to "reject violence and hatred."

At today's audience only Czechoslovakia's Jaromir Mastny was present from iron curtain countries within whose borders are 50,000,000 of the world's 400,000,000 Catholics.

Mastny presented his credentials to the Pontiff in 1946, before deterioration of relations between his country and the Vatican and before Czechoslovakia's adoption of a Communist regime. His representative from Yugoslavia's legation to the Holy See attended. Relations between the Vatican and Yugoslavia have been cordial since the arrest and imprisonment of Archbishop Stepinac, of Zagreb, in 1946.

The Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano commenting upon the first anniversary of the arrest of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary, said the year had proved his words that no understanding is possible between the Church and her adversaries in the east.

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP)—Wanted: A good blanket of snow to protect Ontario's fall wheat from the cold.

So official of the provincial department of agriculture said today fall wheat crops throughout Ontario are in good shape, but there is danger of deterioration if exposed to extreme cold.

"What we'd like to see right now is snow cover—cover for the wheat before it gets colder," he said.

He said there little, if any, chance of the wheat starting to grow during the current mild spell.

New Uranium Deposit Reported Found in Russian Zone

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP)—The British-licensed Sozialdemokrat says today new uranium deposits of low grade have been found near Wernigerode in the Russian zone.

Sozialdemokrat says the deposits were located along the Wernigerode - Nordhausen railway line in the Harz Mountains of Thuringia.

German technicians and Russians have disagreed on the quality of the ore, Sozialdemokrat says. The Germans look on it as inferior grade, but mining preparations are continuing anyway under Russian order, the paper adds.

Damage Caused By Heavy Rains In New Channel

London, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Dredging operations in the Thames and the Thames River rampaging along its new artificial channel near Ingersoll will take at least a week to repair, Leonard Johnston, secretary of the Thames Valley authority, estimated today.

The stretch is about 8,000 feet, a cut constructed by T.V.A. to change the course of the river in the Centreville area. The river beat on the sloping bank during the recent heavy rains, and some places to an extent of 30 feet.

Gordon W. Pittock, Ingersoll representative of the T.V.A. estimated today that $5,000 worth of reinforcement would be required to repair the damage.

The damage was not seen until 10:30 Thursday afternoon, Mr. Johnston said. The area affected was the stretch of soil bank from the Ingersoll - Salford road between Ingersoll and Woodstock. The Bailey Bridge, built by the Chemical Lime Company to serve the company's plant and quarries on the west side of the river, is now considered safe.

November threatened to collapse and the company moved it a little rock immediately before refusing the T.V.A. Hundreds of yards of rock have been placed along the bank at strategic points by T.V.A.

FATE OF FRENCH GOVT. HANGS IN BALANCE

Vote of Confidence To be Taken on Program

By CARL HARTMAN

Paris, Dec. 28 — (AP) — The fate of France's government hung today on a vote of confidence by the National Assembly on Premier Georges Bidault's tax increase program to meet a record - breaking budget for 1950.

Bidault climaxed an all - night session early this morning by asking for the assembly vote of confidence within a week.

Under constitutional requirement for a "cooling-off period" the vote probably will not take place until early Friday.

If Bidault loses, there is little hope that his successor would be able to gain the confidence of the Assembly. This would mean that the cabinet can call national elections without approval by parliament, and politics would then be faced with defending their seats at the polls.

If the premier wins the vote of confidence his bitterly contested budget of 2,257,000,000,000 francs ($6,440,000,000) will probably be approved by the end of the week. 600,000 - francs ($433,000,000) increase in taxes is being opposed by both right-wing and communist groups.

Item by Item Debated

The Assembly has been debating the budget item by item since last Saturday when Bidault won by a slim margin his resolution to put the contested program on the agenda.

His coalition cabinet already has compromised with the opposition by cutting 50 billion francs, he has stuck to his insistence that he must be balanced by higher taxes.

Even the delegates do not agree that the budget Bidault can only be thrown out by an opposition majority of 311 votes.

Admits Theft 13 Months Ago

Hamilton, Dec. 28 — (CP) — An escapee from Burwash prison farm, Ernest Lavallee, alias of Detective Albert Chennery, Allard Desrosiers, 27, of Sault Ste. Marie, today pleaded guilty to a theft committed 13 months ago.

In November, 1948, the accused said he had entered an apartment through an unlocked door and stolen cash and a quantity of clothing which he sold in Toronto.

Lemardo, arrested Tuesday, was remanded one week for sentence.

Another theft charge, also concerning the accused was under investigation, witness said, adding that Lavallee had escaped with two sons who escaped from Burwash in July 1948. All the others have been returned to the farm, the detective said.

Steam-Operated Trains Affected By Coal Shortage

Reserve Depletion Serious, Cut Effective on January 9

Montreal, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Canadian National Railways today announced a 25 per cent system-wide reduction in steam-operated passenger trains, effective Jan. 9, because of "serious depletion of coal reserves of the company."

The announcement said the "drastic curtailment" of service results from "work stoppages and shortened working hours in United States mines upon which the company relies for huge quantities of fuel."

A spokesman for the Canadian Pacific Railway said he knew of no immediate plans for a reduction by that company.

In making the announcement, N. B. Walton, executive vice president of the C.N.R., said that last August the company had coal reserves in stock equal to four months' supply and that this quantity was more than sufficient to see it through an average winter providing it had the help from the company from mines was normal.

CNR Largest Consumer of Coal

The C.N.R., said to be the largest consumer of coal in Canada, uses between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 tons a year.

Mr. Walton said the coal curtailment "followed by severe reduction in miners' working hours," combined to widen considerably the inward flow and the four months' reserve has dwindled so the stockpile now is sufficient for only 30 days' operation.

The management regards this as "a critically dangerous margin with the winter season ahead" and finds no alternative except curtailment of train service.

The announcement said that in Eastern Canada the company spreads were being cut as much as possible the use of coal mined in the Maritimes and this practice will be followed also in the western region with coal from local mines. Dependence on U.S. mines is not

But the company is "dependent practically entirely" on U.S. mines for the supply of heavy coal tonnage required in Central Canada."

The reduction in service will result in a weekly saving of approximately 93,000 miles in steam passenger train service, said Mr. Walton, and the reduction should take a favorable turn which would increase the supply, the train services will be immediately restored.

The announcement added that details of passenger schedules affected will be known at regional headquarters in Moncton, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vt., and Detroit as quickly as possible.

Startling Discovery of Fungi in all Cancers Reported to Scientists

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Dec. 28 — (AP) — Cancer has been found in living plants, growing in cancers was announced to the American Association for the advancement of science today.

The discovery is one of the most startling of this century.

The cancer fungi are the same that grow all around us, in soil, food, plants, trees.

They have been found in every cancer tested. The tests embraced 116 human cancers including four different kinds, and 100 mice cancers.

The fungi never have been found in any healthy tissue, with one exception. They show in breasts of those species of female mice which are susceptible to breast cancer.

The discovery was reported by Dr. Gerard Dillier of the Institute for cancer research, Philadelphia. She is one of the major research contributors to the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Dillier showed enlarged pictures of the fungi. One is a thick fungus, common in soil and milk products, named alternaria. Another is grey, common in the tropics, known as syncephalastrum racemosum. Dr. Dillier said that how this tropical form got into Philadelphia cancers is a mystery.

There are also some common yeast fungi not yet identified.

Dr. Dillier cautioned against accepting results so far as proof that fungi cause cancer.

"A great deal more work must be done," she said. "A vast research group could spend years exhausting all the possibilities in these findings."

Dr. Dillier reported that just before this century began many investigators reported they had discovered fungi in cancers but these reports were not verified.

She said the fungi have received notice since then because of improved methods of detection. They have been mistaken, she said, for broken-down blood vessels.

POOR CONDITIONS CAUSE TEACHERS MENTAL ILLNESS

Many Schools Dilapidated and Lacking Proper Equipment

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP)—Conditions in many secondary schools in Ontario are leading to mental illness for many teachers, said Cyril F. Washington of Walkerton, President of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation, in his opening address to the federation's convention here Tuesday.

"We have figures on the number of teachers affected by mental illness," Mr. Washington said in an interview following his address. "But it seems to me the illnesses are more prevalent this year than at any time before."

In his address he said that dilapidated and ancient buildings, lack of adequate equipment, an excessive burden of work on the teachers and overcrowded classrooms are all too common in the continuation and high schools.

Coupled with insufficient salaries it forms a heavy burden for the unfortunate staffs of these schools. These teaching conditions in both large and small schools, are the main economic pressure from outside, are besetting to take their toll of our teachers. There have been several instances this year of federation members suffering from mental ill health, and of others being rushed into this condition."

Cunard Planning To Build Liner

London, Dec. 28 (AP)

Maritime circles reported today the Cunard line is planning to build a liner bigger than the 83,673-ton Queen Elizabeth, the world's largest.

Reports said the huge transatlantic ship will be faster than anything in present service. It will be powered with turbine engines now being developed for the atomic submarine.

If the keel is laid down early in 1950, it could be ready for the Southhampton-New York service in 1954.

Robert Gross, general manager of Cunard, declined to comment on the reports. However, Cunard deputy general manager, told newsmen he would neither confirm nor deny them.

Similar secrecy surrounded the plans for the Elizabeth, completed in 1940, and the 81,233-ton Queen Mary which entered service in 1936.

Shipping quarters said the new Leviathan will be operated to be regarded as Cunard's reply to the United States Lines, France and the Netherlands for the Atlantic luxury liners.

A 80,000-tonner is being built for the U.S. lines, and there has been the 38,314-ton America as its sea mate. Another 38,000-ton liner is expected to be ready in 1953.

Mudcat Catches Highest in Years Say Fishermen

Commercial fishermen in the district report the biggest mudcat catches in the past 10 years and one in particular netted over $500 for his last week's haul.

Mudcat fishing is a very lucrative business, but cleaning the horned monsters is an art in itself and requires an expert's treatment. The amateur usually employs an ordinary pair of fence pliers, while the commercial fisherman uses a clamping device operated by the foot. One local fisherman claims he dreamed for the market 400 pounds or approximately 2,000 mudcats in four hours.

While the fishermen reap the modest harvest they report an abundance of game fish, pike, bass and pickerel in their nets when they lift them. Of course the game fish are not taken by the licensed fishermen and are returned to the waters from the trap.

The commercial fishermen are employing hoop-nets much easier handled now that the mudcat grounds are free from ice.

Sea Cadets Hold Christmas Party

On Friday evening the cadets and their guests held their annual Christmas party. The ship was gaily decorated in the Jeopardy with the holiday spirit, with streamers, evergreen and huge tree.

In keeping with an old Navy tradition, the youngest member of the ships company was chosen by the commanding officer to be, the captain of the ship for the night. Cadet Dodds was presented with the captain's cap and bunk and given a seat of honor at the quarterdeck. Dodds made his speech to the ships company, and proceeded to get the ships party underway.

The ship's quartet, Leading Seamen Newton, Kaiser, Shandraw, and Petty Officer Richards entertained the cadets with a number of songs, and were then joined by the ships company in singing a number of Christmas carols. A solo was then given by O/S Burkitt. The older cadets then presented a very amusing skit, that was enjoyed by all aboard.

Later the cadets and guests enjoyed the refreshments from the canteen, with the leading seamen acting as hosts. With the appetites satisfied, the younger cadets left for home, while the older cadets remained for dancing and a sing song.

With the playing of "The King" by Bob Lloyd, ended the ceremonies brought the party to a close.

IN MEMORIAM

SCOTT — In loving memory of our daughter, Irene, who passed away Dec. 24, 1941.
Five years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon her grave
May wither and decay
But the memory of our darlings beneath shall never fade away.
Sadly missed by father, mother, sisters and son Freddie. 1926

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Early gains were wiped out as the session progressed on the Toronto stock exchange today. Profit-taking on recent steady advances appeared and pushed industrials and western oils down from new highs touched in the first hour of trading.

Volume for the first three hours was 520,000 shares.

Western oils climbed ahead in early dealings to touch a new 12-year high on the exchange's index in the first hour. Pressure appeared and early gains were wiped out with several losses showing. Royalite lost 10 cents at $9.90. Pacific Petroleum was up to a new high at $4.85 before selling to $4.55, up five cents. Federated Petroleums continued on its own for an eight-cent gain at $2.28.

Industrials were at the highest average price level in three years in early dealings but fractional losses in heavy issues pulled them down. Utilities, papers and refining oils were among the losers.

Easiness developed in a few junior gold producers while seniors were firm. Noranda continued advancing for a gain of ¼ at $9 in fast trading. Consolidated Smelters was down ⅛.

Overheated Pipes Blamed in Fire At Cannifton

Overheated stovepipes are believed responsible for a fire which early Tuesday evening destroyed the frame residence of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson at Cannifton leaving the young couple and their two small children homeless. Very little of the household effects were saved from the burning house.

The Belleville Fire Department was called to the scene but could do nothing to save the doomed structure. However, the members of the department, were successful in saving two nearby dwellings which were scorched by the flames.

According to reports the Andersons had been away on Tuesday and late in the afternoon Mr. Anderson had returned home to light a fire. He then went to visit a neighbor and when he returned home found the interior of the house ablaze.

Five tanks of water were used by firemen in successfully combatting the flames by which threatened nearby dwellings.

TWEED

Reports Given At Nomination Meeting

Tweed—A public meeting of the municipal electors of the village of Tweed was held on Monday night if the Township Hall, to elect a reeve and four councillors and one member of the Public Utilities Commission.

Mr. Beatty, who was named chairman said that he thought it was a mistake putting the dates of nomination back to this late date and, asked for a show of hands to have dates changed back to old dates, "showing", which carried unanimously.

Bill Hurst, chairman of the Parks Board, read the report of the Parks Commission, and at the close of the year's operations there was a balance of $237.

There are now five cottages at the Park which were occupied all summer by tourists. The total value of the property at the Park is $10,000 and Mr. Hurst said that it was one of the best assets Tweed had. The hydro report was given by Commissioner John Sager, which showed a fine surplus after the year's operations. Some discussion took place with regards to the possible increase in the cost of electricity.

Mr. T. E. Moffat explained the high school activities at some length with regards to the new school area, but he said it was impossible to give a financial report at the present time. The trustees, C. C. Watson, Mr. Borland and C. Dickson, are for two-year term.

Reeve McCarey Reviews Work

Reeve S. A. McCarey thanked his nominators and wished every citizen of Tweed the compliments of the season. He said his five years on the council had been pleasant years and he thanked the members of the different boards and the Chamber of Commerce for their cooperation in carrying out their duties during the past busy year.

He spoke of the heavy responsibility that was also placed on him during the past year as warden of the County of Hastings.

New Developments

He told of the new developments that are going on at the present time, the new industries building, water works extensions and ten other buildings erected in Tweed during the past year. He said that the council had received a lot of criticism for not having better public accommodation but he said that the building which was now being erected would be very much in keeping with the village and it was situated as near the centre of the village as it was possible to have it.

Mr. McCarey said he would be the last man to stand in any other person's way of advancement to any municipal honors. He said he had been requested by several of the ratepayers to carry on for another term to complete the work already begun. He said he did not want to be accused of being a shirker, so he has decided to let the people say what they want him to do.

No Serious Fires

Mr. C. Graham, chairman of the Fire Department reported that there hadn't been any serious fires during the year, and thanked Fire Chief P. C. Barnett and his 17 volunteers for the fine protection that they are giving the village. He spoke of the new equipment which has been purchased. It was through the efficiency of the department that the high school was saved one year ago.

Other Reports Given

Ambrose Trudeau, chairman of the Water Board, gave a report of the extensions that were under construction at the present time.

Arthur Snare, chairman of the Street Commission said that it was his first year on the council and it had been a very busy year, he thanked the clerk and the members of the council for their kind advice during the year.

Mr. Snare said that Tweed was growing to be a large place and it really needed more than a council of five men to operate the business that was going on all the time. He said he hoped next year, to be able to put the streets and sidewalks in better condition.

Mr. G. D. C. Morton presented the financial report which was very encouraging.

There was a number of nominations presented and at nine o'clock on Tuesday night those qualifying were as follows:

For Reeve—S. A. McCarey, T. C. Graham.

For Council—Arthur Snare, Bob Woods, Ambrose Trudeau, Ken Burkitt.

Hydro Commission — Carths Cassidy.

It looks at the present as if there would be an election for reeve only.

SEASON'S INSPIRATION

Christmas has again come to the world and been celebrated with all the enthusiasm and zeal of millions. The ancient festival has been observed with much of the spirit of Christmas in the past and at the same time in the modern setting which does not conflict with the spirit of Christmas which suited the age of the stage coach and suits now as well the age of the motor truck and car and the airplane. The Santa in toy world has accommodated his travel by the reindeer to the latest forms of motorized travel, so Christmas and Yuletide still reign in the hearts of the people. Through some outer forms change, the inner spirit is unchanged.

This Christmas was marked by unusual weather conditions. Christmas according to the lore of the storybook and tradition was to northerners normally a season of snow and cold contrasting with the warmth of heart and spirit within the hearts of the people. But rains which made rivers flow deep came but did not mar the celebration. Despite the lack of snow and ice and cold, the spirit of Christmas lived because it is in the heart of the people and no outer circumstance of weather can break its spell on the lives of the boys and girls and of men and women.

Christmas has come and gone, and though the yuletide log was not visible, the spirit of Christmas remained the same as it ever was, the time of cheer, and of giving and of understanding and good will.

Every Christmas has left memories that abide and so it will always be. It triumphs over the seasons and the generations and the centuries for its spirit is of brotherhood and good will to all mankind and of the benign influence of Him whose birth is the inspiration of Christmas through the ages.

Christmas abides the ages. Never can that time come when its spirit will cease to move the millions of men and women and children. Time cannot affect its continuity influence and its abiding power throughout the world, inspired by the life of the Child of Bethlehem. At no time in the year does the spirit of man soar so high as in this season, which has just been celebrated.

AUTOMOTIVE PROGRESS

Canadian automobile industry has made a mark which could not have been dreamed of a decade or two ago. In August, 1948, the five millionth motor vehicle was driven off the assembly line. The total production of all units for the year was the greatest peacetime accomplishment in the history of the industry, reaching a record of over 500,000 units. Canadians continued to buy automobiles and in that year the number of motor vehicles operated by Canadians continued to rise, there being a ten per cent increase over the number of cars and trucks the year before.

That set the record of a per capita basis of 8.6 citizens per passenger car.

At the same time there was a ten per cent rise in the amount of gasoline used.

In all Canadians bought over 145,000 passenger cars and over 75,000 trucks and buses, at a combined retail value of over $439,000,000.

These facts and figures are taken from the report of the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce. It is further shown that the rise in the output of motor bus and coach for sale in Canada rose to 694.

In the industry for that year was an average of 20,457 workers, of whom 185 were women.

In the year 1948 there were registrations of 1,496,959 passenger cars, 478,841 trucks, 1,864 motor buses, 33,934 motorcycles and 18,084 other motor vehicles or 2,034,282 in Canada and 11,776 in Newfoundland or a total of 2,046,058.

The Province of Ontario leads the entire Dominion in the average number of persons per passenger car, standing at 6.2 per car, while the Yukon naturally had the lowest, at 6.2 per car, while the Province of Ontario led with 698.384 cars, Quebec was second with 237,410 with the Yukon naturally lowest with 1,140 registrations.

There are in Canada according to the 1948 figures no fewer than 2,094,792 operators licensed.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

TIMES SQUARE, U.S.A.

Last night I got to gabbing with Charlie Grunthal, the hatcheck man at the Hotel Paramount on 46th Street.

"I wish you'd say something nice about Times Square in your column," he said. "A lot of people think of Broadway as one big con joint, but so do I, and I know. It's a pretty decent street."

"I'd like to oblige," I said, "but I'm on the prowl for paragraphs, not puffs. However, I can always use a good human interest story about one of your guests."

"To tell the truth," said Charlie, "most of our guests are in and out before we have a chance to get acquainted with them. The only ones we get to know are those who stay on a while—fellows like old Mr. Bennett, for instance. And speaking of Mr. Bennett—"

"I'm all ears and notebook," I said.

"Well," said the hotel man, "for years Mr. Bennett had one of our suites on the fifteenth floor, and except or when he got in and out of the elevator, we hardly ever saw him. About all we knew of him was that he had a bad heart, and that he used to spend part of every afternoon feeding crumbs to the pet pigeons around Father Duffy's statue.

"One day, while Mr. Bennett was feeding the pigeons, he got talking with a young fellow who had recently graduated from Columbia Law School. It seemed the boy came from his home town, and when the old man found out he was broke, he offered to let him bunk for awhile in his own room at the hotel.

"Well, the pair hit it off right from the start. The young lawyer—his name is Buckley Dorsey—seemed sincerely fond of Mr. Bennett and anxious to do anything he could to make life easier for him. In fact, after a few months, he did succeed in him a power of attorney and let him handle his bank account and any legal matters that came up.

"One night about a year later, the old gent had a bad attack, and while he was resting at the Polyclinic Hospital, Buckley got a call from an attorney downtown who said he had important business to discuss with Mr. Bennett. The young man said he was in the hospital, but that he was his lawyer and would be right down.

"When he arrived, he learned that Mr. Bennett's brother in Canada had died and left him almost a million dollars.

"His first impulse, of course, was to rush to the hospital with the news, but he was afraid the old man's heart might not stand up under the excitement, so he decided to walk back to the hotel and mull things over.

"Well, on the way, he got to looking in store windows and thinking how many nice things there were to buy in New York, and since he felt sure Mr. Bennett was going to pay him well for handling the inheritance, he decided there wasn't any harm in anticipating part of his fee. So his first stop was a widow's, where he opened a charge account and got himself some brand new clothes, and his next a bar and grill where he got himself a couple who were not so new.

"By the time the old man was ready to come home, Buckley had spent several thousand dollars and scared stiff. Finally he went to see my house doctor—a smart fellow who has been around Broadway for a long time, and told him what he had done.

"The doctor said he of course didn't know what the old gentleman would do about the bills, but he advised him not to delay any longer in spilling the news about the inheritance. He said the worst he could hear, but to make sure, he'd meet him at the nearest bar shop when the old man got back to the hotel, and if there was a very trouble he'd have some adrenalin handy.

"The next day, the three men met in the restaurant, and after a bit of chit-chat, Buckley asked Mr. Bennett if he'd heard lately if he told him he had fallen heir to a million dollars.

"The old man grinned and said, 'Quest, if you told me I had inherited a million dollars, do you know what I'd say? I'd say, 'Ha, ha, half a million to you.'

"Good story," I said to Charlie Grunthal, "but I wish it had a stronger finish."

The hotel man reached into his desk and brought out a newspaper clipping.

The headline read, "Lawyer Drops Dead in Midtown Restaurant."

United States Of Indonesia Comes Into Being

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

Two years ago Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, in proclaiming a new partnership between the kingdom of the Netherlands and the Dutch East and west Indies, declared that "colonialism is dead."

Tuesday the United States of Indonesia, comprising the rich islands of the Dutch East Indies, came into full being as a sovereign nation. Thus was the accuracy of her majesty's pronouncement demonstrated in the major and by far the richest of the Dutch colonial empire.

There still remains that part of the empire comprising the Dutch West Indies (Curacao) and that of Dutch Guiana (Surinam) on the Atlantic coast of South America. But the future of this vast acreage of the empire the mother country has left entirely open for the coming April to consider the granting of great autonomy.

It is believed that the modern hemisphere may be formed into another federal republic similar to the Indonesian group, with sovereign rights. The Netherlands will hope that, as in the case of Indonesia, the new group will remain within the Netherlands commonwealth.

And what does such termination of "colonialism" do to the mother country economically? Well, that remains to be seen. In the case of the United States of Indonesia, all private investments are guaranteed by the full terms of property, and for all time. That is to say, Dutch investors can continue to do business in Indonesia as Netherlander has been permitted to own property in the Philippines.

The gentlemen of all countries then, relically have equal rights for purposes of investment.

As far as the Dutch colonies is concerned, the main wealth lies in Dutch Guiana (Surinam) where are bananas, cacao, sugar, coffee, rice, maize, cotton, bauxite, and balata.

However the country is largely undeveloped and its mineral properties are unknown. But Surinam may prove to be a great source of wealth on development. Whether the mother country will profit by this depends on the structure of the projected United Nations of Indonesia, and Netherlands.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE INSPIRATION OF ARTS

Many years ago a little book by W. Macneile Dixon came to my notice which he called "An Apology for the Arts." The essays in this small book made a great impression upon me and I have read them again and again.

"Science," said he, "is matter, "by itself is a machine without direction. It can work equally well for good or evil, and it is the arts that provide a philosophy of life, a purpose of living, which will determine the direction in which the machine is to move." As to the arts, he referred to poetry, painting, music and allied arts.

Science touches only the intellect, but the arts touch the soul. For conscience for spiritual refreshment we go to these arts of ours. They are the life in us when we are down. Their substance is of nature and the heavens. The poorest and humblest are inspired by a drink from their ever flowing spring. Nothing unequal in comparison, of an intricate machine to that of a poem, painting, or deathless musical composition!

We admire and applaud the triumphs of science, but we remain silent in the presence of a great work of art. We look out upon nature for inspiration and feeds the soul, and revere the interpretations that poets, artists and musicians create for us. Such our natures may be ennobled. These are the agencies that make "nations nobler, freer."

Kill beauty in the human heart and you kill life. The political powers of Greece and Rome are only memories, but their art is an inheritance that will never be obliterated. Great art is a monument greater than any that could be cast in bronze, or cut into marble. These are the monuments that human beings erect in their hearts.

So long as Shakespeare lives, or Wordsworth, his spirit of England will not die. The character of a nation may continue to exemplify its illustrious history so long as its arts are held in superior respect. Germany still has Goethe, France her Hugo, and Italy her Virgil and Raphael. The arts are deathless.

PILES ARE ESSENTIALLY VARICOSE VEINS

Piles is a permanent uneven or tortious dilatation or enlargement of a vein or veins anywhere in the body, most frequently in the legs. Hemorrhoids (piles) are practically varicosities of veins in the last two inches of the alimentary canal. Varicocele is varicose vein or veins in the spermatic cord.

Many persons with varicose veins in one situation or another never have enough trouble from them to require treatment.

In any situation varicosities cause only vague dull ache or discomfort unless they become inflamed or injured or thrombosed —that is, blood in the vein clots.

Varicose veins within the alimentary canal, called internal or "blind" piles, are usually painless, but even so may bleed a little every day and so bring down the individual's health and vitality before he or she even realizes what the trouble is. Although some doctors pretend to determine whether a person has internal piles without an examination, the truth is that no doctor can diagnose the condition except by direct vision through a rectal speculum. Any doctor who has told you differently, quit the charlatan while you can, and have the strength to drag yourself away.

External hemorrhoids (piles) are extremely painful during an attack"—that is, when a varicose vein becomes inflamed? If or when the "attack" (inflammation) subsides without medical treatment, the victim, if he or she is as credulous as the average run of Yankee Wiseacres, may imagine the medicine or treatment used to relieve the "attack" cured the piles. In this fatuous belief he or she may write out a testimonial for the vendor of the nostrum, and unconsciously helps the vendor to sell a honored other poor geezer. Thus there are scores of "pile cures," but no medicine or combination of medicines can cure piles.

In some instances one with an "attack" or external piles elects to suffer for several days from the pain, ther the pell thrombose (blood clots within the inflamed vein) and , the victim being a stoical sort, suffers for several days more, but eventually, if the victim can keep his courage up, old Dame Nature will not only stop the attack but will positively cure the pile—just that one pile—by the slow but sure process of organization of the clot and formation of new tissue which gradually contracts and obliterates the varicose vein. This is just as healthy a cure as surgery or injection treatment, it does not make the patient one whit less liable to have future attacks of piles. Such attacks are likely to come as long as there are any varicose veins in the area and the individual commits the same sins which brought on the first pile.

Among these sins are the following:

The frequent or habitual use of laxatives or cathartics which keep the hemorrhoidal veins congested and the mucous membrane over them irritated. Overeating and eating too fast, that is, gulping down food insufficiently much to insure good digestion.

Excessive indulgence in condiments.

The moderate or excessive use of alcoholic beverages.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Cleaning Wheat

Following your suggestion I have made a habit of eating a bowl of shredded wheat with milk and sugar, every morning for about three years. I have found it beneficial in several ways, but it is getting hard to buy it at the feed store. (C. D.)

Answer—Winnow it to remove dust or chaff. Then toss it in the air where breeze or wind can blow it. Wash it in cold water and let dry in sun or in oven. This will make it as clean as any cereal food. Send a stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing for pamphlet Wheat to Eat.

Terpin Hydrate

What is the medical name of terpin hydrate? It is the only medicine I take for my chronic bronchitis. (J. P.)

Answer—That's the only name I know. Why don't Call It a Cri (about acute and chronic remedies—send envelope—five cents and stamped self addressed envelope) I tell what form and how to take for the winter cough, also I warn against using preparation that contains codeine.

No Chance

Five years ago I wrote for your pamphlet The Menopause. It came just in same envelope and I feared worrying—in fact, as you said, there was no change and preparation that contains codeine.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

In a restaurant today, a couple sat in full view totally unaware of everything around them. The woman was positively beautiful, she would be about twenty-seven or so, a matron, from the looks of the man.

The man was in his middle thirties or better; and a more devoted listener you never saw. For the beautiful woman talked. She talked. Over the normal din of the restaurant, her voice came faintly, full of inflection, vibrant, gay.

She was the kind of woman who was most beautiful in those intimate hours when she was not aware apart, her lovely tech showing, while her eyes danced with the thought of the next things she was going to say.

She never stopped talking except to take a few quick chews at her food. The man never took his at all. He sat gazing in complete devotion at the fine looking woman across from him, and he indeed. He might have uttered a word here and there; but if so, they served merely to encourage the woman in her brilliant monologue, bouquets bridal wreaths of speech.

I do hope they are married. Why I am a matron, I feel very poor devoted fellow isn't advancing in the matrimonial stakes. Such a thing I want to tell all devoted men, whether young or in the late thirties. Even in the thirties. Even the loveliest charm, even that supreme of beauty young young matron in her late twenties, vanishes very fast certainly.

But talk goes on. A woman who is a talker at twenty-seven is also a talker at forty-five and seven; and at forty-seven she will be the same. Further the talking grows; it increases with practice and experience. Mouths do not remain beautiful when one is into the thirties. Eyes that are full of light in the twenties develop a sort of glare in forties. It isn't garlands a talking woman seems to be looking for, but boys; it is more like old bundles.

A LITTLE CROSS AND A BIG CROSS

The cross has become an honored symbol throughout all Christendom. It crowns the church edifice, it stands upon the altar, it appears on the vestments of the clergy of some of their most beautiful pieces.

The cross we have been referring to is the cross of Christ. We gain always a clearer view of the cross by a symbol of our love. Jesus talked about the necessity of man taking up his cross daily. There is a way in which we make our crosses to serve us from our sins—the big and glorious cross of Christ, through whose sacrifice by which we are saved from our sins by the shedding of innocent blood. He died of self-inflicted wounds. He received his veteran's allowance for two months. No inquest will be held.

would retain our salvation and deepen it. It takes the cross of Christ to give us victory. It takes the daily embracing of the crosses of our own lives to keep us Christian.

Two crosses are necessary for our salvation and growth. There is not the cross that Christ bore but the cross we bear in our lives. This little cross is the symbol of our love for Him as his cross is the symbol of His love for us.

PRINCE ALY KAHN

Police surrounded the hospital shortly after Rita's arrival. And nearby roads were blocked off to traffic.

The film star occupies a luxurious hospital suite—usually reserved for Royal patients — overlooking picturesque Lake Geneva. The Prince has an adjoining room fitted out as a drawing room to receive guests.

One Other Daughter

Attending her was Dr. Rudolphe Rochat, well known Swiss obstetrician who delivered Princess Margurite, daughter of ex-King Michael of Romania and Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parme, and other royal offspring.

Rita has one other daughter, five-year-old Rebecca Welles, born when she was married to actor-producer Orson Welles. She was divorced from Welles in 1946. Aly has two sons by a previous marriage, Prince Karim Aga, 13, and Prince Amyom Mohammed, 11.

Aly received a divorce from British-born Joan Yarde-Buller in Paris only a few weeks before he married Miss Hayworth last May 27 at Villaris on the French Riviera after a highly-publicized romance.

Rita was raised a Roman Catholic but the Prince said the baby would be brought up in his Moslem faith.

POOR CONDITIONS

The director of the Ontario Education Department, Dr. J. G. Althouse, commented that he had heard of one or two cases of teachers suffering mental illness this year, but he said the number was normal. He said the illnesses were more prevalent during the Christmas and Easter examination periods.

These cases "usually take the form of nervous breakdowns," said Dr. Althouse. "The federation may know of more cases which haven't been reported to the department of education yet. I have no figures of the number of cases."

Mr. Washington said later he was referring not only to teachers in rural schools but to those in large, well-equipped urban schools as well. He said the strain of modern living plus larger classes in many schools is affecting the teachers.

"When a teacher had to drop out because of a mental illness," said Mr. Washington, "many school boards and principals wish to save the individual embarrassment, and just report the reason as an illness".

About 175 teachers from all parts of the province attended the opening session, representing 9,000 secondary school teachers throughout Ontario. Most of their sessions are held in camera. The Ontario public school men teachers Federation is holding sessions at the same time.

Future of Term May be Discussed At Conference

Ottawa, Dec. 28 (CP)—The future of the term "high commissioner" to designate envoys exchanged between countries of the Commonwealth may come up for discussion at the Colombo, Ceylon, Commonwealth conference next month, it was indicated today.

London reports said the United Kingdom is asking other Commonwealth governments whether they wish to change the term to that of ambassador and said "the replies so far received show a wide divergence of view." They reported that India wants to be represented "a London by an ambassador after it becomes a republic in a month's time.

There was no comment from Canada's external affairs department but the Colombo conference appeared to be a logical forum for the issue. External Affairs Minister Pearson will lead the Canadian delegation. The subject isn't on the prepared agenda but any delegation may bring up any point it wishes.

The Canadian government has never publicly come out for or against continuance of the term but it is believed to feel that any change should be based upon general agreement. It is a subject that has come up more than once and in October, 1948 a Commonwealth conference established that a high commissioner should have equal rank with a foreign ambassador.

That means, say, the U.K.'s high commissioner to Canada has the same status as the United States ambassador.

The origin of the term was rooted in the belief that an ambassador was a personal representative of the head of a state. Therefore a Canadian ambassador to the U.K. would be a personal representative from the King to the King.

The term high commissioner was substituted to indicate a representative of a government. Thus Canada's high commissioner in London became a representative of the Canadian government to the British government.

The whole question of Commonwealth envoys is in a state of evolution. There is, for instance in circles which study these problems a feeling that the countries are getting away from the belief that the high commissioners represent governments and nearer to the belief that they represent the country, the people themselves.

MADOC

Survey Started For Waterworks By Engineer

Madoc — A special meeting of Madoc village council was held on Friday night. Mr. G. G. Reid, consulting engineer, was present, and the proposed waterworks and sewage system for Madoc was discussed at considerable length. In addition to all members of the council, Messrs. W. J. Symons, F. H. Naylor, and T. H. Rupert, were also present.

On motion of Rivers—Smith, G. G. Reid was engaged as the engineer to make plans and specifications for the waterworks and sewage system project for the entire village. It is expected this will take about six weeks and seven or eight men will be employed. After the survey is completed, tenders for various parts of the work will be advertised for. Mr. Reid will act in an advisory capacity and inspect the work from time to time as it progresses. Mr. Reid's fee will be 6 per cent of the first $25,000 spent and 5 per cent of the balance. In addition, it is expected that the local council will engage a full time inspector. According to Mr. Reid it will take approximately 12 months from now to complete the portion of the village that is to be started next year.

The project will be financed under the Ontario government's new plan to assist small municipalities, and debentures bearing interest at 3½ per cent will be purchased by the government.

Rivers—McGowan, that a vote of appreciation be extended to Messrs. Symons, and Naylor, for attending meeting.

Hallen— Smith, that Tuesday, December 27th, be observed as Boxing Day in Madoc village.

Rivers—Hulin, that a resolution be forwarded to Madoc Hydro Commission requesting a street light be placed in front of the Post Office.

Meeting adjourned, sine die.

Wedded by Proxy Couple Reunited In Vancouver

Vancouver, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Ilidio Bonfim Tunz Cardinalsa and his wife Nina, 19, here Tuesday night for their first time since eight months before their wedding.

The explanation is simply that Tony and Nina were married last July 31 by proxy.

Tony, 25, said his fond goodbye to Nina in Nicastro, Italy, in November, 1948. He left to take up a new life in Canada at the home of his grandfather, Jasper Nicastro.

But before he left, he promised his dark-eyed Italian sweetheart he would get over here as soon as possible.

On July 31, Tony, in Vancouver, married Nina, in Italy. His uncle Jasper Nicastro represented him at the ceremony and took the vows for him. The proxy marriage was necessary to enable Nina to come to Canada in accordance with immigration laws.

Then Tuesday night Nina arrived here thanks to the dollars Tony has saved since working as a laborer in the Vancouver waterworks department. Right away they held their wedding reception at grandfather's home five months

SHANNONVILLE Teachers and Pupils Present Enjoyable Christmas Concert

Shannonville—The pupils and teachers of Shannonville School presented an enjoyable Christmas concert at the Orange Hall on Friday evening. A large number of parents and friends were present at the entertainment. The hall was appropriately decorated with fir boughs and Christmas roses. Rev. R. M. The program began with a welcome chorus by the school. Archie Arbuckle and Rena Patrick gave a recitation of welcome; the pupils of the whole school recited the Christmas Story; the verses from St. Luke's Gospel. A dialogue "Christmas Wishes" was presented by nine of the junior pupils: Vernon Hill, Clara Brant, Marjorie McDonald, Jean well, Billy Brant, Douglas Dafoe Archie Arbuckle and Rena Patrick; "Two Little Letters," was recited by Velma Hill and Mary Isabel Hill; "Jolly, Old Santa Claus," was sung nicely by the pupils of the primary room; Linda Marion recited the humorous recitation "What I'll Do," and Douglas Dafoe, Grade 8 pupil, was presented by Margaret Jean Louis, Jackie Brant and Grace Brant. This was most entertaining as it proved to be a conversation of the four teachers with their babies.

Portraying Joseph and Mary, was Lorna Brant and Helen Marion. The play ended with the singing of "What Can I, as a Child."

Santa Claus appeared in true form at the conclusion of the evening and presented candy to all the children. Much credit is due the two teachers for their training of the children for this fine entertainment.

TWEED

Tweed—(Special) — A public meeting of the municipal electors of the township of Hungerford was held in the Township Hall, Tweed, on Monday. The hall was filled to capacity when Mr. J. E. Cassidy, clerk of the township called the meeting to order for the purpose of receiving Deputy Reeve and three Councillormen for the year 1950. Mr. Cassidy was appointed to act as chairman of the meeting, and in his opening remarks, he paid a very fitting tribute to the late Charles Rush, who was reeve of the township at the time of his death a few weeks ago. He asked all to rise and bow their heads in silent memory of the late Mr. Rush.

Read Treasurer's Report

Mr. Coulter then read the treasurer's report which was very lengthy, but showed the township's affairs were in a very satisfactory. Unit there was a lot of business transacted during the year in the township of Hungerford.

The clerk then called on the old members of council to give an account of their stewardship during the past year.

Mr. J. McGrath paid his tribute to the late Chas. Rush and thanked the electors for their confidence.

Mr. W. E. Bateman also paid his tribute to the late Reeve Chas. Rush as did all the other nominees. Mr. Bateman spoke of the reeve's real leadership that Mr. Rush had given during all these years of office, and how much he would be missed. Mr. Bateman also spoke of the plight of the farmers at the present time on account of the failing British markets. He also said that the local members of Parliament should know the feelings of the farmers in the township. In the event of an election Mr. Bateman said that his name would appear on the ballot and solicited the support of the electors.

Solicited Support

Mr. Edward Rivers thanked his nominator and seconder and solicited the support of the electors if his name appeared on the ballot paper.

Reeve Joseph Bergeron, treasurer, spoke of how it was the late Charles Rush was instrumental in getting him the job as treasurer and that he had done his best to fill this trust which had been placed in him to the best of his ability, but he felt that some one else should take over now as it has got to be a full time job and he hadn't the time to do it. The chairman at this time called on Mr. Hennigan Rush.

Mr. Rush extended the compliment of the season to the ratepayers and thanked all present for the honor shown to his late brother, Charles. He told how his brother was always a believer in the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Mr. Rush hoped that all would join in being good citizens of the township and advised the ratepayers on election day to be careful who they elected, and he hoped there would be a tightening up on the work they were called upon to do.

Spoke on Problems

Mr. Coulter, nominated for Reeve, thanked his nominator and seconder and spoke at some length of the problems of county council. He also spoke of the work that had been accomplished by the road committee, he said that the work had been evenly divided. A new bridge had been built at Solphite. He said after serving seven years on the council that he was capable of stepping up and hoped that he would receive the support of the electors on election day.

George Jordan, also nominated for Reeve, said that he thought he was through with municipal affairs, but he had been persuaded by a number of ratepayers to enter the field so he had decided to let his name go on the ballot paper and asked for support.

Bernard J. Hunt, Tweed, was the only nomination for Deputy Reeve, so he would be declared elected by acclamation. He promised to do his best for the township.

Denis Fleming was nominated for councillor, and thanked for paying his tribute to the late Chas. Rual, said that if his name appeared on the ballot paper he would ask for the support of the electors.

Harold Varty also received a nomination for councilman and said he appreciated the nomination and said that if elected he would make a study of expenditures.

Mr. Varty said that if the farmers only knew it they could be in control of everything, he said he had never thought of the farmers going on strike.

Deputy Reeve — Bernard J. Hunt, acclamation.

'Miss America' Takes Husband

Litchfield Park, Ariz., Dec. 28 (AP)— A high school romance has blossomed into marriage for "Miss America" of 1949.

Marilyn Meseke, the beauty queen, married Douglas Cook at the non-denominational community church here Tuesday.

The marriage was a surprise affair. Only last Friday the couple had announced their engagement and set the wedding date for next July 4.

The new Mrs. Cook is a resident of Litchfield Park. She will be 19 next month. Cook, 20, lives in Phoenix, but has been studying art at the University of Chicago.

The marriage immediately touched off a discussion whether Miss Mercer would be able to retain her "Miss America" title.

Jacque, however, said it was her intention to go on "being Miss America until my year is up."

It has been estimated that the holder of the Miss America title makes in the vicinity of $50,000 for personal appearances, endorsements of goods and so on during the course of a year.

MARIO . . . in his distinctive feature about Food . . . What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

Roast goose is the annual challenger at the heavyweight holiday table.

It never completely knocks out turkey, but it puts up a wonderfully game fight, and on New Year's Day it graces many a festive board. A goose is a much maligned. Although considered one of the dumbest and most cowardly of barnyard citizens, it in fact sometimes give the lie to this impression. Tula's geese, for instance, are a breed noted largely for fighting purposes. Witnesses say they make a terrific fight game by comparison.

Wild geese, according to some sportsmen, are not only clever but noble. Witness the old story of the wounded goose, which, flying comrades kept the bird aloft with their beating wings.

But for what reason do people turn to roast goose for the New Year's dinner? Is it because the bird is such wonderful, rich and tender eating. Perhaps not. I suppose it should always have a tart fruit stuffing.

Roast Goose, Pineapple Stuffing. Serves 6-8.

Wash an 8 to 10 pound goose. Cut off neck and wing tips. Wash the giblets and gizzard. Place neck, wing tips and gizzard in slightly salted water to cover and simmer about 2 hours for Singe the goose. Pull out any pin feathers. Sprinkle or rub salt inside the goose. Stuff goose with pineapple stuffing made by combining 1-2 cup melted goose fat, 3-4 cup finely chopped onion, 6 cups soft bread crumbs, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon poultry seasoning and 2 9 ounce can crushed pineapple together with juice.

Pack stuffing lightly into goose. Don't overfill cavity or it will burst skin, as it expands during roasting.

Fasten loose neck skin back with skewer and sew shut or fasten together with small skewers. Pierce skin with a sharp fork in several places so that fat can escape during roasting.

Place on a rack, breast side up, in an uncovered roaster. Sprinkle with salt and white pepper. Roast at 325 degrees allowing 25 minutes per pound. Pour off fat from pan as it accumulates. Don't turn bird.

Make gravy by combining in a saucepan 4 tablespoons drippings with 4 tablespoons flour, add gravy stock. Simmer 10 minutes, gradually adding 3 cups of hot gravy stock. Simmer 10 minutes. Add gravy color. Skim off excess fat, if any. Add chopped gizzard and chopped liver. Add 1-4 cup dry white wine and

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Fred Ducharme, 34-year-old unemployed laborer shown here wearing a colorful cowboy-style shirt, has been charged with murder in the sex slaying of Verne Blanche Fisher, at Vancouver. The body of Miss Fisher, a 45-year-old spinster, said by her friends to have been an ardent movie fan, was found in False Creek Nov. 8. She was last seen alive at a theatre ticket office.—(CP Photo.)

Court Gives Lover Motorist Something To Remember

San Francisco, Dec. 28 (AP)—When Milton W. Gill kissed his girl goodnight, everything went blank.

Police say Gill's car rolled 400 feet down a hilly street and bumped into the rear of a parked car while the lingering goodnight kiss was being delivered.

"Were your brakes set?" patrolman Joseph Anaini asked the 19-year-old Gill.

"I don't remember," Gill told him.

"Was your car in gear?"

"I don't remember."

"Were your wheels turned into the curb?"

"I don't remember."

"Well," said Anaini, "what do you remember?"

"I remember kissing my girl goodnight," Gill told the officer.

"Here is something else to remember," Anaini told the youth, handing him a ticket for illegal parking on a grade.

ORDINANCE NOT CONSTITUTIONAL

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 — (AP)— A local ordinance banning sale of comic books on sex has been held unconstitutional by the Appellate Department of the California Superior Court. The court ruled Tuesday that the law would prohibit the sale of school books showing the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. The ruling was made in the case of a druggist arrested for selling a "crime" comic book."

KILLED SELF WITH BLANK CARTRIDGE

Signal Hill, Calif., Dec. 28 — (AP) — Mrs. Ruth Hamre, 43, killed herself Tuesday with a blank cartridge. Ration Diamonds Now in Demand Thru Devaluation

London, Dec. 28—(CP)—London's diamond centre, Hatton Garden, has begun a rationing plan for rough diamonds because of the huge demand from all parts of the world since devaluation.

Following devaluation of Sterling, Hatton Garden experts found stocks of rough diamonds became worth nearly half as much again. Some buyers who ordered up to £100,000 ($310,000) worth were told they could only have supplies to the value of £10,000 or £20,000.

Says Decline in Breakfast in UK Affects Building

London, Dec. 28—(CP)—Lord Hawke believes a decline in the British breakfast is having an adverse effect on housebuilding in Britain. The Conservative Peer told the Lords he build a semi-detached house took 3,131 man hours now compared with 1,833 man hours before the war. The "alarming deterioration" he believed was due to the difference between the more substantial pre-war breakfasts and the present-day breakfasts of manual laborers. They were a factor in reducing output and led to innumerable breaks for cigarets and tea.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Those pesky Kingston N'lons are here tonight as guests of the Diesel Electrics in a Senior "B" tilt. Those names from Kingston, remember, jolted our prides right out of their socks last season when we figured everything was in the bag. And they're just as dangerous this season according to all reports. They have the old reliable Udy Udall in the nets with Joyce, Martineau, Walter Greene, Ken Murphy, Aikens of all sorts, Partis and the other potent members of a dangerous powerhouse. It is expected Keith MacDonald and other injured players will be back in harness for the Dee-Zee's tonight, and they'll probably need 'em. It should be quite a spiffy tilt, a good dessert after that bloating yuose guys helped yourselves to over the holiday.

"The shouting and the tumult dies. The captains and the kings depart," The turkey's carcass lonely lies; And headache powders play their part . . . It was a merry Christmas for all concerned as far as this corner can figure out . . . We want to thank all youse guys and gals for the swell cards, good wishes, and the fag flat fifties . . . There was no real damage done as far as Murgairoyd ice office was, can discover . . . He did tell us of a guy who tap-danced atop a taxi-cab and it took all the neighbors to coax him to descend from his Bojangles platform . . . The guy was high all right, in more ways than one . . . No harm was done and did it was a Merry Christmas for everybody . . . Even the limbs of the law, we are told, were not too busy, and the kids on the street kept their tied-on Christmas packages pretty much to themselves . . . So it can be presumed the "13.30" club's membership did not swell to any appreciable extent . . . An accident up around Brighton way perhaps spoiled things for the hospital staff here . . .

There's nothing wrong with the Toronto Maple Leafs that fifteen new players won't cure . . . Boston beaten them 8-4 Saturday night and even the Bruins, with all their reduced waistline was yanked from the pipes by an irate Conn Smythe . . . What the heck's the Leafs need, a new act not enough publicity already? . . . Just try and buy a ticket from the Gardens . . . After all, it's good old Hockey Night in one or another of the other teams in the NHL take that Stanley pewter over for a change . . . Rangers lived up to their Christmas Eve promise and made another to keep their record intact by dunking the Leafs 3-1 . . .

Some of the fans have got the idea that hockey-playing Vern Goyer "is an old man" . . . In fact a lot of them are giving the 32-year-old a more or less good-natured ribbing about his age . . . For their benefit it might be stated that 'Jumbo' has just turned the 14th birthday and if that don't age them we are an unreasonable facsimile of the old bloke with the scythe and the whiskers . . . There can be a lot said in defence of Goyer, and also brother Les . . . In our opinion, with all the showmanship and heady hockey played by both men, there are none more steady players in these parts than these laddies . . . Vern, the big so-and-so is a natural showman . . . Sure he has a tongue and likes to use it . . . And does! . . . But in our opinion he's one of the best defence men in this district, and was a tower of strength to the CNR Diesels and is to the Diesel-Electrics senior "B" team . . . He's a big away and you'll miss his power and potency . . . Les Goyer has had a couple of serious penalties, but they were more of the accidental type than the deliberate . . . The unfortunate incident of a week ago when he clipped a player over the head was not deliberate . . . We do not condone such incidents but there are occasions when such a thing cannot be helped . . .

Vern Goyer is a scion of a well-known Belleville sithlete family . . . He saw his duty clearly when war was declared which some of his critics might remember with plaudits from . . . He served with the Royal Canadian Navy and did a creditable job both ashore and afloat . . . As an athlete he also played his part for the different phases of athletics of the district were . . .

* * *

He played football with the Navy team while in Halifax and the burly youngster caught the eye of Arscott and Lemonnis, later with the Dominion champion Toronto Argonauts . . . They called Goyer to Toronto and if our memory does not fail us, he played 55 minutes in the line with Argos the year they defeated the Winnipeg Blue Bombers for the Grey Cup . . . Goyer also starred as a hockey player with the royal blue and turned in fine performances on the ice . . . Since returning to Canada after the guns ceased their thunder he has starred in baseball, softball, hockey and football . . . He were the gold of the Cobourg Galloping Ghosts one season and helped them to the Dominion title . . . He starred with the junior softball and baseball teams here . . . He has been an outstanding athlete on all senior squads since he turned the junior age limit . . . Sure, he's a showman . . . Sure he likes to talk and in the heat of battle will rab with anybody . . . But with all these alleged faults, he is still a young man, if you call 34 young, and as we said before, in our opinion, one of the best all-round athletes in the city at the present time . . . Okay, you show us a better one . . .

Gluttied with turkey, it's a bit difficult for us to pound out the pillar this morning . . . And the weather dismal, dull and downright the entire holiday was not conducive to the best of joy-making . . . The big thrill was the son and heir unwrapping his skis, skates and whatnot, in which were some weird noise - making gadgets which well-minded relatives gave him, and which he used to all exceptable effects . . . Suffice us there'll be more pounds in the household if some Joe or Jane presents us with a turkey and "P. G. K. D." with a drum or skeddadled facsimile of a musical instrument . . .

PERSON WILL NOT PLAY

Boston, Dec. 28 (AP)— Johnny Peirson, the team's highest scorer, won't be with Boston's Bruins when they play Detroit Red Wings in a National League hockey game at Detroit tonight.

The young right winger suffered a severe shuffle bone Sunday when checked by a Chicago player.

He, Ken Smith and Johnny Crawford, all will be here in Boston while their mates still seek their first victory over the Wings in Detroit.

The Bruins hope to have Smith and Crawford back in action against New York's Rangers Saturday and Sunday.

Both Marlboro Clubs Showing Way in Races

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP)—Toronto Marlboros are 15 points ahead of the pack in the Ontario Hockey Association senior league and it doesn't surprise anybody. Scoring statistics released Tuesday showed four Marlboros in the top scoring places.

Sports Shorts From Britain

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, (CP) — It was enough to make The Ashes turn over in their urn at Lord's Cricket Ground.

Two women's coats hung alongside those of 34 men in the famed Long room, just under the four-foot-high painting of W. G. Grace.

No more than a slow bowler's run distant, behind the door marked "Committee Only," sat two women—inside the Marylebone Cricket Club committee room with the 34 men.

In all the 135 years that Lord's has been cricket headquarters, it was the first time women had been permitted into that hallowed room to deliberate on the national summer pastime.

The women were Molly Hide, representing the women's Cricket Association, and Miss A. F. Bull, representing Britain's school teachers. The meeting was the first by the M.C.C. inquiry committee which will investigate all aspects in and playing conditions throughout the country.

Chairman H. S. Altham, president of the Hampshire County Cricket Club, drily remarked: "We are making history today as you will realize ladies and gentlemen . . ." No formal report was issued of the committee's deliberations.

A young ice wizard who hopes to skate his way to four titles within the next few months is 15-year-old Michael Carrington, the prodigy of Queen's Skating Club at Bayswater, London.

When he was 13, he became the youngest boy ever to win the British national junior figure skating championship.

Soon he'll shoot for the interGold figure medal, a proficiency award, and is hard in training for the senior championship of Great Britain. In January he will compete in the European championships and in March he'll have a crack at the World title.

Masked Light, whose brilliant victory over the Aga Khan's hitherto-unbeaten Palestine in the Middle Park Stakes at Newmarket was one of the sensations of the 1949 flat racing season, has been heavily backed for the 1950 Derby, in which he rules a 10-1 winner-book favorite.

The colt is owned by E. Wroten, a Tyneside bookmaker, and is trained near Doncaster racecourse in Yorkshire by Norman Scobie.

Although the late Lord Glanely's Colombo was well-backed for the Derby in which he was third almost a year before Derby Day, 1934, it is unusual for classic candidates to be so strongly supported so many months in advance.

Pete Alexander Fighting Against Cancer of Ear

Los Angeles, Dec. 28—(CP) — The years have not dealt kindly with Ol' Pete Alexander, but the great pitcher never was a man to ask quarter.

And—ask the men who played against him—he never gave much, either.

The long-raw-boned Nebraskan who won 373 games in a 20-year national league career may be near the end of the biggest game of all. He's pitching against a cancer that already has taken one ear and virtually deafened him.

His words come haltingly from his hospital bed. Doctors have yet to report their final diagnosis, but the cancer—says his divorced wife, Amy—stems from sun irritation on his fair skin during his days as baseball great.

Nearly 63, Ol' Pete — Grover Cleveland Alexander in the record books—would prefer to forget about most of the last 20 years. Much of it, especially with poor health in recent years, hasn't been pleasant.

Baseball is still foremost in his mind. Answering questions which had to be written for him, because of his failing hearing, Pete told this interviewer:

"When I get out of here, I'd like to get the chance to work with youngsters and help them get along in the game."

For the last decade, Alex has bounced around from one odd job to another.

From 1911 through 1930, Alex's strong right arm worked for the Phillies, the Cubs and the Cardinals. He twice led baseball in wins, he won 28 games. He won 30 or more games in three straight years, 1915-17. The Phillies, in 1815 he set the national league record with a 1.22 earned run average; in 1916, 16 of his 33 victories were shutouts.

"My top salary in baseball was $10,000 with St. Louis," old Pete said. He started with the Phillies for $1,500 and was boosted to $2,000 after winning 28.

While never in the big money, Alex undoubtedly realized a respectful total from baseball. But it's all gone.

Lindsay Still Leading Pack In Point Race

Montreal, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Detroit's Ted Lindsay has lost his lead in one branch of the National Hockey League's statistics—but it isn't something that worried him.

The speedy left-winger is the top point-getter in the league and last week he was also top penalty-getter. This week he still tops the scoring pack but Gus Mortson of Toronto has taken over the box penalty honors.

Lindsay has 16 goals and 21 assists for 37 points—four better than Doug Bentley of Chicago.

It's the sixth straight week that Lindsay has held the scoring leadership.

Bentley is ahead of all others in the assist division with 26 while Montreal's Maurice Richard is best goal-scorer with 22. Boston's Johnny Peirson made a great drive last week to take over a share of third place with Sid Abel of Detroit. Each has 32 points.

Richard has been in a minor slump lately and he dropped to a fourth-place tie with Paul Ronty of Boston. Richard, in addition to his 22 goals, has eight assists. Since Elmer Lach was injured several games ago Richard's goal production dropped off and he has failed to count in the last week of play.

However, Lach, star centreman of the Canadiens who is an expert at setting up a play of Richard's rifle shots, will return to action tonight in Toronto against the Maple Leafs.

Lindsay, who varies in his point getting with a tendency to flare up on the ice, was top bad man last week. But Gus Mortson now has 74 minutes of servitude while Lindsay has but 65.

Bill Durnan of Montreal and Turk Broda of Toronto are the top goal tenders with five shutouts each. However, Durnan has an edge in the low goals-against averages. His average is 2.03 in 332 games while New York's Chuck Rayner is next with 2.30 in 30 games.

OPEN FRIDAY AND SATURDAY EVENINGS

Gala ice revues, big-league stadium games . . . started on a January day nearly a century ago!

It was a big day for the Halifax of 1863. The Fort of Mulgrave, lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia, was to open the new indoor skating rink . . . the first in Canada's history.

At the Public Gardens, spectators thronged into the building. As the crowd was declared officially open a band struck up. Onto the ice streamed 60 costumed ladies to give an exhibition of fancy skating. Canadian indoor skating had been born. And 44 years later—in 1907—the Toronto Skating Club pioneered ice revues with their first Skating Carnival.

The Canadian Amateur Figure Skating Championships for 1950 will be held at St. Catharines, Ont., Feb. 7th, 8th and 9th.

Sportsmanship has always meant much to Canadians. Combined with teamwork, it has made us one of the world's great nations. Together, sportsmanship and teamwork keep your opportunities for work and play in Canada . . . unlimited.

Cripples Return to Action But Many Injured Players On Sidelines for Holiday Grind

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Elmer Lach, star centre of the Montreal Canadiens, will be back in scoring tonight after a lay-off since Dec. 15 when he suffered a cut foot in a game against Toronto.

But that was about the only bright note in the National Hockey League's roster of injuries All six teams are in action again tonight as the holiday grind continues until next Monday.

The Canadiens, currently heading the five teams who are chasing the league-leading Detroit Red Wings, now have only Hal Laycoe on the injured list.

Tonight the Canadiens play at Toronto; Chicago Black Hawks are at New York Rangers and Boston Bruins are at Detroit Red Wings. Detroit holds an 11-point lead over Montreal, but there's only six points between the second-place Canadiens and the last-place Black Hawks.

Lumley to Miss Game

Toronto Leafs still have centres Ted Kennedy and Cal Gardner out with injuries. The veteran and most prominent member of the hospital club is Detroit goalie Harry Lumley, stricken with intestinal flu following the Wings 6-2 victory Montreal Sunday. The Wings are expected to have Tony Sebastian of the AHL Indianapolis team in goal.

Lach will centre a line with Rocket Richard and Bip Riopelle and coach Dick Irvin has three other lines to start the Leafs out —Ken Mosdell, Floyd Curry and Cal McKay; Billy Reay, Leo Gravelle and Gerry Plamondon; and Grant Warwick, Bob Fillion and Norm Dussault to play up forward where needed.

Old reliable Max Bentley will centre Harry Watson and Joe Klukay on one Leaf line tonight. Ray Timgren has captain Ted Kennedy's place in between Howie Meeker and Vic Lynn. A third Leaf line will have Rudy Migay at centre with the wings split between Bill Ezinicki, Pim Mackell and Sid Smith

The Boston at Detroit game is a toss-up in hockey standing from the Detroit goal. The Chicago at New York game also is a toss-up tonight with odds favoring the climbing Rangers.

St. Louis Flyers Defeat Mohawks By 2-0 Score

(By The Canadian Press)

Ralph (Red) Almas chalked up his second consecutive shut-out in the American Hockey League Tuesday night as St. Louis Flyers blanked Cincinnati Mohawks 2-0.

Almas while - washed the Hawks last Sunday too but that game ended in a scoreless tie as his team-mates also failed to produce. The victory enabled the Flyers to snap a second-place deadlock in the league's western section with the Idle Indianapolis Capitals.

Meanwhile at Cleveland, the Western Division league-leading Barons treated a crowd of 7,203 fans to a dirgiay of might as they trampled Springfield Indians 9-4 in the only other game of the night.

Al Baccari fired the winning marker for St. Louis at 12:34 of the first period on passes from [illegible] and Stan Brown [illegible] near the middle of the final period.

Pete Lerwick and Ken Shultz were the big guns for Cleveland scoring three goals apiece. It was the first time two hat tricks were recorded in the same game in the A.H.L. this season.

Tommy Williams, Tod Sloan and Fred Thurier were the other Cleveland marksmen. Armand Lemieux led the Springfield attack with a pair of goals while Harry Pidhirny and Ralph Hosking fired singles.

Four games are on tap tonight with the red-hot Barons at Hershep, Cincinnati at Buffalo, New Haven at Providence and Springfield at Pittsburgh, Indianapolis and St. Louis are idle.

Sweeney Schriner Comes up With High Scoring Line

(By The Canadian Press)

Coach Sweeney Schriner has come up with the highest scoring line in Cape Breton Senior Hockey since Johnny McCreedy, Dick Kowelsak and Jud Cecil carried the mail for Sydney Millionaires in 1941.

The new line, all three, with North Sydney Victorias of the Cape Breton Senior Hockey League, turned back Dec. Menzies and Kent Storey. Menzies and Hall are from Winnipeg, the home town of McCreedy and Kowelsak, Storey is a Torontonian.

Storey has married into a first-place tie with Glace Bay Miners' Corey Brown in the scoring race and along with Hall and Menzies, has pulled Vics to within three points of the league-leading Millionaires.

The Schriner-Storey line has notched 91 goals and 88 assists—129 points in 41 games — which gives them an edge ahead of any other unit in the league.

The list of eligibles for the 1950 King's Plate, classic for Canadian bred three-year-old, numbered 65 Tuesday night, several more than at this date last season. The list is cut down gradually until the running of the event at Woodbine Park in Toronto in May.

Eligibles for the 91st running include the three favorites, Carr Hatch's Unionville, winner of the Coronation Futurity; Col. Sherman Sir Stromae, winner of the Clarendon Plate, and speedy colt McGill, winner of the Orpen Cup and Saucer.

It seems possible that the Soviet Union will send a Russian team to participate in 1952 Olympic Games at Helsinki. If this happens, it will be the first time the U.S.S.R. has ever taken part in this major international athletic event.

This was the interpretation given by Westerners in Moscow Tuesday in an important editorial in the newspaper Sports Sport, which is the organ of the committee on physical culture sport, attached to the council of ministers of the U.S.S.R.

First-baseman Earl Torgeson, who missed most of last season after suffering a shoulder separation, visited Boston Braves field Tuesday and signed a contract to play for the local National League baseball club next season.

Horace Lindrum, Australian cue champion, defeated Joe Davis, London leg George Chenier of Toronto 16 frames to eight in their 32-frame best of The Five of the World snooker tournament.

The Caliente race track management said at Agua Cliente Tuesday that jockey Johnny Longden and Mrs. Wanthis Davis have agreed to meet in a second match horse race here Jan. 14.

Mrs. Davis, 32, who has ridden in many country fairs and bush tracks in the mid-west and Canada, won in a race with Longden here a week ago. Their three-year-old mounts were rated as equal by the track.

Senior Marlboros Win 22nd Game In 28 Starts

(By The Canadian Press)

Two games in the Ontario Hockey Association last night followed the pattern of what has been happening all season. In the Senior 'A' Division, Toronto's Marlboros came out on the top-end of a 10-8 score against Owen Sound Mercurys and the Junior 'A' Dukes pressed their way to a 7-1 triumph over last place Stratford Kroehlers.

The Seniors' win was their 22nd in 28 starts and increased their first-place margin to 17 points while the Junior edition lengthened their lop-alot lead to 12 points in racking up their 21st conquest in 26 games.

In two other junior contests last night St. Catharines Teepees took over second place by beating Oshawa Generals 4-1 and Barrie Flyers vaulted into the fourth position by virtue of a 5-3 downing of Galt Black Hawks.

Marlboros and Mercurys split four counters in the first period of their game but Toronto pulled away with four unanswered markers in the middle session. In the big third frame the homesters and the visitors again divided scoring honors, clicking four times each.

Scotty Mair, Chuck Blair and Al Buchanan each fired a pair of counters for the Dukes while singles were pumped home by Hugh Bolton, Johnny McLellan, Don Rope and Bob Hazzard. Doug Gilbeside and Pat McEleary both notched two for the soundtrack. Buck Fernland and Bun White tallied the others.

Assert Authority Early

The Junior Dukes lost little time in asserting their authority over Stratford. They clicked four times before the Kroehlers replied with the opening tally of the middle session.

Toronto added three more in the same session but neither club was able to click in the finale. Larry Regan was firing the heavy artillery for the homesters, notching three markers and assisting on another. Ron Hurst followed with two counters while singles were collected by Danny Lewicki and Lorne Pete. Doug Williams got the only Kroehler goal.

Oshawa and St. Catharines split tallies in the first period. St. Catharines knocked in two unanswered markers in the middle frame and closed out the contest with a third-frame single.

McIntyre Scores Two

Jack McIntyre was the only two-goal man, notching a pair for the winners. Wayne Brown and Frank Martin accounted for the others. Ross Jones garnered the tally was scored by Bob Holden.

A three-goal splurge in the last period gave Barrie Flyers a victory over Galt. The hometown Black Hawks held a 3-2 lead at the end of the second frame but Barrie's closing drive netted the win.

Real Chevrelis sparked the winners with a two-goal performance while singles were popped in by Chuck Wood, Graham Towers and Mirl McCarthy. George Ford, Bronco Horvath and Jack Price tallied for the losers.

Three Junior games are on deck for tonight. St. Michael's meet Windsor, Marlboros play at Stratford and Galt travel to Barrie.

RECORD AMOUNT

Chicago, Dec. 28. (AP)— Professional golfers will shoot for a record $35,000 pot-of-gold money in approximately 40 tournaments of the 1950 campaign.

Announcement of the prize money awards, topped by the $50,000 "world" championship at Chicago's Tam O'Shanter club, was made Tuesday by George Schneider, tournament bureau manager of the Professional Golfers' Association.

Les Douglas 12 Points Ahead In Scoring Race

New York, Dec. 28 (CP)—Les Douglas, Cleveland's play-making ace, leads the American Hockey League scoring race by 12 points, official statistics showed Tuesday night. The veteran pivot man had a comparatively less week last week, collecting one goal and two assists, but still lengthened the gap on his pursuers.

Douglas has 19 goals and 32 assists for 51 points in games through Monday night.

Biggest gainer of the week was Bobby Carse, another Cleveland veteran, who collected seven points to climb into second spot with 39 points on 16 goals and 23 assists.

Deadlocked for third place each with 38 points are Roy Kelly of Cleveland, Johnny Chad of Providence and Springfield's Kelly Burnett.

Kelly tops the circuit in goals with 22, while Douglas has a big edge in assists with 32.

Wilson Will Race Miss Canada Under Conditions

Ingersoll, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)— Canada's challenge for the Harmsworth Trophy, blue-ribbon speed-boat classic, in 1950 but only if it is held Aug. 1 or later, it was announced Tuesday night. E. A. (Ernest) Wilson, Ingersoll industrialist - sportsman and owner of the $100,000 Miss Canada IV boat, will formally challenge for the trophy at Detroit today.

Wilson said Tuesday a letter accompanying the entry form to the Yachtsmen Association of America stipulates that the entry is "not to be accepted unless the limiting date is agreed upon." The Aug. 1 date was set to allow the 36-foot shark-nosed craft time for trials during the summer.

The boat now is at Gravenhurst, Ont., about 100 miles north of Toronto in the Muskoka Lakes district. Water conditions would not permit trials until May or June, Wilson said.

Underline Safety For Pedestrians In Street Parade

Kitchener, Dec. 24 — (CP) — Safety on the street for pedestrians and motorists alike was underlined in a special parade Friday, staged under the auspices of the Kitchener Safety Council in co-operation with police and other groups.

Floats, on which the wrecks of once fine cars were exhibited, were warning to drivers. Others demonstrated the foolishness of jay-walking and other pedestrian habits.

CABLES GREETINGS

Ottawa, Dec. 24 — (CP) — The Governor-General, Viscount Alexander, today cabled Canada's heartiest and most respectful" holiday greeting to the King.

The telegram read:

"My humble duty to Your Majesty. On behalf of all Your Majesty's Canadian subjects, I send to Your Majesty and Her Majesty, the Queen, our warmest and most respectful greetings for Christmas and the New Year. Alexander of Tunis."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Dec. 28 — (AP) — Babe Alexander a spokesman for Philadelphia's Phillies says this is typical of the club's spirit . . . Last season Mike Gollat was hobbling around on a bad leg and playing pretty fair ball in spite of it. . . . But when the Phils tried to send him to the army for repairs, Mike would conveniently forget the appointments . . . Finally manager Eddie Sawyer became insistent, so Gollat told him: "I'll go if you promise not to take me out of the lineup. It's too tough getting up here to quit now that I am up." . . . The Phils, incidentally, are confident that baseball's "bonus" rule will be repealed shortly, and when it is they'll ship bonus outfielder Stan Hollmig to Minneapolis immediately. But pitcher Curt Simmons will be retained on the theory that he's ready for the majors.

Honest Hearts

Frank Lawrence, owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, drew a big round of applause with this one during the minor league draft meeting . . . When his turn came to select, Frank arose and said: "The Steelers will not be indeed happy to select shortstop Pete Spaladoni. Playing with Lynchburg last year, this guy beat me out of both the pennant and playoffs. It's certainly a relief to have him on my side now."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Idbitzer

There is no limit to what you can say about any bridge deal. Never can you exhaust the many details that could be discussed. Each pass or bid or played card can bring up a new angle.

A deal that came out in a duplicate match was this:

NORTH
♠K 9 8 2
♥8 5 4 3
♦Q J 9 6

WEST
♣A K Q J 10 6 5 4
EAST
♥A 6 2
♦K 10 5 4
SOUTH
♠Q J 6 4
♥K Q J 10

The bidding was interesting and varied at different tables. In nearly all cases south opened with a bid of one spade. From there on the fireworks started and sparks flew in all directions.

West players stepped in with five or four or three clubs. Most ended at five clubs. Where east bid three no-trump and played there, two overtricks came in with no effort at all.

When west plays it in clubs, see what happens if north leads diamond queen and a red suit starts the second trick. One peach of a squeeze develops against north and south. Like this.

East covers diamond queen and south wins trick one with diamond ace. A heart return is taken with east ace. Or a diamond return from south is ruffed by west and east heart wins with the best trick.

West keeps reeling out clubs until he has left one trump, heart nine, spade ten. Dummy keeps diamond ten and ace with seven of spades. By this time north and south must watch their holdings.

South can keep a top heart against the west nine. Also his two big spades against the dummy A 7. North must hold diamond jack as a menace to dummy ten. He also holds two spades against dummy.

Right here is where west puts on the squeeze with the lead of his last trump. West must hold a diamond jack. So he sheds a spade. Dummy gives up diamond ten. Now what does south do?

Because of the west nine, south must hang onto the heart top. So a south spade is shed. Dummy then has both spade tricks when west leads the spads ten. Give, brother, give.

WEATHER, I said.

All rite, that will do, I'm completely exhausted from so much luxury, ma said, and pritty soon I said, May, ma. Do you think a ice cream cone would spoil my appetite for dinner?

Yes I do, ma said.

Being the sad end of the subject, but me feeling partly lucky on account of at least having tried.

Proving it's better to be sure than doubtfull.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was downtown with ma this afternoon on account of me needing another pair of new shoes already, and I felt like a ice cream cone, and I thawt, Heck, I bet ma would give it to me if I would only mention, Heck, I wish she owed me some big favor, I thawt.

And I said, Oh boy, ma, look at all the jooiry in that jooiry store window.

That's where I'll have to be content to look at it, in these expensive times ma said, and I said, Well you just wait a while, ma. Believe me when I get rich you'll have so much jooiry you wont hardly know where to keep it all to be sure it's safe. You'll have jooiry for your ears and your fingers and the frunt of your fingers and the frunt of your chest, I said.

That's very nice of you, I'm sure, ma said, and I said, And that aint all, ma. You'll have to have special swell clothes, or ells people are libel to think you borrowed your jooiry from some rich frends just to show off, so I'm going to buy a whole closetful of clothes from Paris or anywheres ells you want them to come from, all made out of nylon and rayon and pure silk, with a different handmade hat to go with every dress, and fur coats to match, I said.

This is almost too much, ma said, and I said, But that aint the end, even yet. I'm going to buy you 2 big automebeels, one open and one closed, decendings on the

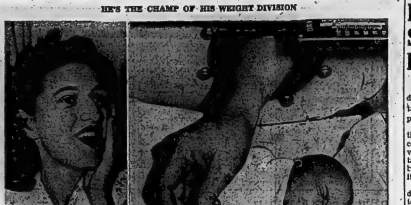
Father of Ten Children Killed, Struck by Car

Father of ten children, Vincent William Hartford, 43, of Orland, eight miles north of Brighton, was fatally injured Christmas Eve when he was struck by a car as he was crossing the highway in front of his home. He was taken to Belleville General Hospital where he died four hours later.

According to police Hartford had been given a lift to his home by Stanley Clarke of Codrington. He had wished the motorist a Merry Christmas as he stepped out of the car and was apparently watching a car from behind and failed to notice the oncoming car driven by Everett Newman of Brighton.



Coroner Dr. F. M. Dure, of Brighton, ordered an inquest and the adjourned hearing will be heard in Brighton on January 4th. The accident was investigated by O.P.P. Bonisteel, Brighton.

Christmas was saddened for the entire Orland neighborhood when it was learned that the father of ten children had been fatally injured. One resident commented "It certainly was a sad Christmas for all of us."

Already a public fund has been started by Brighton township council to assist the mother and her ten children whose ages range from three months to 17 years. The clerk of Brighton township, Owen Finlay has been named to accept donations.

With the funds raised from subscriptions it is hoped to make needed repairs to the Hartford home.

HE'S THE CHAMP OF HIS WEIGHT DIVISION

Buick Announces New 1950 Models At Lower Price

Flint, Mich., Dec. 28 — (AP) — More powerful engines, roomier bodies and lower lines mark the Buick 1950 model autos.

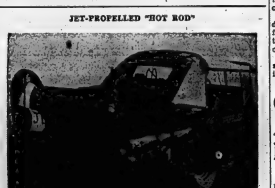
Styling and engineering details, covering 19 models, were announced by Buick Tuesday. Price tags lower by from $55 to $310 were announced on seven of them in the super and roadmaster lines.

An entirely new engine has been produced for the super series.

Buick is adding a deluxe model to its special series, the Buick Torque-converter transmission continues standard on the big roadmaster models and is optional on the super and special series.

Adapted to the roadmaster and super series is the combination grille and bumper guards introduced several months ago on Buick's new special series cars. With this treatment Buick has been able to shorten over-all length of the super and roadmaster models by slightly more than five inches without curtailing the wheelbase.

In styling the new cars retain Buick's characteristic full tapers through front fenders flowing through the entire body length. The new body styles are called fastback and tourback. The jetback is an ultra-streamlined body with a sweeping back, is used in four door, six passenger sedans as well as two door designs in the special series.



The tourback styling, which contrasts sharply with the sweep back lines, provides generally roomier dimensions. It is used in the four door models in the super and roadmaster series. The two-door models are in the jetback type.

Buick claims increased hip-width in all the new bodies. It adds that by relocating the rear seats farther ahead of the rear axle more headroom is given in the tourback models and that it has been possible also to lower the rear roof lines on all models.

Push button doorlocks are used on all the new cars. The instrument panel has been redesigned to place all dials and gauges more directly in front of the driver.

Compression ratio of the powerplants in all Buick cars has been stepped up to 7.2-to-1.

JET-PROPELLED "HOT ROD"

The very latest in "hot rods" is this jet-propelled, 15-year-old auto, remodelled by John R. Mitchell of Grand Prairie, Texas. A rear sign warns autoists and pedestrians not to get too close when the jet is in operation. The car is expected to drive traffic crazy in cities and congested areas, costs about 2-3 cents a mile to operate.— Central Press Canadian.

Industry Given Some Tax Relief By Regulations

Ottawa, Dec. 28 (CP)—Canadian industries are given some tax relief in new regulations published Tuesday.

In effect, the change means that an industry won't pay income tax on money which it invests in a plant. It would pay tax on profits from the plant but not on the money put into it to build it.

Although the announcement didn't say so, the step is believed to be intended to encourage building and upkeep of plants. The regulations were outlined in a special issue of the Canada Gazette.

The relief is accomplished by allowing a company to charge increased amounts for depreciation on which no income tax is charged.

V. W. T. Scully, Deputy Minister of Revenue, explaining the regulations at a press conference, said that previously the ministers of national revenue had discretionary power to fix the rates of depreciation.

Under the new regulations the discretionary power is taken away from the minister. The regulations fix specific rates of depreciation and depletion.

The rates are on a sliding scale, and vary from different industries and properties.

Good Business Ahead For at Least 6 Months

New York, Dec. 28—(AP)—High level, steelmaking operations, at 85 to 93 per cent of capacity, will continue through March, the Iron Age, metalworking trade weekly, says today.

Operations in the current holiday-shortened week were placed by the publication at 85.5 per cent.

Prediction of high output through March, says the Iron Age, is based in part on the belief that automobile manufacturers are optimistic about the immediate future, see good business ahead for at least six months.

The steel industry winds up 1949 with total production close to 77,200,000 net tons of ingots and steel for castings, the Iron Age reports, while finished steel shipments will exceed 57,000,000 net tons.

This, it notes, was not a record year but was 14,000,000 tons better than the boom year of 1929.

Forty-Five Meet Accidental Death During Holiday

Forty-five persons met accidental death in Canada during the long Christmas holiday weekend.

Traffic accidents accounted for 18 victims, a Canadian Press survey shows. Eight died in fires and nine were killed in other mishaps.

Bulk of the fatality list was recorded in Ontario, where 23 persons were killed. British Columbia was second with 13; Quebec, five; Nova Scotia, four; New Brunswick and Alberta with one apiece.

Two persons were killed in Ontario Tuesday—the last day of the long holiday.

TWO CARS DEMOLISHED

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Two automobiles were demolished but their occupants escaped uninjured in separate railway crossing accidents in this Eastern Ontario town Tuesday.

Eric Wright of Napanee told police he leaped from his truck when it stalled on a level crossing seconds before an east-bound freight train collided with it. A car driven by Joe Fardella of Cobourg grazed the side of a westbound freight earlier at the same crossing. Fardella and three passengers were not hurt.

OCCUPANTS SUFFER BRUISES

Campbellford, Ont., Dec. 28 — (CP)— Three district residents suffered bruises and shock near this Eastern Ontario town Monday night when their car plunged down a 20-foot embankment during a dense fog and overturned.

William McLaren, 60, and his wife of nearby Frankford, and their daughter, Mrs. Alexander Kennedy of Campbellford, were in the car. They broke the glass and climbed out the window.

Hand Removed Girl Thought Prayer Could Save

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 28 (AP) —Betty Lou Marbury undergoes surgery today for removal of the hand she hoped prayer would save.

Her faith and courage were unshaken.

"If the Lord wants my hand, that's all right with me," she said.

Doctors decided only an amputation could save the life of the 10-year-old farm girl. She is suffering from a malignant bone tumor on the third finger of her right hand. The amputation is designed to keep the malignant condition from spreading through the bloodstream.

Her father, Clay Marbury, broke the news to her gently Monday afternoon. She submitted to hospital. He told her they could die if the hand is not removed.

"She wasn't a child when she heard that," he said. "She was a grown-up woman."

Betty's doctor announced the decision Tuesday night to the Memphis Commercial Appeal. It was to the newspaper that the pretty fifth-grader wrote for prayer when she learned Nov. 30 her hand might be amputated just after Christmas. News services spread the story through the continent.

The response was immediate. Churches held special prayers for her. She got thousands of letters and gifts.

She agreed with statements of many ministers who said it might not be God's will that the hand be saved. "If it must go," she said, "there's a purpose to it."

The child's scrawled letter prompted an anonymous New Yorker to have her sent to Boston Children's Hospital last week. Physicians there agreed with the diagnosis.

Frankford Lions Club sponsored another fine party for the boys and girls of the village Thursday night. Movies were shown, free of charge, and bags of nuts and candies were given out to the kiddies. Santa Claus was on hand to add his bit of good cheer to the party. The citizens and children of the village have great praise for the way in which the Lions Club organized and presented this party to the younger members of the community.

RED FLAG HOISTED

Hong Kong, Dec. 28 (AP) — The Red flag of communism was hoisted today over headquarters of Hong Kong's slowdown-striking streetcar workers. Riot squads were called out.
The Hong Kong Tramway Company hailed the workers' go-slow tactics as "unlawful" — all trolleys from leaving car barns this morning. Hundreds of shouting demonstrators milled about the barns. There were no immediate reports of violence, however.

Six Months to Live

By Nancy Carden

In spite of her dislike of this man, Ann gave a faint cry of delight as she scanned the message. Perhaps she was indeed wrong in her judgment of Harper. Here in this vast continent, where she felt so dreadfully alone, it would be a comfort, to have his near. He would know who the best specialists were. If only he were here now. She looked at her watch. It was already ten o'clock. The night arrive any minute.

Tiptoeing lightly towards her friend's room, she gently opened the door. Jenkins rose from her chair near the bed and, with a warning finger beckoned her to remain where she was. Closing the door softly, she whispered, "She's asleep now, and that's the best thing for her."

Quietly Ann told Jenkins the news. "Dr. Thomson says the specialist should be here shortly and of course the minute Mr. Harper comes I'll ask him, who's the best specialist. I know he'll help us. Now, if you'll go and rest for a bit I'll gladly stay with aunt Margaret."

"Oh, I'm not tired, Besides, I'm accustomed to taking care of her, Miss Mary, so I'd rather not leave her just."

"Well send for me whenever you need me. I shall stay right in my room."

An hour later Harry Harper declared: "There isn't a better man in the country than Dr. Payne. Thomson knows his business, all right, and showed his sense in getting him. Now be sure and let me know if there is anything I can do for you or your aunt."

"That's very kind of you," answered Ann, "for it's dreadful to have any one else in a foreign land. I know aunt Margaret will appreciate your thoughtfulness."

"Oh, that's nothing. I'll get a room in the hotel and don't hesitate to send for me any hour of the night if you need me."

In the afternoon Miss Whiting sent for her niece. There was a little color in her cheeks and she drew look about her that had relaxed. "I'm so glad you're better, aunt Margaret."

"Yes, dear," she whispered plaintly as she took Ann's hand in hers. "I feel much better."

"That's good. Mr. Harper arrived this morning. He's so sorry to hear you're sick, but he wanted me to tell you not to worry but to take all the time you need to get better."

"I'm afraid it will be quite a few days before I can get up. I think I'll go to sleep now. It's strange how drowsy I get."

Ann smoothed the pillows and straightened the light coverlet.

"You've been such a comfort to me, Mary dear," and a smile hovered about her lips as Miss Whiting closed her eyes.

Ann dined quietly in her room and at ten o'clock gave Harry Harper a report about her aunt. She still looked about the same. The excruciating pain had gone, but a great weariness seemed upon her She dozed fitfully while the devoted Jenkins stayed by.

Ann peeped into her aunt's room once or twice. The night light burned dimly, and Jenkins sat immobile in her chair. Miss Whiting looked so weary and careworn that tears came to Ann's eyes.

Quietly she stole away. She might as well lie down. Perhaps Nature's demands would compel Jenkins to give up her faithful watch tomorrow. Relieved of into a deep sleep. Suddenly dreadful dream she had or had something happened! She reached for the switch as her door was flung open and Jenkins, half sobbing half moaning said: "She passed."

"Oh," cried Ann, "quick call the doctor, maybe you're mistaken."

Snatching up her negligee, she darted to her aunt's room. Then she burst into tears.

Half an hour later Ann was telling wide-eyed things with Harry Harper. "I must send a cable to my lawyer. No, she has no other relatives but me." Then suddenly the horror of her predicament burst upon her. She was trembling. She buried her face in her hands. "Oh, what shall I do?" she cried as her fingers toyed with the locket about her neck.

"I'll attend to these matters. Give me the address of her lawyer. Doubtless he can advise us about her wishes."

Then, as Ann still sobbed fitfully, Harper took her hand. "There's something else on your mind, isn't there?"

For a moment all her old hatred of this man rose up. Ann drew her hand away from him. How dare he touch her? But Harper said quietly, "now if you'll only confide in me, I'm sure I can help you." Ann did not make a move as he continued. "I know I can, but first I want to tell you something."

Ann drew back in horror from him. "What could he tell her? Was he going to propose to her, too? How could he at a time like this? Only Dr. Payne had been there he would understand. Harry Harper was speaking again. Well she supposed she'd have to listen to him.

"I know what I'm going to tell you will surprise you, but remember, although I've had my suspicions for some time, it was only when you dropped your locket that they were confirmed and it was not until then that I knew who you really were."

A look of terror spread across Ann's face.

"Don't be afraid. I never mentioned my suspicions to any one, not even your aunt, me at first. I thought there was some mystery in the affair behind it. When the pearls disappeared I wondered if I'd been mistaken about you. I don't deny I watched you rather closely. I thought you were all right, and when I got on the crooks I knew you were clear. Then when you dropped your locket and I picked it up and you showed me the picture of your Mother, why Ann Hampton, she was my mother, too."

"What!" exclaimed Ann, incredulously as she fixed her eyes on the man at her side.

"Yes, I am Harold Hampton, but it's many a year since I dropped that name. In fact, there's a long story connected with it, little sister, I'll tell it to you some day, if I may."

The anger of indignation burned themselves out of Ann's eyes as she studied the face of the man before her. "I should never have known you," she said. "Are you really my brother?"

"Yes," he answered. Then, opening his pocketbook, Harper showed Ann a faded photo. "You've seen that before?" he questioned.

"Oh, yes," said Ann, as she recognized a picture of her mother still a young woman, holding Harold in her arms.

"I've always carried this with me, for mother never lost faith in me, although I was a bad hearted. But I wanted to prove to her, even though she was not with us any more, that it was all a mistake, so for her sake I've persisted."

Tears surged into Ann's eyes. "Oh, Harold, can you forgive us?" she sobbed as she thought of the bitterness she had cherished against him, and how the anger of the family had driven him forth—a prodigal.

"It's all over now Ann. I've forgotten about it entirely. So now, you're going to let me help you, aren't you?"

Harold's words brought Ann back to the present and the thought of the still figure of her supposed aunt. What strange fate had brought her brother to her side in the hour of need? "Of course I am, Harold," she whispered, as he took her tenderly in his arms.

"Oh, but I'd never dream of telling that," thought Ann Hampton, when her brother said she had better make her home with him. They were driving quietly back to the hotel after Miss Whiting's funeral for her lawyer had cabled them that she wished to be buried where she died. It had certainly simplified matters for Ann, and with her brother's help everything had gone all right.

The faithful Jenkins was already packing up her mistress' belongings in preparation for her long trip home. Ann had told her the truth of the situation, but Jenkins thought to herself that it was a wise stroke of providence. Certainly no one could have been kinder than Ann to her supposed aunt, while Jenkins had always delighted in the opportunity of serving the girl whose lovely red hair was an inspiration to her.

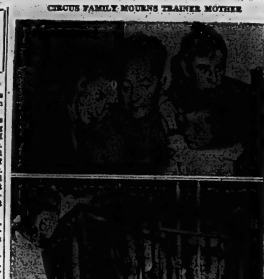
"It's the logical thing for you to do," remarked her brother as he opened his cigaret case. "You can have everything you wish. You'd be surprised how comfortable it is on a farm, and we've some nice neighbors too. We enjoy life there. It's not such a mad rush as you go in for in New York, but, after all, what does that do for you?"

Ann was silent for a moment. It was bad for the health—that everlasting mad rush that was so vital a part of life in a big city. But somehow of late she had forgotten there was such a thing as health to be considered. She felt so well and fit. So much had happened of late that she hadn't had any time to think of herself.

Undoubtedly this man at her side was really her brother. He had told her the strange tale of his life, and she felt now, even if she had no other proof, that he was indeed the once supposed black sheep of the family.

"Well, I must have a little time to consider it" Ann answered. "Of course it's awfully kind of you to offer me a home and everything else," she added as she saw a hurt look creep into his eyes. Was this successful brother of hers a lonely man in spite of all his success, and did the ties of blood still call to him, although he had done everything to banish such considerations from his mind?

Two days later Harry Harper said goodbye to his sister, Ann was not yet ready to acquiesce to the arrangements he had suggested to her. He had some business to transact in Spokane, and it was decided that she should continue her trip as originally planned, and later pay a visit to her brother's home.



As Ann passed through great stretches of green-gray veldt and noted with interest the occasional Kaffir kraals, new hope was rising within her. Once more she was herself. During the last few months every move she made had to be considered. She congratulated herself that it had not been so hard after all, and what a difference it had made on Mary.

Armed Men Tie up Couple, Take Cash and Watches

Sudbury, Dec. 28, (CP)—Striking swiftly and "showing no fear," three masked men held up the Chapman Bros. Ltd., jewelry store here Tuesday night and escaped with approximately $1,000 in cash and several thousand dollars worth of men's and women's wrist watches, lighters and women's diamond rings.

Police have a dragnet out for the men extending to cities east and west of Sudbury. Two of the men are believed to have been taken to North Bay in a Sudbury taxi, while one of the robbers is still believed to be in the city.

R. C. Chapman and his wife were in the store alone when the three men knocked on the front door about 9:30 p.m. They had just closed the store for the night. Chapman said that after he opened the door as the men had been in looking at wrist watches Thursday night and promised to return the next day.

Chapman said the robbers tied him and his wife to chairs, while they collected their loot, but the bonds were loose enough to enable them to free themselves and call police a few minutes after the robbers left.

X-1 Rocket Plane Flies 2,000 M.P.H. Says Newspaper

Three Times Speed of Sound Attained in Stratosphere

Los Angeles Dec. 29 (AP)—A United States air force plane is reported to have flown almost 2,000 miles per hour—three times the speed of sound.

That's the record of the air force's X-1 rocket plane, says the Los Angeles Times' aviation editor, Marvin Miller.

Quoting what he calls "reliable information," Miller today said the X-1 had reached a speed of 1,950 miles an hour in the stratosphere over Muroc Dry Lake.

The speed was given to him as March 3, he said, or three times as fast as sound. Sonic velocity is 663 miles an hour between the altitude of 35,000 and 100,000 feet.

Miller story did not say who was at the controls, but presumed it was Capt. Charles Yeager or perhaps Maj. Pete Everest. A spokesman denied that there is anyone announced that Yeager would try to fly the X-1 up to 1,700 miles an hour, the maximum speed for which it was originally designed. Shortly after Miller said, he been testing the rocket-powered craft.

The needle-nosed, 21-foot-long X-1 is dropped from the belly of a Superfortress for its flights. It climbs almost vertically to about 40,000 feet before beginning its speed runs. Its four rocket tubes, with a total of 6,000 pounds of thrust, can operate for rightly more than four minutes. At the end of that period the fuel is exhausted.

Miller said a jr force officer in Washington refused to confirm or deny the March 3 figure.

On December, 1947, Miller reported that Capt. Yeager in the X-1 had surpassed the speed of sound. The air force did not admit this until six months later.

DEMONSTRATION SAID INSPIRED BY RED GROUP

Six Unemployed Men Arrested on Charges of Obstruction

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Mayor Hiram McCallum said today Toronto is one of four Canadian cities in which Communist "underground leaders" are using unemployed to "stir up dissension and threaten the country's peace."

He said "red cells" were also at work in Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

He said a demonstration staged Wednesday in front of the National Selective Service offices here on west-central Spadina Ave. was the first of a series planned by Communist organizers.

Six men were arrested in the scuffle and charged with obstructing police.

They were remanded today until Jan. 3 on bail of $500 each. The bail was reduced from $1,000 each when counsel for the men pleaded that they are all unemployed.

Mayor McCallum said today, "they (Communists) are making dupes of loyal workers and using them for subversive purposes."

Police Inspector Wilfrid Lewis, group's meetings informed the police department's special squad of the Union's plans. Det.-Sgt. Dan Mann of the special squad said Wednesday night the Union is linked with the Communist National Federation of Labor Youths.

Those arrested as police broke up the gathering were Raymond Collette, 34, Montreal; Stanley Wingfield, 21, Montreal; David Slack, 21, Fort William; Frank Levesque, 19, New Brunswick; Walter Column, 22, Montreal, and Charles Fine, 24, Toronto.

Police said the statement read to Mayor McCallum at last Wednesday's meeting with the unemployed body was drafted and typed in the Labor Youth office.

Norman Penner, director organizer of the Union, told the meeting in the Labor Youth offices, attended by forty persons, also denied knowledge of the formation of the group, and one described the demonstration as spontaneous.

The Union of Unemployed has been holding meetings in the Hall of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union (C.I.O.). A second meeting has been called for today at the Union Hall.

Human Brains Don't Die Quickly After Death

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)

Proof that human brains do not die quickly after death was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

This was shown by some grey cells in brains of babies kept alive for months in the nursery at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. The tissues came from babies which had died natural deaths.

In two cases the brain tissues came from unborn babies, which had died. One of these was an unborn infant about seven months old. The cells enough developed brain to continue living under artificial cultivation.

The report was made by Dr. Mary Jane Hogue. Human tissue cultures are part of a study of good health from conception through birth.

Can Read Equations On Einstein's Theory But Not Explain it

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Dr. Leopold Infeld, famed mathematician of Toronto said today he can read the equations of Dr. Albert Einstein's new theory of gravitation "but I can't explain them."

Dr. Infeld, who collaborated with Dr. Einstein on his work which "the evolution of physics" said it would take a year of study to understand the meaning of the new theory.

"It is like reading Chinese," he said. "First you must learn it."

Dr. Einstein has announced a new theory which he says explains the relation of gravitation and electromagnetism. It is known as the "unified field theory."

"Whether a theory has any practical application never can be answered — except by time," Dr. Infeld said.

3 MYSTERIOUS RUSSIAN SHIPS IN CARIBBEAN

Military Officials Keep Watchful Eye

Washington, Dec. 29 — (CP)— Three more mysterious Russian ships have suddenly been reported in the Caribbean area where the largest United States peacetime manoeuvres in history soon will be held.

The vessels are described by authorities as "fishing ships"—but without fishing gear and equipped with extremely powerful radios.

U.S. civil and military officials are keeping a careful, but diplomatically correct eye on the progress of thes ships in western hemisphere waters.

The three vessels are the Trepang, Peramutr and Chiaka, reported en route from the Baltic to Vladivostok by way of St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, the Panama canal and Honolulu. Authorities declared that those three bring to 18 the number of Russian "fishing" ships that have crossed the Caribbean on their way to the Russian important Siberian seaport in the last 1-2 years.

With the Chiaka in their wake, the Trepang and Peramutr put in at St. Thomas for supplies just before Christmas. It is believed they plan to put thru the canal zone the last of this week or the first of next.

May Be Taking Over

One informed source expressed doubt that the Russian ships' primary interest is in military information. He suggested the Soviet Union may be planning to take over fishing grounds that the Japanese once had in the area.

But in that connection, naval men recalled that the Japanese ships—like the Russian diesel-equipped schooners—often turned up in manoeuvre areas at about the time major exercises were getting started.

Last year three Russian vessels the Cimbar, Zabiaka and Globus, arrived at St. Thomas just a few weeks before spring manoeuvres were held there.

In this case, military planners are completing arrangements for and army-navy-marine air force exercise involving some 90,000 men which will be held from mid-January through mid-March.

Navy officials pointed out that the Caribbean route is the long way around for a vessel on the Europe-Vladivostok run.

It would be shorter, they say, to go through the Mediterranean to the Indian Ocean, and thence up the east coast of Asia.

MRS. NANCY BRACKEN DIES OF BURNS

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Severely burned in an east-end factory fire a week ago, Mrs. Nancy Bracken, 18, died in hospital today.

Condition of two other women, also suffering burns from the fire, was reported as improved by hospital authorities.

New Year's Eve Big Night But Will Cost Plenty to Have Good Time

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—It can cost a lot or a little to welcome 1950 in the big city.

It all depends on how you do it, and where.

New Year's Eve is the big night on New York's assorted night spots, and most of them have fancy plans.

Prices for the holiday night generally are normal, ranging from $2 to $5 per person. But a few spots charge $25 a person per head, including food and treats. The fixed figure doesn't include drinks.

Police have completed plans to handle the thousands who will jam Times Square.

The Waldorf-Astoria plans to have 10 dining rooms and cocktail bars open, with a maximum check-minute charge of $10 a person, plus tax.

At the Sumptuous Copacabana, the charge will be $15 to $25, depending on the table location. The specialty will be filet mignon and Jimmy Durante.

The Hotel Astor, with two orchestras for the evening, and concerts for the evening, will charge a general $10 price tag.

The Cafe Society, on Madison Avenue, the management will stop the show at 1 a.m. to serve all patrons with a "hangover stew"—an oyster, milk and pepper concoction.

New York State law bans the service of drinks on Sunday morning before 1 a.m. Tips and concessions have been made for toasting the New Year past that hour. On weekdays the morning cleanup hour is 4 a.m.

Dwindling Number of New Canadians Causing Concern; Immigration Plan Studied

Ottawa, Dec. 29. (CP)—Can grants—devaluation and restrictions may offer some form of inducement next year to encourage prospective immigrants from the United Kingdom to settle in this country.

But just what form that inducement will take, or when it will be put into effect is known to what officials estimate will be 90,000 this year.

Leading the decline was a sharp drop in immigrants from the British Isles, expected to be down about 47 per cent this year from last year's figure of 40,000. It is believed that when the 1949 figures are complete, they will not exceed the 25,000 mark.

Financial difficulties facing prospective immigrants from the U.K. is blamed for the large decrease in immigration from that country.

A high government source said Wednesday that the government has "a number of proposals under consideration" to try to offset the drop in this important Siberian seaport in the last 1-2 years.

With the Chiaka in their wake, the Trepang and Peramutr put in at St. Thomas for supplies just before Christmas. It is believed they plan to get thru the canal zone the last of this week or the first of next.

W.G. Jaffray, Publisher of Old Globe, Dies

Atlantic City, N.H., Dec. 29.—(CP)— William Gladstone Jaffray, publisher for 21 years of the old Toronto newspaper, The Globe, died Wednesday following a heart attack. He was 79.

Jaffray became president of The Globe in 1906 and president of its president and publisher until October, 1926, when he sold control of the newspaper to the Wilson Publishing Interests. The old Mail and Empire also was taken over one month later by the same interests. The two papers were merged and henceforth appeared as The Globe and Mail.

Jaffray was generally regarded as a "small-town" publisher. He retired to controlled the Globe primarily to accept advertisements for cigarets, girdles, patent medicines and cheap clothing. It denounced sexy movies and plays, and praised the novels of Sinclair Lewis on the grounds their author was an atheist. It covered the Toronto carnivalist who came to Toronto.

McCullagh, former publisher of the Globe and Mail, and one time worked for Jaffray as a circulation manager on the Globe. On one occasion McCullagh refused to cover a parade in North Bay, Ont., after selling newspaper subscriptions to a group of school children. Jaffray promptly sent for him and chided him for his behavior. He also was fired.

When McCullagh eventually left the Mail and Globe, he is said to have told Jaffray: "When I next walk into this office, I'll be buying the paper out from under you."

Britain Decides To Recognize Indo-China

London, Dec. 29 — (AP) — Britain has decided to recognize the Vietnam government of Bao Dai promptly will be told of it, they said, during the next or second week in January — about when Britain is expected to recognize the Chinese Communist government. British recognition of Indo-China means an acceptance of the fact that the Bao Dai regime exists. It could lead to full-scale diplomatic — de jure — recognition, which would mean the government's legal right to exist.

FLOOD THREATS, POWER FAILURES FOLLOW SNOW

Winds With Heavy Rain Blankets B.C.

Vancouver, Dec. 29 (CP) — Balmy winds heavy with rain blew through British Columbia during the night causing floods, power failures, cave-ins and slides as the province reeled from the most freakish weather in 20 years. The rains followed record snowfalls.

At Qualicum Beach on Vancouver Island driving rains caused an embankment and a section of earth and rock crashing down on an unoccupied summer cottage, pushing it more than 40 feet. Three inches of rain fell.

Winds sweeping in from the Pacific changed overnight from Arctic cold to tropical warmth and hit 51 miles an hour in Vancouver, snapping the city's 365-foot Christmas tree in downtown Victory Square.

For the interior of the province, recuperating at a crawl from the unprecedented snow, storm that laid a three-foot blanket of powder, it was high winds and rains meant only floods and silver thaws.

In a silver thaw rains freeze as they drench snow-covered ground, causing hazardous driving conditions.

Snow Level Drops

The snow level at Summerland 300 miles east, dropped more than a foot in 24 hours during the night, caving in roadsheds.

The rains caused power failures in the Upper Fraser Valley, Smithbrook, Agassiz and Hope were blacked out for hours until only partial service was restored mainly by emergency batteries and auxiliary diesel power.

In the Sapperton District near New Westminster the Royal Columbian Hospital had to use candles and small battery services. The B.C. penitentiary also was darkened as the rains snapped power lines.

More Rain Coming

More rain is in store today for most of the lower mainland and Vancouver Island. It may turn to snow in the already-buried mountains where scores of motorists are stranded. Highway 1 is blocked Hope-Princeton highway of the Trans-Canada highway.

Canadian National and Canadian Pacific trains are running hours behind schedule.

Telephone lines are still "out" except to Eastern Canada and even those have to be rerouted through the United States.

On Vancouver Island flashfloods in the Victoria area were inundated by the rising and bursting rivers. Hundreds of Victoria basements were flooded.

Minister Voices No Opinion on Rent Controls

Ottawa, Dec. 29—(CP)—Hon. Edouard Rinfret, Dominion Government of Canada, has voiced no "decision" or opinion on rent control.

Commenting Wednesday on a Toronto speech delivered by Canadian Press, of his speech to the Liberal Businessmen's Club on Tuesday, Dec. 13, the Postmaster-General said: "I did not talk of a decision on my part, nor did I express an opinion on the subject. The proposals will be put before the Liberal Businessmen's Club of No. 3, the caucus, Canada and to be presented to and decided by the Supreme court."

(The Toronto dispatch quoted the Postmaster-General as saying that the federal government take responsibility for rent control and housing over Dominion government will "do the best it can." It quoted him also as saying he had "no doubt" provincial legislation was authorized to administer these fields, by emergency legislation. And, in connection with the Toronto speech, "consideration of this legislation, that if would not like to have my decision by any other than my father," Mr. Rinfret is a son of Mr. Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret.)

Mr. Rinfret said Wednesday his address was a discussion of the spirit that animated the Fathers of Confederation when conferring various articles of the constitution. He had not in mind at the time, jurisdiction over rents between the provinces during time emergency, the federal authority had power to impose rent controls.

In discussing whether power of the Federal government over rents continues to exist until complete decontrol is effected and the situation restored to what it was when the Federal authority took over, he had said: "That again is a question that is before the Supreme Court, therefore each bother and I will not venture to discuss its pros and cons, nor to express an opinion thereon which I might be reversed by my father.

No One Killed But Some Injured In Serious State

Wrecking Train Carries Doctor, Nurses to Scene

Winnipeg, Dec. 29 — (CP) — About 25 persons were injured in today's train wreck between Medicine Hat and Bassano, Alta., but no one was killed, the Canadian Pacific Railway said here today.

The railway's public relations office here said it had been informed that some of the injuries were serious.

Arrangements were made to take care of the injured as well as possible on the scene. Some of the injured will be taken to Bassano, about 17 miles from the wreck scene, and others will be taken to Calgary, about 95 miles distant.

The railway office here said that the wreck had involved a passenger train and a train carrying baggage and express. The latter train had been eastbound and was the first to run into the wreck. The second section was carrying passengers.

The railway said that a doctor had been taken to the wreck from Bassano. The train had been made aboard a special engine. Arrangements also were made to send an auxiliary engine from Medicine Hat which would carry doctors from Medicine Hat and from Brooks. Roads to the scene are blocked with snow.

Railway officials said the trains involved were No. 2 westbound to Vancouver from Toronto and the first section of No. 8 eastbound from Vancouver for Montreal. The No. 3 train, which was the one carrying passengers, left Winnipeg at 10.40 Wednesday morning.

Roads Blocked With Snow

A despatch from Medicine Hat, Alta., said:

"Heavy snow which blocked country roads leading to the airing hampered rescue workers in attempts to reach the wreck.

"Details of the accident were lacking but first word indicated that the eastbound passenger train from Toronto was crashed into the siding at 7.38 a.m. CST (1.38 p.m. eastbound and running several hours late, crashed into it.

"An auxiliary wrecking train carrying C.P.R. officials, one doctor and nurses left Medicine Hat at 9 a.m. and was scheduled to reach the wreckage at 11.30 a.m. (1.30 p.m. EST.)

"Southeast is a siding on the Bassano-Brooks line, about midway between Bassano and Brooks. It is 95 miles southeast of Medicine Hat.

"The 16-mile country road from Bassano to the wreck is blocked by six feet of snow and numerous rivers. Hundreds of Victoria basements were flooded.

Man's Confidence in Self Failing Says Primate, Urging all to Repent

Halifax, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Most Rev. George Frederick Kingston, Anglican Archbishop of Nova Scotia and Primate of all Canada, said today in a New Year's message that man's confidence in himself is failing."

"The only hope for humanity is to turn to God and repent and begin again God," said the Primate. "The world is in a bad way. People is up to date at this half century mark. May it come as a flash of insight from the Eternal God for speedy and sinful world!"

He added:

"The beginning of the 20th century was hailed as the dawning of a new day in human history."

"What disillusionment there has been since 1900!

"The wonders of natural science have thrilled us but we have been rudely awakened to the terrible dangers of science wrongly applied. The escalator idea of progress has been completely wrecked . . . Social ills and evils instead of being eliminated, are spreading across large areas in the world.

"It is quite evident that we should not and will not turn our back upon science but we must look to the welfare and possible misuse of science," he added. But we must be sure that qualities of character are created in man which will enable him to control, rather than to be controlled by his own discoveries. The problem rests within man!

"Man's exalted confidence in himself is failing . . . "

2,717 VIOLENT DEATHS IN SIX MAJOR HOLIDAYS

Expect 330 Americans Will be Killed During New Year's Weekend

Chicago, Dec. 29 — (AP) — The United States celebrated its six major holidays in 1949 with a lot of whoopla and gaiety but there was a staggering toll of violent accidental deaths — 2,717.

And, the National Safety Council predicts, 1950 will start with 330 Americans being killed in traffic accidents during the New Year's weekend. It did not estimate the number of deaths by other accidents.

Deaths on the highways, in the air, fires, drownings, and a variety of other causes reached records over some of the holiday periods this year. In most of them, the traffic toll exceeded the figure established by the council.

The 1949 holiday violent deaths showed: 1,703 in traffic mishaps; 391 by drownings; 66 killed in fires and 556 killed in accidents of miscellaneous causes — including falls, airplane crashes, shootings, explosions and the like.

Here is a breakdown for the holidays:

New Year's (two days) — 309, including 207 traffic; Memorial Day (two days), 413, including 253 traffic, 97 drownings; Fourth of July (three days), 711, including 315 traffic, 256 drownings; Labor Day (three days), 704, including 394 traffic; Thanksgiving Day (one day), 170, including 123 traffic; Christmas (two days), 380, including 413 traffic.

The Safety Council has termed the violent deaths during the holidays a "slaughter," "shameful," "appalling," and "disgraceful".

After last weekend's Christmas holiday, when 380 persons lost their lives in accidents, council officials said the "slaughter" could have been worse.

The actual death toll for over the three-day celebration was more than that for the Xmas Day disaster of two years ago which killed 353 persons.

"Our holidays have become a series of death traps. In a week (New Year's) we may expect as other one unless the people have decided to end the horror days out of their holidays."

Householders Asked to Return All Milk Bottles

Co-operation of the Belleville householders in returning milk bottles is a plea being thrun out for their delivery man, is asked by the Belleville Milk Distributors.

Cost of milk bottles is approximately 11 cents each and their loss to the distributor is represented by heavier overhead costs and ultimately is higher cost of milk. According to the distributor there is increasing carelessness on the part of the householder in failing to return bottles to stores. In some instances they are thrown into garbage cans and taken away to the city dump.

Normally it is customary for distributors to make a bottle charge, but in Belleville this practice has not been followed. However, unless householders show better co-operation in returning bottles it will be necessary to charge for bottles.

There will be no milk delivery on Sunday, January 1st, as New Year's Day has been declared a holiday for the milk deliverymen.

It was revenge for the 9-3 defeat which the police suffered at the hands of the firemen a few weeks ago.

Former Cabinet Member Says Ralston Resigned At King's Suggestion

By JACK BRAYLEY

Halifax, Dec. 29, (CP) — For the first time a member of Canada's wartime cabinet has broken silence on a phase of the bitter and delicate conscription crisis. He indicates that the initiative for the 1944 departure of the late Col. J. L. Ralston from the cabinet came from Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King—not from his defence minister.

This and other hitherto undisclosed official glimpses of what went on behind the scenes during the critical reinforcement situation which rocked the country, were contained in a statement issued here by Premier Angus L. Macdonald, wartime navy minister and personal friend of the Col. Ralston.

Was Subject of Guessing

His statement on a situation, aired as far as security, the cabinet oath of secrecy and practical politics would permit in 1944 and since the subject of many unofficial and contradictory reports and guesses since, was occasioned by the latest published version of what went on.

This version is contained in the book, Mackenzie King of Canada by H. Reginald Hardy, a member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery at Ottawa. Right at the outset Mr. Macdonald says his recollection of the events of those hectic days differs widely from Mr. Hardy's report. In fact, Mr. Macdonald thinks any one basing his opinion in the Hardy version of the events would "lay down the book with an unfairly low estimate of the character and work" of Col. Ralston, his fellow Nova Scotian and brother infantry officer in the First World War.

Takes Issue With Stories

Mr. Macdonald's prepared statement, handed the Canadian Press here, took issue with stories that the resignation from the army of its field commander, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, early in 1944, was a device to save face for Canadian headquarters, Col. Ralston and the government; that Col. Ralston had used his resignation as a cudgel at Mr. King's head to get conscription; that the general staff had bordered on mutiny against Mr. King and his forcement policies and that the wartime navy minister himself had promised to stay in the cabinet and hold a sort of watching brief for Col. Ralston on conscription.

These have always been topics of keen debate among persons outside the cabinet and topics for un-official reports by writers seeking to clarify just what really did happen.

Mr. Macdonald admittedly made his statement a defence of Col. Ralston and he said only what he thought necessary to do that job. He did not elaborate some of his statements into which could possibly read a significance not intended beyond criticism of Mr. Hardy's interpretation of events.

Different Story

Of the full story, he declared it "ought one day to be told completely," adding: "it will differ very vastly from the pages of Mr. Hardy's book.

Just as a background: Gen. McNaughton now permanent delegate to the United Nations, left the field command early in 1944 and it was officially announced his departure was for reasons of ill-health. Mr. Hardy was one of the first reporters to interview the general when he got back to Canada and he quoted the soldier as disagreeing with some part of the official version of his health.

The following autumn the conscription crisis broke and Mr. King, as prime minister, asked Mr. Macdonald and Hon. C. G. (Chubby) Power, the air minister, to work with Col. Ralston on a solution of the problem of reinforcements for the overseas army. Mr. Power was ill and Mr. Macdonald made a survey in co-operation with general staff officers.

Situation Got Critical

The situation became more critical and the issue reached a climax when Col. Ralston left the cabinet and Gen. McNaughton entered. Gen. McNaughton tried to raise the necessary reinforcements through reinforcements in the voluntary method. This failed and after about three weeks it was decided Mr. Macnaught a number of home service troops—generally known as Zombies — for overseas service. Later, Gen. McNaughton was defeated in a Grey North, Ont., by-election, he ran again in the 1945 general election in his native province, Cape Qu'Appelle, was beaten, and retired from political life.

Mr. Macdonald remained in the cabinet until the 1945 election, then left the invoking full provincial field in his native province. He was appointed to the Nova Scotia Supreme Court where he is now sitting.

Mr. Macdonald was elevated to the navy from 17 to 633 ships and from under 2,000 to about 23,000 men in the war years, said he was completely unaware of any necessity to save face for Canadian headquarters, Col. Ralston or the government through the departure from the field command.

Did Not Press For Date

He disclosed that at no time did Col. Ralston press for a definite date for the invoking of conscription. To illustrate what the former defence minister was thinking about at the time, Mr. Macdonald quoted him as having said merely: "If a further appeal be made to NRMA (home service) men to volunteer, and if it fails, what then?"

Mr. Macdonald said Col Ralston never used a "nudge" to gain his end. He had offered his resignation as far back as July, 1942, but had either withdrawn it or agreed to the request of Mr. King's request. After the 1943 manpower plebiscite and contrary to some opinions, Mr. Macdonald said Col. Ralston did not consider that the result was a vote of confidence in conscription, at once.

"The difference which arose between Mr. King and Col. Ralston at that time sprang from a divergence of view as to the procedure to be followed in order that conscription become necessary at some future time," he said.

Mr. Macdonald also from "personal knowledge," said that Col. Ralston had agreed to resign in 1944 if the prime minister could find some one ready to carry on in his place.

At the time of Col. Ralston's departure there was no decision that conscription would be invoked. That decision did not come until three weeks later when Gen. McNaughton was summoned.

Used Word "Departure"

He said he used the word "departure" and rejected the word "resignation" in connection with Col. Ralston's going for the latter word did not correctly describe the circumstances. He added: "I have never considered that Col. Ralston resigned from the cabinet on the afternoon of Oct. 31, 1944."

He recalled the statements made in the Commons at the time Col. Ralston had said in his Nov. 1, 1944, letter that his resignation was tendered at the request of Mr. King. Mr. King had said that when he had informed the cabinet of Gen. McNaughton was prepared to assume the defence portfolio, Col. Ralston had said if that were the case, he ought to tender his resignation.

Mr. Macdonald commented: "Col. Ralston's letter of resignation was dated Thursday but the letter is a pure formality. The severance of his association with the cabinet came on the previous afternoon, it ought to be manifest that Mr. Ralston resigned from Mr. King and Col. Ralston that when the parting came, the initiative was taken by Col. Ralston."

He had never been asked by Col. Ralston to promise that if the defence minister resigned, Mr. Macdonald would stay on but that until conscription was well under way. "Until the afternoon of Oct. 31, 1944, when he ceased to be a cabinet minister, I had never heard of any other than that Col. Ralston in the position of Minister of National Defence.

Col. Ralston was a great Canadian, death or war's end would part him from us. He had given his life and given all of his great energy and effort for four-and-a-half years," Mr. Macdonald said.

Mr. Macdonald said the members of the general staff who had helped him on his reinforcement survey had lent him every assistance. His overview of the figures had been undertaken in an effort to avoid conscription.

"Col. Ralston gave us an absolutely free hand, and suggested that we carry our conversations with the general staff by ourselves, which he presumed, I think it is only the simplest justice to these men to say that, in my opinion, they made every possible effort to assist in the work.

"One and all, from the chief of staff (Lieut.-Gen. John Crerar) down, understood the position clearly. They understood the desire of the government to avoid conscription, if that were at all possible, and they gave every assistance to me in the attempt in which I was engaged.

"As one who had had some acquaintance with officers of all three services in two wars, I can say that I have never seen any officers whose understanding of the true relations between functions of the civil and military authorities was more correct than that of these men."

U.S. Federal Income Taxes Cost Family as Much as is Spent On Cars, Furniture and Appliances

Washington, Dec. 29 — (AP)— American families pay out as much for Federal income taxes as they spend on autos, furniture and home appliances.

A new Federal Reserve Board report on consumer finances today estimated that $9 of each $100 of United States income goes for Federal income taxes and each the same amount goes into purchase of the listed items.

The board calculations, based on 1948 data obtained in a survey taken this year, figured around $76 of each $100 is taken by "other consumer expenditures."

Lumped in that category were outlays for food, housing, clothing, medical care, other essentials, state and local taxes, recreation, transportation, education, and goods from rugs to fur coats. The balance of the $100 was credited to Federal taxes.

The federal income tax takes 13 per cent of the receipts of those in the top fifth of the income scale, the board noted.

The median middle - sized income of U. S. family units in 1948 was $2,840 and savings amounted to $75 or 3.5 per cent of income. The results differed by income brackets, however, working out like this:

Families in the $6,000 a year bracket saved $610 or about 10 per cent of their income.

For $3,750 incomes, savings were $235 or six per cent; for $2,000 incomes, $83 or four per cent. For lesser incomes, no savings.

Report India Will Recognize Chinese Red Govt.

London, Dec. 29 (Reuters) — India will recognize the Chinese Communist government tomorrow, it was learned today on good authority.

The decision of the government of India was communicated to the British government.

India will thus be the first member of the British Commonwealth to enter into diplomatic relations with the Chinese communists.

The Indian government, it was understood, had wished for some time to grant full recognition to the Peiping regime, but has held back until a decision was taken by the other members of the Commonwealth.

there existed in the general staff at this time a condition bordering on actual mutiny. Mr. Macdonald said this was "grossly unfair" to the general staff officers and that the mutiny was "confined to amongst these men who is incredible."

IN MEMORIAM

BURLEY — In loving memory of a dear father, Harry W. Burley, who passed away December 23, 1948.
He is gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year
It's our loving duty to remember
Days of sadness and tears of grief.
Deep in memory we see you sleeping
Peaceful may your slumber be Sweet
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed,
Ever remembered by his daughter

Moscow Charges 3,000 Chinese Were Infected

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—Moscow radio charged today that a Japanese germ warfare unit infected 3,000 Chinese war prisoners with typhoid fever in 1942 and then released them to start an epidemic among civilians.

MacKinnon Hearing On Murder Count Is Postponed

By REUBEN CIPIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 29—(CP)—Preliminary hearing of former Mayor Dan Jack MacLean on a charge of murdering Joseph Mac-Kinnon, one of the city's registered voters, today was postponed to Jan. 7 to allow further police investigation.

MacLean, until a week ago mayor of this steel city, seemed ill and in good spirits during his brief courtroom appearance. The request for postponement was made by Crown Prosecutor Donald Finlayson, and agreed to by MacLean's counsel who asked that the date be set as early as possible.

A coroner's jury investigating the Dec. 16 death of the 63-year-old MacKinnon Wednesday night returned a recommendation that investigation be continued. Medical investigation by coroner Dr. Hugh of MacKinnon's death was hemorrhage of a ruptured liver, produced by a crushing blow to the chest and abdomen.

Before a packed courtroom, Mrs. Hilda MacAskill, a housewife, testified she heard screams of "oh Jack" or "don't Jack" coming from the south-end alleyway just before the crushed body of Mr. MacKinnon, a 63-year-old semi-invalid, was found.

Police officer Alex Goldie, who went to the alleyway, said he heard Mr. MacKinnon moaning only "if I die. . ." as he lifted him up. The sentence was never completed.

Mr. MacLean, now lodged in county jail here, did not appear at the inquest. He resigned as mayor Dec. 18 and is charged with murder charge was laid against him.

WHAT MAKES WORLD GO 'ROUND, BY EINSTEIN

The results developed in the preceding pages appear to us in the natural extension of the general theory of relativity. As far as these laws may be supposed to describe electrodynamics, (Sic) corresponds to the assertion that the magnetic current density vanishes.

The electric current density is represented by the tensor

$$I_{\mu\nu} = \frac{\partial g_{\mu\nu}}{\partial x_\sigma} + \frac{\partial g_{\sigma\mu}}{\partial x_\nu} + \frac{\partial g_{\nu\sigma}}{\partial x_\mu}$$

or the vector density

$$I^\sigma = \frac{1}{2\sqrt{-g}} \sum_{\mu\nu} \frac{\partial}{\partial x_\nu} \left(\sqrt{-g} \, g^{\mu\nu} \right)$$

where I^σ represents the vector density of law's electric, and gravitational as all indices. For I^σ, the relation holds identically, (Conservation of electricity).

This is an excerpt from the recently presented "general theory of gravitation" by Dr. Albert Einstein. His theory, a sequel to that of relativity which "changed the world's outlook" by making atomic energy production possible, may, if correct and applicable technically, further alter all physical research as it tends to explain, by mathematical equation, reason for behaviour of particles and physics. — Central Press Canadian.

STIRLING

"Yugoslavia" Subject Of Address at St. John's Ladies League

Stirling — The December meeting of St. John's Ladies' League was held at the home of Mrs. Ken Mumby with a good attendance. The husbands of the members were also present.

The meeting was opened by the Rev. A. J. Anderson. The president Mrs. Burton Woodbeck, thanked the ladies for the box of fruit which had been sent her while she was ill.

The missionary committee consisting of Mrs. E. Kent, Mrs. Fred Pepperall and Mrs. Melville Tanner, was chosen to arrange for the nomination of officers for the coming year.

After the Christmas carol singing which was led by Mrs. G. Cherry, with Mrs. Harry Cherry at the piano. Mrs. Mumby introduced Mr. Trika who spoke on "Yugoslavia" giving a short description of the country. Mr. Trika spoke of the difference in the way people lived before the year 1945 and now. Before 1945 it was a peasant farming country, and after telling some of the customs and traditions of the country, including the betrothal ceremony, and the marriage fete.

Trailliarians

Mr. Trika told of the lack of freedom of religion and education teaching has supplanted religious teaching, people who go to church are looked on by the rest of the state, and are therefore discriminated against when it comes to buying food and clothing in stores as everything is rationed.

Mr. Trika told how communists insist that there is freedom, yet if one is on the "black list" one can get nothing or next to nothing in the stores. No written order is necessary to be placed on the list, so in reality, a communist regime is a slavery and terror. Everyone is no court of appeal and one is at the mercy of the secret police. It is impossible for a whole family to leave Yugoslavia to visit relatives. The communist party and his supporters are only around five per cent of the population, but it is not the question of votes, as there is only one ballot box on voting day, A communist one.

Help Comes From Outside

The people are living because help is coming in from other lands from outside the country

Mr. Trika's description of Yugoslavia was most interesting and it was regretted that there was not a larger audience to hear his talks on some of the time honored customs, and ways of life of the country and also on some of the religious and political trends, and problems of the day.

Miss Ruth Mumby favored with a piano selection "Jingle Bells" and "the Wooden Soldiers." Mr. Arthur Mumby thanked Mr. Trika for his most interesting address and closed the meeting.

Mrs. Ken Morrow organized eight games of euchre which were thoroughly enjoyed by all. Mrs. Ed Kent won the prize for the ladies and Mr. Floyd Armstrong for the gents. Mrs. and Mrs. Armstrong and Mr. Pepperall the Suitcase prizes.

Mrs. Mumby served delicious refreshments assisted by her committee, and a vote of thanks was made by Mrs. Ed. Kent.

Thanks Extended

Rev. A. E. Baker briefly expressed thanks on behalf of the congregation for their interest in furnishing the parsonage and the fine gift in the white Chevrolet. They worked together and with splendid co-operation in the organization. The excellent program of games around the Story of Nativity, the reality of the Christmas season and its thrill, which is the whole purpose of the service, was enjoyed as all joined in singing carols, the Christmas story and entered into the spirit of Christmas atmosphere.

The room decorations of the splendid tree was Mrs. Burton Morton's and Mrs. Coleman's Corners who assisted in the decorations of the church. Christmas has become commercialized and has become somewhat wasteful, but the Christ of Christmas will be remembered and characteristics as that compassionate love of the season. Christmas means one thing somewhat, it is that through the love of God, Christ was born and lived and died for us. Christ is closing this inspiring message with a "Prayer" and Christmas" by Charles Kingsley. After the singing of Christmas carols, the meeting closed.

During the social period, delainty refreshments were served by the committee in charge, a hearty vote of thanks was given to all who had helped in the evening's success.

The program of the afternoon was capably directed by Mrs. Saturday Bell, who opened with the singing of a Christmas carol and repeated the Christmas scripture lesson by Mrs. Charles Wright and prayer by Mrs. Ida Wright. Mrs. Bell then welcomed the W.A. with the pleasing solo "Holy Night" accompanied at the piano by the pianist, Mrs. Harold West.

BUSHING RIVERS AND STREAMS

Streams and rivers which for the past year and more have been greatly diminished in flow so that in many places their beds have been visible have taken on their old and natural appearance with the heavy and steady rainfall of the past few weeks.

As far as the streams and rivers are concerned the whole picture has changed with the water running off the land with that irrepressible urge which nature provides as gravitation leads the waters to the great reservoirs and the lakes and ultimately to the sea. Rivers have taken on the rolling or billowy appearance of the days when streams are in flood.

All this has meaning to the people of Ontario—power. Every drop of water that flows down the rivers comes either from a glacier in the far north or as a result of rainfall, the moisture having been carried thousands of miles by the air currents from the equatorial regions, from the oceans to begin that ceaseless round of performance by which the earth is refreshed with rain.

This winter the rain helps to spell relief from power shortage. That rains should come has been the hope of the Ontario Hydro authorities and in the natural turn of events their wish has been in part at least carried out by the processes of nature.

That the electric power situation will be eased as a result of the rainfall instead of in the form of snow can readily be understood. It is what the people too have hoped for and what they are satisfied to see realized in a form which may help in the production of electric energy to relieve shortages.

THE KING SPEAKS TO HIS PEOPLE

Many millions of people everywhere heard His Majesty King George in his annual address on Christmas Day. The annual appearance of the Monarch before the microphone is the occasion when most people are gathered about the family hearth for the great Christmas celebration has become one that is heard with rapt attention. His Majesty spoke of the family character of the Christmas observance and its lessons for men and women. "We would like to share our Christmas joys with you all, wherever you may be who are listening to me now," he said. "May this season and the New Year that is to follow it, bring to you real happiness. It is right that we should think first of our nearest and dearest and where there are children we are trying to make it a happy day for them. To us older ones the happiness of young people is one of the chief sources of delight. And as we remember this spirit of goodwill with us through 1950 it will not only make it easier for those around us, but we shall be giving strength to that older family of the whole British Commonwealth, which spends for its own vitality upon the health of all its members."

Words such as these prove the quality which His Majesty possess of entering into the hopes and joys and experiences of his people in so many different ways. To citizens he spoke of troubles of these times "which are harder than can be solved by human power alone." He stressed the great qualities of human nature—courage, perseverance, endurance, unselfishness and public spirit, the qualities by which in our long history," he remarked, "the sons and daughters of our race have met and overcome their difficulties and each one of us who day by day plays in that spirit to do his duty can surely feel that he is doing his share to win through these dangerous times, so that we may the more certainly and the sooner be equipped to play the full part that we ought to play in the world."

The great annual festival comes with new hope and faith as His Majesty as he urged that "we win for ourselves the strength to serve others by constant faithfulness to His purpose and be true to the kindred points of Heaven and home."

The message of Christmas is one that appeals with its power and brings new life and hope into the lives of all. His Majesty spoke for the spirit of his people everywhere in the world, of their courage and steadfastness in an era of distraction and anxiety. It was a plea to make the democratic way of life serve all by constancy and faithfulness.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

How soon will Santa come again?
The other day asked little Jane.

"Well first," I said, "must winter pass.
The snow and ice must free the grass
And dandelion start to grow,
With pretty tulips, row by row.
The robins must come back to sing
To let you know that it is spring.
Then, June must bring the lovely sight
Of roses blushing, red and white.
And next, my school bell's final chime
Signals the vacation time
When I'll be free to rest and play
And Santa will be far away."

"So long to wait for him!" said she,
"Why that seems like a year to me!"

A few weeks more, and you'll behold
The trees in robes of red and gold,
And ruby apples, juicy, sweet
Inviting you to come and eat.
Next, you must bow your head and pray
For it will be Thanksgiving Day.
A month from then, if you've been good
And tried to be as children should,
I'm certain, little Jane,
That Santa will be back again."

"So long to wait for him!" said she,
"Why that seems like a year to me!"

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DRESS INFLUENCE

There are those who think that mere dress makes the man, don't matter. But they do matter to a greater extent than we realize. You may recall that line in Sheridan's "Rivals" where Bob Acres says to his valet: "Indeed, David, dress does make a difference, Dave."

Dress makes a difference in many ways. It expresses personality and gives many a clue to character. A pupil of the great Sir Joshua Reynolds had this to say to him: "He was very neat in his dress when painting and used to say that Titian would put on his finest clothes to paint in." I recall wishing Wayman Adams, distinguished American painter, do a painting before the selected group—and he painted in evening dress.

There is something inspiring about the white clothes of doctors and nurses. They give a lift to the spirit. Neatness and cleanliness in dress are always noticed. A severely dressed salesman has counts registered against him the moment that he meets his prospective client. He is not, perhaps, not gaudy, dresser commands attention before he says a word.

One's dress standard should never be lowered. One should look his best and such a way as to be usually successful. The mere physiological effect of neat, carefully chosen clothes upon the wearer is very marked. They influence favorably one's attitude and have an silent power over others.

We all know the sad tale of that glamorous something that is attached to all properly uniformed clothes make the wearer conscious of his importance. But this is true of all clothes that are neat and appropriate. We feel better, and do better when well dressed. People can easily write themselves into their clothes.

Though I read it in my youth, I can still recall the description that a wealthy man of the first days of Daniel Webster as he made his historic reply to Hayne, in the U.S. Senate, ending in those famous words: "Liberty and Union, Now and Forever, One and Inseparable."

Firemen Aided Santa Claus

Approximately 50 needy children in the city and immediate district woke up Christmas morning to find toys underneath their Christmas trees—not from Santa Claus but with the good wishes of the Belleville Fire Department.

For the past several weeks members of the local fire department have been spending their leisure time in repairing donated broken toys and everything was in readiness for the distribution to the needy families.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance stated today that the number of toys this year was less than that of previous years, but that approximately 50 kiddies received the gifts. Names of the needy children were supplied through the Children's Aid Society.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

A PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR

Last January, when Eleanor and I stopped off for a week on our way to the Orient, Bill Goetz, production boss of Universal-International Films, invited us to his house to see his collection of modern painters.

As some of you may know, I've done a bit of collecting myself, and like every self-declared connoisseur, I'm not impressed too easily by the other fellow's possessions. Nevertheless, I was bowled over by the Goetz art treasures. In less than five years, the movie man had put together one of the finest private collections on the West Coast, and a quick mental check indicated there was the best part of a million dollars hanging on the walls.

One of the pictures he showed us was a self-portrait by Van Gogh, called "Study for Candlelight" — yes, the one the newspapers have been making all the fuss about—and as I examined it, I gave out with a number of oohs and ahs.

On the way home, however, I said to Eleanor, "I'm afraid Bill has been a little bamboozled by Van Gogh."

"I like that!" said my missus. "Just because somebody else happens to own an important picture right away you've got to start cracks about it. Who do you think painted it anyway—Al Jolson?"

"This is nothing to make small jokes about, Sadie," I said. "Goetz probably paid more than fifty grand for that hunk of canvas."

"Well, what's that to you about it?" asked Eleanor.

"Well, it's one thing," I said, "it doesn't feel like a Van Gogh."

"It isn't polite to go around feeling other people's pictures," said my missus. "You're just jealous because Bill has a more important yo-yo than you do."

"I decided to ignore my wife. And I kept it zipped until one night last August when I ran across a book that started me questioning the authenticity of Goetz's Van Gogh. I was reading it again in the next room, but I prodded her awake and triumphantly showed her the passage I'd found.

"Read this," I said. "Evidently, I'm not the only guy who has sold on Bill's picture."

"Maybe the editor of Time also makes bum buys like Goetz's," said Eleanor. "Go away and let me sleep."

Last month, as you know, the newspapers had the pleasure of rail ript more space in the papers than any picture since "September Morn." In a statement, Goetz's nephew refused to admit it had been painted by Van Gogh and the New York a committee of experts appointed by the Metropolitan Museum of Art unanimously upheld it down. A couple of weeks later Life ran a two-page spread with blow-ups of brushmarks, and reported that the dealer who sold the painting had reversed himself on the story that he had discovered it in a cognac crib outside Paris. "It now appears," said the magazine, "that the picture was not unknown at all but has, in fact, been knocking about from dealer to dealer for years."

"Well, it looks as if Bill'd yo-yo isn't a yo-yo after all," I said as I handed the article to Eleanor. "This time you've got to give your big man a little credit. He said the same thing Life is saying, but he said it a year ago."

This gave Eleanor pause, but it was not the pause that refreshes. "I'll give you credit all right—credit for being a false friend," she said.

"What are you mumbling about?"

"Bill Goetz is a friend of yours," Eleanor went on, "and for a year now you've been saying behind his back that his picture's no good."

"I never mentioned it to anyone but you."

"That's not the point," said my wife. "If you were a real friend of Bill's you'd have told him to your column and say it's a lovely picture, even if it cost a million dollars. How would you like it if you went around saying nasty things about your wife?"

"I don't see the connection," I began.

"Another thing," said Eleanor, "I don't think it's nice to tell people that a dead man's picture was painted by somebody else. You know Goetz' wife is going to fight back."

"Look," I said, "you've all kerflummixed about this—"

"Besides," said the minxs, "if you're such an expert, how come you're wearing purple socks with a brown suit?"

"All right, Baby," I said. "Van Gogh painted the Van Gogh, Time and Life are full of prunes and your husband is a four-eyed moron."

"That's more like it," said my wife.

Much of Interest Centred in Fame Of Baby's Mother

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Well, we all can breathe easier now that Princess Rita's baby has been born.

The tension of the watching world has been almost as tough as that of the Princess herself. The unceasing vigil maintained by the men in Switzerland reminds me of the birth of John Jacob Astor III in 1912. The late John Jacob Astor went down with the Titanic when she hit an iceberg, but his pound wife, who was expectant, was rescued.

Naturally the whole world waited with bated breath for the advent of the millionaire's baby. The New York Press established a round-the-clock watch over the Astor mansion to record the event, and I did my turn for AP. The newspaper gang didn't fancy the assignment much as witness one chill morning about 3 A.M. when a melancholy scribe turned and addressed his colleagues:

"Gentlemen of the press, this maternity watch will go down in history as a monkey on our escutcheon as newspaper men."

Few births in our time have attracted anything like as much attention as that of Princess Yasmin (meaning in Persian, I think, jasmine flower) Why? Undoubtedly much of the interest centres in the fact that the baby's mother is picture-actress. Miss Rita Hayworth was a Broadway beauty long before she married Prince Aly Khan and thereby became Princess Rita.

Then, of course, a good deal of glamour surrounds Aly Khan, heir apparent to the spiritual leadership of the great Mohammedan sect known as the Ismailis—a position now held by his father, Sir Aga Khan. Moreover, Aga Khan is reputed to be one of the world's richest men. Little Princess Yasmin can use big diamonds for marbles if she wants to. So could Mama Rita.

DON'T CONFUSE YOUR NERVES WITH YOUR ARTERIES

Complete relaxation, said Doc Brady, in a squib titled Beware of Relaxation, released for publication here Aug. 11, '49, complete relaxation away from it all, is the worst medicine the Wiseacres of sedentary life can choose for recuperation.

I repeat this, not just because I like to be contrary, but because I believe it is a fundamental truth and I want to disseminate the idea as widely as possible. For all I know although the title and/or the central theme of the lesson I sought to teach may have been omitted or so edited in the available space or editorial policy that the idea didn't get over to the reader at all.

The famous notion of flight from reality, as Norman Taylor expressed it, is the use of such drugs and drug habits of historical and modern times. Flight from Reality, Dusil, Sloan & Pearce), has always led people to indulge in narcotics (drugs and alcohol) and still leads many to the habitual use of such sedatives as the barbiturates and such sense-numbing drugs as sapiens and acetanilid. Today's addictions, including drugs, sedatives, narcotics and alcohol serve as a flight from or cure anything.

In a good many instances adults or middle age fail to obtain advice or treatment for what ails them because they are so credulous about "nerves" or "nervous breakdown" that they avoid early manifestations of C-V-D (Cardiovascular degeneration). Unfortunately the symptoms are generally find doctors who are willing to accept the patients' diagnosis of the complaint as "nerves" or "nervous exhaustion," doctors who waste little time examining patients.

Not all, but a great many of these victims of the "weak nerves" hokum imagine that what they need is just to get away somewhere and relax completely. Then: doctory agree — or else. It would take rare courage on the part of the doctor to advise such patients that there is no such thing as nerve or nervous or brain energy and that the nerves and the brain use only as infinitesimal amount of energy in performing their functions, combined with the energy used by the heart in pumping the blood through the arteries.

Most of the misguided folk who think that if they can only get away and relax everything will be all right, would be a lot better and happier if they stimulated the mind and body from their minds and cultivated some hobbies, pastime, hobby, recreation or avocation in which one takes active part. In other words they need to play the game themselves, and not sit on their inchal rear ends watching hired professionals play.

For executive and business people, white collar workers, students, artists and other sedentary folk should get exercise and relaxation playing some game, any game which requires active action instead of inaction, or do something in the line of physical exercise that will make for a daily walk of two to six miles, which will give you healthful action, play, work or general exercise relieves the tension, the nervousness, the irritability and the weariness a person gets from a sedentary life.

Answer—And vice versa. As far as I can learn it is hypothetical retention of or deposit of uric acid-sodium salts in the tissues in or near a joint—a fine old fancy which some doctors refer to, although precise chemical tests have long since shown that uric acid does not cause such trouble.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CLOCKS

clocks tick in unison, but they do not agree. Clocks through the ages have had as their hobby the collection and repairing of watches. The famous emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, Charles V, collected at last in favor of his sons and retired to a monastery to spend his declining years mending clocks and listening to their ticking.

The Emperor found that "all clocks were different, and this he spoke of with regret to his life-long attempt to make everybody do exactly the same thing and think as he did.

As he spoke of his career, in terms of great disgust. His trouble was that he tried to make now in Chicago, Berlin, Hong Kong.

History has been written, and, in the past, has been taught, as a history of human actions rather than as an "examination of human motives." Many historians today say History has dedicated itself to the recording of the futility of nearness, of events. Nothing definitely history more than to get successful, and such a one to read and bring on another, in its decline. Such a history—and such a decline—is the beginning of a new civilization.

But when you accept the great teacher's advice to read history and biography, you are not saying you read them, but as something the conquerors have written about people now," you discover that there are no chapters. It is a continuous story in which one kind of blood, the retreat of armies, the collapse of granaries, are not even the ends of paragraphs. Caesar is going to be stabbed this afternoon; Savonarola is preaching at 8 p.m. over a coast to coast hook-up; Napoleon is still at large.

is utterly impossible to make men to be moulded in fact should be made—to strike at the same time.

There are certain great principles to which men must give heed if they would live and they avoid ignominious failure. The whole human mind must strike together, like a series of well-synchronized clocks, if the highest principles are concerned. But they cannot be made to tick together. Each person has a life of his own, a personality which reflects his life, a life which is individual mind and nature. So the philosophy of life is not to make men tick

Carry this philosophy into life, and you will find that it will help

TRENTON
Only a Few Minor Crashes Mar Holiday

Trenton — Only a few minor car accidents and small number of offenders were on record at the local police station as Trenton authorities experienced one of the quietest Christmas weekends in the annals of their law-making history.

While warm mild weather erased all indications of a white Christmas, an easy falling rain brought the temperatures up even higher as the ice left the river completely and open water appeared far out into the bay. Only a few of the dozen or more fish shanties that dotted the mouth of the river a week ago had been hauled to safety by Saturday and the remainder have floated down the bay as their owners contemplate recovering them and the method to be employed.

No Ice in Arena

Down at the arena Harry Coutts has been using every known trick to preserve what ice he was able to build during the cold spell a couple of weeks ago. His efforts, however, proved hopeless when the rain came last Friday and now his natural ice surface reminds one of a swimming pool. Even if temperatures go below the zero mark in the next few days skating has been set back at least another week, remarked Mr. Coutts, who has been making ice for skaters in Trenton for the last 39 years. Mr. Coutts went on record to say that in his long experience this Christmas was the fourth he can remember when skatery had no ice in the local arena. The local arena will not only be used by pleasure skaters this year, but by the teams of the Trenton and District Hockey League as well. There will be no O.H.A. competition in Trenton this year.

No Snow for Skiing

Out in the Murray hills the snow vanished from the ski runways and local enthusiasts are grumbling about the moderate weather and unseasonal mildness. Some pleasure seekers who have been doing the majority of their skiing in three parts in the last few years have threatened to pick up their paraphernalia and retire to the Laurentians this coming weekend. As a matter of fact some of the more rabid of them made definite plans for invading Quebec during the New Year's holidays.

Just about everybody in the street had something to say — good or bad — about the mild weather yesterday. And while the sporting class was complaining the householders figured that the saving on fuel would go a long way toward those coming summer holidays.

Israel Jacobson U.S. Citizen Being Released

Vienna, Dec. 29 (AP) — Austrian border guards said early today that Israel Jacobson has been expelled from Hungary and is being held by Russian troops just inside the Austrian border.

United States legation sources said in Budapest Tuesday night that Jacobson, director in Hungary of the American joint distribution committee, a Jewish welfare agency would be released from prison and expelled. They gave no date or time.

Other informants in Budapest said Jacobson, 37, a United States citizen who was arrested by Hungary's communist-led government Dec. 15, had already been taken to the Austrian-Hungarian border and would cross over some time today. Hungarian officials had refused to confirm he was already on his way out of the country.

Jacobson, held by Russians at the Austro-Hungarian border after being expelled by Hungary as a suspected spy, was expected to be released this afternoon.

Brig.-Gen. James Fry, deputy U.S. high commissioner, was assigned to make arrangements for Jacobson's release, probably dealing with his Russian counterpart, Col. Gen. Alexei Zheltov. They were to select a site somewhere in the Russian occupation zone where the release would take place.

Seized Tuesday

Jacobson was taken into custody by Soviet border guards Tuesday night shortly after he was freed from a Hungarian jail and expelled from the country Tuesday. He had been held for 12 days. When he reached the border, a Soviet patrol told him his papers were not in order. U.S. officials in Vienna promptly asked the Russians to release Jacobson to American custody.

The 37-year-old Jacobson, director in Hungary of the American joint distribution committee, had been held incommunicado in a Hungarian jail since Dec. 13 on what Hungarian officials then called "suspicion of espionage against the Hungarian state."

A communique from the Hungarian Minister of Interior said Jacobson had been expelled because he "committed deeds violating the interests of the state and abusing the rights of foreigners here."

The release of Jacobson by he Hungarians offered little hope that they would set free another American and a Briton they are holding on charges of espionage.

The other American, Robert W. Vogeler, a vice-president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company, has been held in jail since Nov. 18.

Vogeler was arrested Nov. 18 with his British co-worker Edgar Sanders. The government has said the two have confessed to "espionage and sabotage."

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about Food... What's Cooking?

By the author of "THE FACE IN THE ASPIC"

A good spice blows hot and cold.

Curry of lamb or curry of chicken are both perennial favorites because the peppery hilling flavor of the curry powder is joined with bland meat or poultry of somewhat child-like gentleness.

Hot chili powder would be a lot more in demand if it weren't always served in chili con carne. This dish, in case you have never been introduced to it, is a combination of fatty beef, heavy red kidney beans and skull-raising chili powder. In the southwest and in Mexico, where dreamy appetites need to be shocked regularly, chili con carne is all right.

But elsewhere the raring chili should be put in its place with something gentler and more joyful. Veal, for instance, is the kind of well flower man with a bashful flavor that occasionally needs the stimulus and drive of chili powders.

When making veal with chili, use enough of the spice so that your guests know it wasn't just dropped in by mistake. Have it full-bodied, chili. Serve light parsley dumplings made right in the pot.

Veal with Chili and Dumplings
Serves 6

Have 2 pounds of veal shoulder cut into 1 1-2 inch cubes for stewing. In a heavy saucepan melt 3 tablespoons vegetable shortening or lard. When fat is very hot, add veal and brown on all sides.

Remove veal from pan. Throw off excess fat. Don't wash pan. Return veal to pan. Add 1-3 cup chopped onion, 1 teaspoon garlic chopped fine, 1-4 teaspoon chopped thyme, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 teaspoons chili powder and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Stir very well so that all seasonings are well blended with meat.

Cover pan with a tight lid and simmer 5 minutes over a very low flame. Add 2 cups hot consomme or chicken broth and 1-3 cup chopped canned tomatoes. Bring liquid to a boil. Reduce flame so that liquid only simmers. Cook until veal is tender, about 1 1-2 hours.

To make dumplings combine 2 cups of self-rising cake flour with 3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley. Add 1-4 cup vegetable shortening at room temperature, and chop until pieces of shortening are very small—the size of peas or smaller. Add 1-3 cup milk all at once. Stir only until flour is dampened. Place by tablespoons onto pieces of meat in saucepan. Cover with tight lid and simmer 15 minutes.

O.B.C. Notes

A review of this year's attendance at Ontario Business College shows that students were here in 1949 from Nova Scotia, Quebec, Saskatchewan, Bermuda, British West India and many parts of Ontario. Twelve of the Quebec students were French-speaking.

A noteworthy point is that forty-one students this year were the first members of their brothers and sisters of former O.B.C. students.

Within the present period of three more French-speaking students arriving from Quebec early in January. Records of letters have been received from young men in Nigeria, West Africa, who are planning to come to O.B.C. in 1950.

An exceptionally large number of students went directly from the college to office positions during the past year. Many more could have been placed had they been fully prepared and available when wanted. At the end of the year the demand for office help is brisk.

Brown Tweed Costume

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Strictly speaking, this is not a tweed ensemble, but a tweed coat and skirt, with wool jersey sweater-type shirt dyed the identical tone of buckskin brown.

The tweed is soft, typically textured despite its softness, and the curved lines of jacket front, slashed pockets, high lapels, are all further feminizers for the 1950 women's tweeds. The jacket lines are boxy, but it can be worn with a flare by fastening only the top button, as photographed here.

How to reply to "Thank you for your card"

Dear Mrs Beeckman:

I'm always puzzled as to what to reply to someone who thanks you for sending a Christmas card (or, as a matter of fact, for a birthday card or any other greeting card). Of course if the friend says he or she liked the card, it's simple to reply, "I'm so glad you liked it." But if the friend says only, "Thank you for your Christmas card," is it proper to say only "You're welcome!" If not, will you please suggest several other correct replies?

J. C. W.

"You're welcome" is not enough of a reply . . . sounds hollow, graceless, as if you couldn't think of something nice to add. It's fun to think of something to add that is a bit lively, though simple: for example, "Ann dear, I did want you to know that I was thinking of you and wishing you a Happy Christmas." Or, to an intimate friend, "You see, Beth, I wanted you to know that you were devotedly in my thoughts . . . as always". Or, "It made me happy to greet you at Christmastime, Tom . . . and I hope you have a wonderful New Year!" Or for a birthday card, "I meant every word of that birthday greeting to you, Janet . . . and many happy returns!"

However, really of first importance and delightfully-to-be remembered is the way you make these replies, the friendliness in your manner, the lilt in your voice. And, inevitably, the appealin gcharm of adding the person's name. The memory of your graciousness will "linger on" . . . and that's good, very good.

New Year's Supper for Teenagers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My next-door neighbor and I are joining forces to give a party during the last part of the holidays for our two teenage daughters. It's to be given in our house, and we would like to plan a menu that will leave the girls and their guests on their own. We'll greet their guests as they arrive, and at say, six-thirty, then "disappear" to our neighbor's house; and return do you suggest?

Two Mothers

Why not plan foods for a make-your-own procedure . . . teen-agers delight in doing it's most fun for them. The good old standbys, hamburgers and/or frankfurters, with buns in order and preference and nestled comfortably in ample-size heaped rolls. Good companion to these is a tray of relishes, tomatoes, pickles (sweet or sour), onion slices. Or have them feature Dagwood Sandwiches, and provide the makings—various cold cuts, slices of cheese, mounds of cottage cheese, salad dressing spreads, or whatever-they-will. Bowls of popcorn there must be nowadays, and the always-popular potato chips. Choice of a cola drink, milk, sparkling grape-juice. For dessert, ice cream, perhaps with a sauce, or in pink cones; cookies.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON
Foundation garments mold the figure

While American women are the best dressed in the world, they are not as fussy about corseting as they should be. They are not as careful about making their selections. The lady of fashion, with a flair for dress, knows that good appearance starts with the foundation garment. Unless you find a perfectly cut and perfectly fitted, she will not appear at her best.

Smart, suitable clothes will not do away with, what corsetieres call the "fuzzy edges" of ill-fitting corsets—a line at the bottom of the corset, a garment that does not confine the abdomen, keeping it flat, a brassiere that is not a suitable choice. It is well worth while to find an experienced specialist who will know precisely what model will prove flattering, one that will bring out good points, camouflage those that are not so good.

Figure types must be considered, as well as activity requirements. A woman may require one size in a garment constructed of fabric or fabric-and-elastic, while a smaller size with more stretch will prove uncomfortable and becoming. The happy selection inspires the wearer to maintain good posture, and so-to a health benefit.

Her figure may have changed.

The shopper should never hesitate to cheer over new models, regardless of how well she is satisfied with the garment she is wearing. Her figure may have undergo changed—changes may come rapidly after the fortieth birthday—and a new number may have appeared that will give greater poise, greater comfort and appearance standpoints.

Corsetieres say there are four basic figure types: junior, average, average and full. There are, of course, numerous variations of each type; large hips and small breasts, or the other way around.

The long-waisted woman demands an entirely different pattern from the lady with the shortened torso.

If the hips are large, the excess flesh can be minimized by a garment that is extra long. If the breasts are high, the one-piece garment must be so designed as to keep them in normal position.

The woman with pendulous breasts must be extra careful when making her selection. The breasts are held to the chest wall by tissues and delicate muscles. If they are large and not supported, tissues give way and the breasts droop even further.

The dictates of fashion are important, of course, but corset designers claim that they strive first and foremost for health benefits, comfort and freedom of movement. Their endeavor to give faultless diaphragm control, to give a long, unbroken line to the silhouette.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Husband Doesn't Want to Wear Wedding Ring

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'd like my husband to wear a wedding ring, but he won't, because he says that married men who wear wedding bands are merely telling the world that their wives mistrust them.

I tell him that most husbands today wear rings and are proud to do so. How can I win him over?

Mrs. A. W. C.

Dear Mrs. A. W. C.:

You are probably right when you say that most husbands today wear wedding rings. If you are talking about the younger generation of husbands. If you are in an older group, there was a time when more husbands went without rings than wore them, in which case, it would be rather foolish to ask him to change now.

In any event, whether you are young people or older, I personally seems to me rather a small matter to make an issue of. It would be nice if your husband would wear the ring, since you wish him to, but if he prefers not to do so, I'd simply laugh it off, if you can, and forget it. For what real difference does it make? As long as your husband loves you and is good to you, isn't that really all that matters?

Of course the reason he gives for not wearing a ring is pretty silly. But then lots of us give silly reasons for not doing what we simply don't choose to do, because we actually haven't any good reason to offer. So be a wise and tolerant wife and refuse to let yourself be disturbed over such a trifle.

He Struck Her—Shall She Marry Him?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22 and have been going with a boy for 2 1-2 years and love him very much. My trouble is, he drinks, and another time when we had a date he stood me up again. Both times I went back to him and he's wonderful to me now.

Do you think it would be wise of me to get married to him? Some people say it's a man hits you before you're married, he will after. "But I don't think he will, ever, as he's really sorry and loves me very much, and I trust him also.

M. B. N.

Dear M. B. N.:

I certainly would not advise any girl to marry a man who he's already shown that he resorts to physical violence when he is angry. However much you think he loves you, and no matter how much you trust him, I doubt if he will be able to control his temper any better after you are married than he does now.

If you love him enough to be willing to accept the fact that he is going to abuse you, that is your affair. But if you're banking on his never doing it again, I think you will find that you are mistaken.

Foreign-Owned Companies Seized By Hungarians

Budapest, Dec. 29 —(AP)— Hungarys communist government today seized a large number of foreign-owned companies, charging they were being used "to build up espionage and sabotage rings."

Among those ordered nationalized was the Standard Electric Works, a subsidiary of the American-owned International Telephone and Telegraph Company. Two foreign officials —an American and a Briton—and a Hungarian manager of the 'company are in a Hungarian jail charged with espionage and sabotage.

The government also broadened its nationalization program by taking over all Hungarian-owned enterprises employing more than 10 persons and all printing plants employing more than five.

Compensation was promised for the foreign and domestic-owned nationalized plants.

The foreign companies seized had previously been exempted in 1948 for nationalization, although every Hungarian manufacturing firm employing more than 100 persons was nationalized at that time.

Recent government announcements have declared that the officials of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company in jail have confessed to police they were guilty of spying and plotting sabotage. They are Robert Vogeler, American, and Edgar Sanders, Briton, both of whom were arrested with the Hungarian manager of the company, Imre Zagon, in November.

"Foreign imperialists have been using the names and leaders of these undertakings (companies)" State Minister Ernest Gerce said, "to build up espionage rings and prepare sabotage actions."

New Celestial 'Window' Show Aptly Described

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—A "window" in the northern sky that reveals hitherto undreamed vastness in the universe was described to the American Association for the Advancement of science today.

This new celestial window shows was reported by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard observatory.

The window is the bowl of the big dipper, the constellation whose two outer corner stars point to the north star.

The bowl is a rectangle, clear-ly marked by four stars. Space is more brilliantly behind this bowl than in much of the sky. There is less dust and gas to interfere with seeing.

Dr. Shapley said Harvard telescopes have studied 1,500 galaxies through the bowl. Galaxy is the name for a collection of stars like the milky way. Each one is as big as the milky way, each one a family of many millions of stars.

The 1,500 were seen in small telescopes. Dr. Shapley said the new 200-inch telescope at Mount Palomar, Cal., would be able to see probably 1,000,000 galaxies through the same window.

They would be seeded through space out to a distance so great that light takes 1,000,000,000 years to make the trip.

The significance of this window does is almost unbelievable. It is believed by astronomers that the galaxies are distributed uniformly throughout space. This means that if the great telescope had time to scan the complete heavens, it would show 1,000,000,000 galaxies.

If ownership of stars could be divided equally among every human being now alive, each of us would own more than 100,000,000 stars.

Star Reported 27 Times Hotter Than Sun

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 28. (AP) A star 27 times hotter than the sun was reported today.

Dr. Thornton Page of Yerkes Observatory, Chicago, said the Star, which is centred in a ring nebula, has a surface temperature of 270,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

This disclosure was made in a paper at the 42nd annual convention of the American Astronomical Society.

Dr. Page pointed out there are thousands of stars hotter than the Sun which has a surface temperature of only 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

But the new hot star is from two to three times greater than any previously reported, he said.

The Central Star is as large as and probably larger than the Sun he said, but it is untold millions of miles farther away from the earth.

If it was as close as the Sun, all life on the earth would shrivel and die.

He located the star and its ring nebula in the constellation lyra.

Cigaret Price Upped One Cent Per Package

Montreal, Dec. 29—(CP)—Imperial Tobacco Company announced today an increase in the price of its cigarets of one cent per 20-cigaret package.

The increase becomes effective immediately.

W. C. MacDonald Inc. said so far as they were concerned the Imperial Tobacco Company announcement came as a surprise.

"We don't know any more than you do," was the reply to a direct query as to whether MacDonald would follow the Imperial lead.

The announcement from Earle Spafford, president of Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, said the price change had become necessary as a result of large increases since 1947 in the cost of leaf tobacco, packaging materials and other supplies and services, as well as in the cost of labor."

Company sources indicated the manner in which retail dealers dispose of stocks on hand will be left to dealers.

"Stocks on hand were purchased at the old price and they should be sold at the old price," said a spokesman. "But that is a matter for the dealers themselves. Naturally they will pass on the one-cent-a-package increase as soon as they are selling stocks purchased at the increased price."

The one-cent increase brings the price of a 20-cigaret package in Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick to 40 cents. In other provinces the new prices are: British Columbia, 37; Alberta, 36; Saskatchewan, 37; Manitoba, 36; Ontario, 36; Quebec, 39; Nova Scotia, 38.

Last Increase in '47

The last increase in the retail price of Imperial's cigarets was a two-cents-a-package boost in December, 1947.

Imperial sells a half - dozen or so brands of cigarets, two of which are among the most popular in Canada.

The difference in prices in the various provinces is accounted for by differing provincial or municipal taxes on cigarets. But in any event smoking means big money for the government when it is considered that in 1948 taxes on cigarets alone were better than a cent-a-cigaret — amounted to $170,000,000.

Of the popular package of 20 cigarets which sells in Ontario today at 33 cents about $1.58 cents goes into the Federal government's coffers. Where the same package has sold at a higher rate in other provinces the price differential indicates other taxes which the smoker is paying to meet provincial or municipal imposts.

An Imperial Company spokesman said the one-cent increase will be passed along to dealers in Newfoundland as well as other provinces in Canada. In Newfoundland the price is still under provincial government control. A holdover from the province's pre-Confederation days, and just how retail prices there would be affected the spokesman was not prepared to say. Present price of Imperial's brands in Newfoundland is 25 cents.

The spokesman also said there is a half-cent increase in price of one brand of the company's cigars. It formerly sold for 9½ cents; now it will be 10 cents.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By CEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

It might be that some of Belleville's hockey greats who flashed across the horizon years ago may be seen in creaking action in the near future. It has been suggested that some of the "oldtimers" unpack their gear and swing into play again if only for a brief period of time. It's doubtful if they could go the sixty minutes but they could and should flash at least a reasonable facsimile of the form and ability that brought championships to this city before the world went war-wacky.

* * *

Yep, it has been suggested that such former stars as Gunner Arnott, Bill Green, Bun Frechette, Sammy Symons, "Toots" and "Bouncer" Holway, Hank Fenn, Speedy St. Louis and others of the former ice regimes of the city don skates again and take part in an exhibition game here with the proceeds to go to some worthy charity. Of course the Arena Commission would be asked to furnish the ice gratis and perhaps the only expense would be that of a well-known Toronto Maple Leafs referee or former player such as Syl. Apps. And Syl would not charge too much for a humanitarian cause. However the idea is still in the tentative stages and we'll have more information about it later.

The Progress Clothes Company of Montreal have generously donated a suit of clothes which will be presented to the senior or junior player who rates the largest number of mentions on the Goodman hockey broadcasts. Each OHA game three stars are selected and presented with a handsome gift through the generosity of the Goodman Stores, and the player, as we said before, receiving the "most mentions" will be presented with the suit of clothes at the end of the season. This offer applies to the Belleville teams only. The player will be given the opportunity to select his own fabric and style.

HEY, YOU BANTAMS

The bantam teams of the Belleville Hockey Association are getting down to real brass tacks and they should schedule to be drawn in the immediate future the moppets are battling hard for spots on the various four squads. Shortly the battle sale and trade will be on and the less the strength, stabilization, and of course an all-star team will be selected near the end of the season to represent Belleville in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association Bantam "A" playdowns.

Saturday morning, "you kids", is an important date in your hockey career. There will be half-hour practices for all teams and the fans of Belleville who have not as yet made the grade: Remember this, there will be a practice starting at 9 o'clock for the youngsters who, as yet, have not been chosen for any team.

At 9 a. m. Team No. 2 will take the ice. At 9:30 Team No. 3, At 10 o'clock, Team No. 4 and at 10:30 Team No. 4. So you fellows had better be on hand sharp on time, or you might find your positions filled.

Cec. Perdue, Peterborough scribe, points out in his column that the Peterborough Lecrosiaires have given Deny Free, stormy petrel of a hot hockey controversy, his release. That was apparently a short time ago by Diesel - Electric officials. But Campbellford hockey moguls say "The cold war is still raging between Campbellford and Belleville. Campbellford has placed the dispute before the Hydro officials in Toronto for a ruling." Free, they claim was suspended during each of the Campbellford-Trent Valley League aggression and as such, "when the league opens January 4th, will be pitching for Campbellford," whatever that means.

The sympathy of Belleville and district sportdom goes out to Bruce Woodman and Mrs. Jack Devine in the loss of a grandson, Stanley Woodman, who recently passed away. All realms of sport join us in condolences to the bereaved.

The Belleville Diesel Electrics last night thoroughly deserved their 4-1 victory over Kingston Nylons. And nobody admitted that more than the Kingston team. The Dez-Ees's were flying all night and they were easily four goals better than the Kingston crew. We must give them credit for that.

Al. Meagher, Jackie Wardhaugh and the rest of the crew were flying. Patty, Caslin, Gerow, and the rest of the Kingston crew were definitely stymied by the sparkling performance of the visiting home town aggregation. And if the bespectacled Udy Udall had not been between the pipes the score might have been bigger. Are you listenin' Mike?.

Nope, fellas, we had these Nylons lashed to the mast last night. Good game, sure, but if these Diesels fleetfoot play the same offensive — and defensive game they played last night then they've got nothing to be afraid of. And that goes for your Legionaires, Peterborough.

* * *

We met an old pal from Kingston last night, one Harold Langsbeer. He is associated with the Nylon Company down that way and he tells us that the employees of that firm are actually the backers of the Nylons Senior "B" team. Well "for gawd's sake" why don't they get a little publicity. As matter of fact Harold is the president of the Athletic Club of the Nylon firm down thataway, and he, with a few other chaps from the company tell us that the employees of the firm are kicking out with the necessary do-re-mi to sponsor this hockey club. Well, well, well. More power and chance to them. And methnk a little more publicity would help.

Inspired Diesel-Electrics Defeat Kingston Nylons 4-1 in Thrilling Battle

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Belleville Diesel-Electrics, unleashing their best performance of the year, turned back the powerful Kingston Nylons threat in Memorial Arena last night and defeated the vaunted Limestone City squad 4-1 in a scheduled Senior "B" fixture. The victory gives the locals four wins to two losses in the group standing and further consolidated them in second place behind the league-leading Peterborough Legionaires.

The Dez-Ees were full value for their money. They outskated, outchecked and outplayed the last-skating lines of the visitors in a game that was replete with thrills throughout the entire three periods.

Twelve hundred fans thrilled to the fast-clicking offensives of the Diesel-Electric lines. They shouted miles and the first minute of play and except for sporadic moments of desperate Kingston offensive were all the time in the Udall Brilliant.

In fact had it not been for the be-spectacled "Udy" Udall in the Kingston nets the score might have been doubled. And by the same token LeForte sparkled on occasional breaks for the Dez-Ee pipes when a desperate Kingston team forayed on his ballwick.

But overall, it was this Belleville team right to bed. And howl they did. Mind you, it was a close hard-fought battle with the Dez-Ee's scoring single goals in the first and second periods and clinching the argument with two in the third, while a battling desperate Nylon squad that hurled all their offensive weapons at the locals in the dying minutes of the period could do. Chiks, former Queen's star took Gerow's pass to cop the only marker the visitors chalked up.

Cleanly Played

The game was cleanly played with the officials Referee Herb Flynn, Peterborough (and he could have been better) and linesman Ken McNaught, Belleville, lasting but three penalties, three of them going to the Diesels.

Jackie Wardaugh, Pete Jones, Don Barrett, Al Meagher who was one of the stars of the game, backed up by Lee Goyer, Tommy Williams and Vern Goyer. With Woodman and LeForte playing superbly on defence had enough to turn on sufficient heat to win the game.

On the other side, Joe Catlin, Ken Patrick, Ray Patterson and Gammi, he was one of the best they had) Plumb, Armstrong, Patterson and above all Udy Udall in the nets stood out for the Nylons crew. Walt Gerow did a grand job but he was closely marked.

It was good hockey to watch after what has been dished up here heretofore. The game was productive of fast hard-checking hockey that saw both goals contested with both teams striving desperately for what counted. And the best team counted on the night's play.

After eleven minutes of the first period, after check and counter check, Leo Goyer swept down centre ice, took Keith MacDonald's pass and—yeah, you guessed it—the first fight flashed.

Okay, the second period was a repetition of the first with both squads going all out but the Diesels having a shade edge. With four minutes to go, the "old smoothie" Peter Jones, one of the headiest hockey players existant, drifted alongside his boy Goyer, sing ed and sank his pass for the second marker.

Led By Smoothie

Kingston, led by Partis and Gerow, fought back savagely in the third period in an effort to grab the game out of the fire. But they were matched stride for stride and check for check by what was a inspired Diesel-Ee team and the lads just closed the door. In fact it was chukker Don Barrett just to clinch the things, after a brilliant sortie by Meagher, scored the period to make the score 3-0 and five minutes later Lee Goyer added, when he fired home Cousins pass for a picture goal. That was it. This Belleville team was full value always but with a four goal lead they had to face a desperate Kingston offensive.

The dark sweatered lads swept in. They were up to the Diesel-Ee blueline and Udall Brilliant was on his toes. And then Gerow's pass to crash the rubber past LeForte to make the final score 4-1.

The teams

Belleville Diesel-Ees: Goal LeForte; defence, Williamson, V. Goyer; centers, Jackie Wardhaugh, Al. Meagher; subs Schreiber, Woodman, Jones, L. Goyer, MacDonald, Barrett, Williams, Cousins.

Kingston Nylons: Goal, Udall; defence, Patterson, K. Murphy; centre, Partis; wings, Gerow, Catlin; subs, Chiks, Plumb, Armstrong, Joyce, Aiken, Harrison, Ohlke, Hamilton.

Cleveland Barons Making Runaway Of Top Position

By The Canadian Press

Cleveland Barons are simply running away with top honors in the western division of the American Hockey League.

The goal-happy Barons added the lowly Hershey Bears to their list of victims 9-3 Saturday night by trampling Don Penniston's record 4,436 fans at Hershey.

The victory allowed Cleveland to increase its lead ahead of the runner-up St. Louis Flyers who were idle last night.

Meanwhile in the league's eastern section, Providence Reds maintained their slight hold on first place by out-scoring New Haven Ramblers 5-2.

The remaining two games Wednesday night ended identical 3-3 deadlocks with Buffalo Bisons tying Cincinnati Mohawks and Pittsburgh Hornets and Springfield Indians battling to a draw.

Norm Larzon, Johnny Mahaffy and Mark Marquess connected for the Bears.

Johnny Chad, with two goals and an assist, was high man for Providence in their victory over the Ramblers. Other Providence goal-getters were Harvey Fraser, Jack Stoddard and Jack McGill. Jean Paul Denis and Vic Peloquin tallied for New Haven.

The Buffalo scoring quintet were Murdo Mackay who scored twice and Tommy Cooper with Cincinnati tallies going to Bob Carpenter, Tod Campeau and Gilles Dube.

At Pittsburgh, the Hornets overcame a two goal deficit to deadlock the game late in the final period, Kelly Burnett, Ralph Hosking and Vern Stenabaugh for Springfield while Pittsburgh markers were by Buddy Boivin, Billy Reeves and Eddy Kobussen.

Only two games are billed for tonight with New Haven playing host to Providence and Pittsburgh at Indianapolis.

Barrie Flyers Start to Climb Up Loop Ladder

(By The Canadian Press)

Coach Hap Emms' flair for player deals is paying off. His Barrie Flyers are a revamped — and revitalized — club in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior 'A' League.

Last night the Flyers waded through 22 assorted penalties to take a firm grip on fourth place in the league with a 8-1 victory over the ninth-place Gall Black Hawks. It was the third straight victory since Emms traded a complete forward line and a defenceman to Oshawa Generals.

In a high-sticking other game last night, Windsor Spitfires downed Toronto St. Michael's College Majors 5-2 at Windsor.

At Barrie, the Flyers took a 3-0 lead in the first period, split two goals in the second and then added an unanswered marker in the third.

Referees Pat Patterson and Harvey Allen, both of Toronto, handed out 13 of the 22 penalties to the Flyers. They included two majors and a misconduct.

John Roberts, Ward Brandow, Gord Watson, Doug Towers, and Red McCarthy tallied for the Flyers. Goalie Bob Shropshire's shutout in the first period, split two goals in the second and then added an unanswered marker in the third.

At Windsor it was the third straight victory for the Spitfires in fifth place, two points behind the Majors.

The Spitfires had their hands full in the first period, splitting two goals with the Majors. They took advantage in the second, however, and added a 3-1 lead.

Eddie Stanklewicz paced the Spitfires with three goals, while Erwin Grosse and Bob Rawlyk got one each. Bobby Hill and Bob Marshall scored for the Majors.

Windsor goes on Wednesday night. Tomorrow two senior and two junior tilts are carded. In the senior it's Owen Sound at Toronto Marlboros and Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen at Hamilton Tigers. Windsor meets Stratford and St. Catharines Teepees with Guelph in the junior league.

Brighton Hockey, Skating Arena Community Effort

Representative of a fine spirit of community effort, the new Brighton hockey arena and community centre is scheduled to be opened early in the new year.

Residents of Brighton—a small town of approximately 1,800 residents, are proud of their new arena and rightfully so. The new community centre has incorporated the most modern features of arena construction. And possibly what is best of all, in the words of R. J. Ross, community centre committee chairman, "It's all paid for."

Mr. Ross said that with the exception of the $5,000 government grant, the entire cost of the community centre representing $28,700, had been contributed in private donations ranging from one dollar bills, the children's part, will possibly get the most benefit out of the arena, shipped in with donations of $1 each.

Actual construction of the arena commenced early in October with the T. A. Wilson Lumber Company of Campbellford as the contractors. Heating and wiring and some plastering finishing is being done by local contractors. The work is being supervised by W. K. Horsnell of Brighton, who is the chairman of the building committee.

Unobstructed View

Ice surface of the new arena is 70 x 170 with a seating and standee capacity of about 1,200. Construction is such that every person in the arena will have unobstructed view of the ice surface.

Nothing has been omitted in an effort to make the new Brighton community centre one of the most modern for its size in the province. It has an ventilating furnace for heating the dressing rooms, manager's office and entertainment booth and showers.

But the community centre has been constructed with the idea of year round use. Built on the Brighton Agricultural Society property, it will be available as an exhibition building during fair time, and will also be used for motor shows, horse shows and other community attractions.

STILL NOT ENOUGH

Edmonton — (CP) — The new Sherbrooke public school had hardly been opened before the Edmonton school board announced that double shifts would be instituted at the school. The school was the fourth of five public schools planned to meet a sudden increase in the number of school children.

Charlie Brickley, Great Drop Kicker Dies in N.Y.

New York, Dec. 29 — (AP)— Charlie Brickley of Harvard, one of the greatest drop kickers in American college football history, died from a heart attack Wednesday night at the age of 52.

He was twice an all-America halfback — in 1910 and 1911 — and in his three years for Harvard set records that have never been surpassed.

In the 1912 Yale game, at the height of the Crimson's football heyday, he kicked five field goals for Harvard's only scoring and a 15-5 victory.

Two of his records still stand. His 13 field goals in 1915 were the most ever kicked by a varsity player in a single season. He also held the over-all record of 34 goals out of 47 attempts for his three varsity years starting in 1911.

After graduating from Harvard he entered the brokerage business and in late years was an advertising salesman in New York.

His death was discovered Wednesday night when a friend at the George Washington Hotel heard groans coming from Brickley's room and called the house doctor. They entered with a pass key and found the former grid star lying on the floor.

Wilson said he would enter his boat, Miss Canada IV, provided the race is held on or after Aug. 1. He said he wants to make sure Miss Canada will be ready.

The Canadian entry competed in the 1949 races but engine trouble hampered its progress over the Detroit River course and

It was badly beaten.

Officers of the Yachtsmen's Association of America, which received the challenge, said it will be taken under advisement. The deadline for their decision is midnight Saturday.

Lindsay Kinsmen Defeat Belleville Rockets 4-1 in Scheduled Junior B Game

(By STAFF REPORTER)

The Kinsmen Junior Hockey Club banded Belleville Rockets a 4-1 defeat in a scheduled Junior "B" O.H.A. tilt at Lindsay arena here last night. The loss came as a great shock to the Belleville crew w' invaded the north with high hopes and confident of returning with their first win of the season.

It wasn't a better team of hockey players that beat the Rockets it was a bunch of well-proportioned boy who appeared to be fit-better condition and who stood out with a team of defensive tactics, that choked off almost every Belleville thrust. The Rockets, too, seemed to be weak in the shooting department, lacking the zip, when heaving the rubber from close in on the Lindsay net. Poole, the Kinsmen stalwart goaltender proved to be another reason, why the Rockets never got themselves home. He wasn't any better than Trippe between the Belleville pipes, but he did handle a few shots that beat the drive and punch of the 21 thrown at the Rocket opponents.

In the penalty department the Rockets gathered nine to the winners eight and it was while they were short handed that Lindsay garnered two of their goals in the second period. Trumble turned out to be the worst offender, being waved to the penalty box on three different occasions for minor infractions.

Robbed of Goal

At the 12.14 mark in the first period Lindsay took the upper hand Crawford netting a honey DeNobi pass from Karrys. The team see-sawed up and down the ice with Lindsay finally taking the Rockets in their own end as Trippe pulled off many spectacular saves. Wright broke clean away with only Poole to beat but the drive of Lindsay nailed raced twenty-five feet out of his net to cost the Belleville forward of what looked like the sweet. The play roughened up then, more penalties were note on both sides and as the bell went to end the game the teams were back at full strength again.

Belleville missed a beautiful opportunity in the second stanza when Lindsay was two men short. Close back checking and splendid clearing methods however, held off the Belleville shoot-ers until the Lindsay outfit had every man back on the ice. Sinclair, Lewis and Jenkins combined at 8.40 to put Lindsay two tal the lead and two minutes with Lewis and Jenkins did it again at 12.13 the Kinsmen three point advantage. These two blows staggered the Rockets who slowed down considerably and from midst of the remaining minutes breaking to Lindsay attacks.

Leads Better Team

From the play in the third period it would be fair to say that Belleville was the better team, but the rally they staged came too late and only paid off with one goal. Crawford took a pass from Karrys to give Lindsay their fourth and final point of the evening as the Rockets combination play started clicking. Murphy, Kennett and Hogan ganged the Lindsay net right back, Murphy back handing a hot one that Poole never saw to give Belleville their lone tally. Seven men in to the final ball the Rockets had the Kinsmen worried and missed several good chances of scoring while the crowd went wild and excitement grew to a fever pitch. With a minute to go fighting broke out to the left of the Lindsay net and it took the officials several minutes to separate the players locked in battle. Wallings of Lindsay and Fletsch of Belleville, each drew five minute penalties for fighting and 10 minute misconduct penalties.

Teams:

Belleville: Goal, Trippe; defence, Graham, Trumble; centre, Hogan; wing, Semark, Murphy; subs, Tunford, Green, Fletsch, Wright, Mulholland, Ramsay, Strahan, Gilmour.

Edmonton Team Starts on Way To Tournament

(By the Canadian Press)

In a 25-below-zero snowstorm, Edmonton Mercurys left Wednesday night for an exhibition tour preceding the World Amateur Hockey Championships Tournament in Europe.

A minor delay in the takeoff came when one door of their Trans-Canada Air Lines North Star froze open. A crowd of relatives and friends of the Canadian representatives to the championships crowded beside the runway for half an hour before the plane became airborne. The 16 players and coach Dodge Graham of the intermediate team will tour Scotland, England, France, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and into the tournament next March.

With Warren Lewis, their first string centre, scoring four times, Boston College's United States National College squad, Association championship hockey team peeled off its 16th consecutive victory by overwhelming McGill university Redmen from Montreal 8-3 on Tuesday night at Boston before a capacity 6,000 crowd.

A 31-game pre-season exhibition schedule was announced Wednesday night for Boston Red Sox, who were runners-up of the American League pennant in the final two days of the 1949 campaign by New York Yankees.

Featherweight champion Willie Pep will defend his title against Charley Riley of St. Louis Jan. 16 at St. Louis, Mo., promoter Hans Bernard announced Wednesday.

The New York Yankees and the New York Giants Baseball Clubs will exchange spring training sites in 1951, sending the Yankees to Phoenix and the Giants to St. Petersburg, Fla.

An intercollegiate skiing competition scheduled for the New Year weekend at Lake Placid, N.Y., was cancelled Wednesday for lack of snow. Eleven colleges had been invited.

Ben Hogan is on his way to the west coast, possibly to launch a comeback in big-time golfing. Hogan plans to attend three tournaments on the Professional Golfers Association winter tour—the Los Angeles Open, the Bing Crosby Invitational and the Phoenix tournament which has been named the Ben Hogan Open—before returning to Fort Worth, Tex. There, he has been playing the Colonial course regularly for the last 15 days, the first time he'd set foot on golf course since his near-fatal traffic accident last Feb. 2.

Loss of a hand doesn't mean loss of skill to 15-year-old hockey player Vic Hunt. Friday night he enters the net for Toronto Marlboro's Weston Dukes against Dixie Juniors in an Ontario Hockey Association game. Last September Vic's right hand was amputated after it was crushed in a printing plant. He made a gadget which fastens a goalstick to the hook he has where a hand used to be.

Captain Don Hogan will lead his Rocket Juniors into action here tomorrow night against the potent Kingston Barons in their first OHA clash of the season. With Don pictured above are Jud Semark and Bill Turland, two hard-playing members of the youngsters. Kingston are rated as one of the best in the Junior "B" grouping, and the Rockets will face the acid test on Friday.

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP) — What sparkin' Conn Smythe's strategy formula. At least one Ontario sports writer is having trouble figuring it out.

Doug (Windsor Star) Vaughan says he doesn't know what to make of the Toronto Maple Leafs' hockey boss.

Smythe, acid-tongued pilot of the National Hockey League Leafs manoeuvered into the sports headlines recently with the "getthin" dictum—aimed mainly at goalie Turk Broda. Broda was benched for one game until he lost some weight, and then started winning games.

But the Leafs hit another losing streak—seven out of eight starts —and last Saturday Smythe yanked Broda after the first period when the Leafs were trailing Boston Bruins 6-1 in favor of Rookie Al Rollins.

The move brought this comment from Vaughan:

"Regardless of how he figures it, Smythe put the undeserving Lorne Chabot in the H.M.L.S. beBroda 'in the grease' for the sec- fore too long," Miller said.

Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Although the six National Hockey League teams were in action last night, only two of the "top bracket" marksmen pulled ahead in the tight individual-scoring race.

Detroit's Sid Abel moved up a step into a second-place tie with Doug Bentley of Chicago Black Hawks. Each with 33 points, they are still five behind Ted Lindsay who grabbed an assist for Red Wings last night to strengthen his hold on top position.

John Peirson of Boston is sitting tight in third place, two points up on Montreal's Maurice Richard, the league's high goalgetter, and Paul Ronty, Boston, each with 30 points.

Roy Conacher of Chicago and Gordie Howe of Red Wings share the next berth, each with 13 goals and 16 helpings for a 29-point total.

The leaders:

Lindsay, Detroit	16	22	38

New York, Dec. 29. Vadal and his Utes took a preseason trip to Brazil for 10 games in 13 days last fall and saw some really exciting fans . . . "They are the nicest most hospitable people you ever saw before a game, or three hours afterwards," says Mr. Pete, "but when you go out to play, their nature changes . . . most games end with somebody getting beat up—usually the referees."

Right Every Time

Utah's introduction to Brazilian officiating came in an early game near Sao Paulo . . . "We were a few points ahead at half time," Vadal relates, "and I told my boys into the dressing room.

. . . I heard a lot of noise outside. There were two referees, a big fat one who never moved and a little guy . . . The little fellow came up to me and, in a squeaky voice, said: 'Mr. Pete they beat M— out of me, but I no quit, I call them.' " He did. He called 15 fouls in the second half —all against us."

N.Y. Rangers Tie Canadiens For Second Place

By HARRY ECCLES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

They still haven't any men among the National Hockey League's scoring aces, but the New York Rangers are doing all right. Wednesday night they came up with four goals in the last five minutes to peel the Chicago Black Hawks and move into a tie with Montreal Canadiens for second place.

The Rangers were the only team of the six to pull out a victory. New York beat Chicago 5-2, while Boston Bruins held the leading Detroit Red Wings to a 2-2 tie, and the Montreal Canadiens fought a 1-1 deadlock with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Today Detroit has an 11-point lead over New York and Montreal and four points over Toronto and Boston are tied for fourth place another three points back. Any one of them have a four-point edge over the Chicago Hawks.

Detroit's captain Ted Lindsay remains atop the point-getters, but has added no ammunition to Sid Abel and Chicago's Doug Bentley.

Lindsay has 38 points and with Gus Dube Bather of the Rangers were the only marksmen scoring two goals in the nightly chores. Dube Raleigh scored the other Ranger goal. Lindsay has taken a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Gaye Stewart and Bill Gadsby, and added a third in the second. Howe bolted the door. New York got on the board in the second period, and the other four were scored in a three-minute Ranger outburst just before the final period was over.

Largest Crowd Out

It was the eighth Ranger victory in their last 11 games, and the largest crowd of the season at Madison Square Garden enjoyed the event — 15,276.

The Boston Bruins also came to life and the sputtering Boston guns-leaders two goals canie back to defeat Detroit to earn the tie at Detroit. The Wings' great goalie, Harry Lumley had been reported suffering from a stomach ailment, but he was in goal last night and had plenty of action, making 33 stops while Jack Gelineau had 22 in the Boston net.

Sid Abel scored the first for Detroit and Jimmy Peters made it 2-0, both in the second period, but before the frame ended veteran Woody Dumart scored Boston's first. Phil Maloney banged in the losing goal with less than two minutes left as many of the 13,445 crowd had already started for the exits in the direction of their Detroit win.

At Toronto the Maple Leafs were cheered by a crowd of 14,252 when big Harry Watson scored the lying goal on a pass from Max Bentley, with less than four minutes to go. Canadiens had scored the scoring halfway through the second period when Billy Reay connected on a pass from Gerry Plamondon. Both clubs played a tight defensive game, and big Bill Durnan in the Canadien cage handled 19 shots, while burly Turk Broda had only 17 in the Toronto net. The only penalty was a holding count against Bill Barilko of the Leafs for roughing Maurice Richard.

Two Men Jump From Viaducts, Seriously Injured

Toronto, Dec. 29—(CP)—Two men jumped from Toronto viaducts yesterday. Both are in critical condition in hospital.

Mungo Walker, 43, father of two children, jumped to the railway tracks from the Queen Street bridge over the Don River to Maple Leafs.

Today Detroit has an 11-point lead over New York and Montreal and four points over Toronto and Boston are tied for fourth place another three points back. Any one of them have a four-point edge over the Chicago Hawks.

Club Commodore to Feature New Year's Eve Party Sunday Midnight, Jan. 1st

Confronted with the bad mix-up this year of days and dates and laws, etc., Club Commodore, along with many of the other finer Clubs in Ontario, is staging its annual New Year's Eve Party on Sunday Midnight, January 1st. The Commodores Orchestra will be on the bandstand providing the music and entertainment for this great evening and Mr. Arthur Duby, popular young tenor will be featured in the vocal spotlight.

Dancing will begin at 12.05 a.m. and the hats and horns will be distributed immediately, directly after which the party will get off to a bang with the familiar strains of "Auld Lang Syne." Another added attraction will be the plate lunch which will be served at the bar whenever desired by the dancers, and needless to say, it will be quite welcome to the merrymakers after having blown off all the surplus steam that has accumulated during 1949.

Many lovely spot dance prizes have been purchased and will be distributed to the lucky "spot-winners" throughout the evening. Also that merry man of solpons and humor, Carl Rahuj, will be on hand to shoot any pictures that the dancers desire . . . at their request, of course. Yes, Club Commodores, has spared nothing to make this the most sensational affair of the year, and by the way, there will be more tables available. However, there has never been a year when the management didn't have to turn down some party-goers and therefore, we stress that due to the definite limit on the ticket sale, please don't leave your purchase of tickets to the last minute and be disappointed. A few are still available from Bill Cook's Cigar Store and the Club Commodore box office. (Advt.)

Hollywood, Dec. 29 (AP) — Charles Laughton, home after reading the Bible and other works of literature on a tour from Canada to Texas, bears this discovery:

"One striking thing about the audiences I talked to is the fact that I encountered almost no questions about the personal life or scandals or habits of Hollywood stars.

"When people did want some 'inside' information about Hollywood, they were usually students who wanted to know about the technical aspects of film acting or photography or some related subject."

The actor-reader was enthusiastic about his reception with audiences. He indicated there is a great thirst among his audiences, especially younger ones, for hearing the good writings of the ages. It is a demand which was satisfied in older days in the Chautauqua circuit, but which has been neglected in modern times.

5,000-Mile Tour

Laughton spent two hours reading the Bible, Shakespeare, Thomas Wolfe, James Thurber, Dickens and other works to his listeners. He performed this feat in 53 towns and travelled 5,000 miles by car.

"I read before audiences composed of business men, school teachers, bobby-soxers and college students. They had these things in common: A natural affection for good literature, a profound enthusiasm for living theatre and a great warmth in that made me feel at home wherever I went."

Laughton had only one bad moment during the tour. That came when a drunk began heckling him in Chicago. The actor finally left his microphone and said to the audience: "This man is annoying me; if he is annoying you, why don't you throw him out!"

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

I was talking to Glasses Magee in front of his house and watching Reddy Merly eating a bag of popcorn down at the corner, and I said, Oh boy, if he only started to choke on it we could run down a there and bang him on the back all our mine, and if he got mad a we could claim we only did it to save his life.

Oh boy, I hope he chokes, Glasses said.

And we kept on watching and hoping, and I said, G, even if he done, he'll probably stop by the time we get there, so we would have any excuse to bang his now so we'll be all ready, I said.

Which we did, and Reddy kept on eating the popcorn but not choking, and I said, Hay Reddy, can you eat 3 handfulls quick one rite after the other without hardly taking time to swallow?

I can if I want, Reddy said, and Glasses said, I bet you cant, I bet your throat aint fuff enough.

Oh yeah?? My throat's as fuff as any other part of me, Reddy said. If you each want to bet me a cent I cant, I'll do it just to show you, he said, and me and Glasses looked at each other and winked, meaning it would be worth a cent, and I said, Okay, we'll bet you, wont we, Glasses?

Sure Glasses said, and Reddy said, Okay, it's a bet, here I go, and he quick ate 3 handfulls rite on top of each other, swallng.

I dare you to try 3 more handfulls even quicker, Glasses said, and Reddy said, Nothing doing, cause I'm a cowlaf and I said, I'll have to owe you mine, and Meening we didn't have them which we didn't, and we walked away again feeling worse instead of bett. .

U.S. Coal Production Down 29 P.C. From Last Season

Pittsburgh — (AP) — Strikes and other ailments handed the bituminous coal industry in the United States some sharp raps in 1949.

The country's mines produced an estimated 430,000,000 tons of soft coal — 29 per cent less than 1948.

Production during 1948 was 396,818,226 tons. In 1947, the bituminous (soft coal) diggers mined a whopping 630,623,722 tons to set an all-time record.

The anthracite (hard coal) industry also had aches, and pains. The 80,000 hard coal miners, centred in eastern Pennsylvania, produced only 54,000,000 tons this year since 1902. Their production in 1948 totalled 80,000,000 tons.

The Pennsylvania Department of Mines estimated 1949 production of anthracite at 54,000,000 to 56,000,000 tons. It was the worst year since 1902 when output of 41,000,000 tons. Strikes, warm weather, high prices and poor demand were blamed.

The coal industry suffered three major work stoppages during the last year. They cost the United States 130,000,000 tons of soft coal. Miners lost more than 17,000,000 man days of work and more than $300,000,000 in wages — assuming that without strikes they would have been kept fully at work. It is not certain they would, since coal stocks were high this summer, and consumption was down.

New Inroads

Other fuels continued to edge into a field once dominated by coal without challenge. Gas and oil made new inroads. Operators contended President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers' policy of pensioning and pricing coal out of some markets, and making supply uncertain. Railroads, utilities and other industries continued the trend to-ward gas and oil and away from coal.

The three 1949 strikes, all part of Lewis' contract manoeuvring, developed into a test of strength between the union and the bituminous coal mine owners.

Operators chose 1949 to make a fight against gaining annual concessions to the U.M.W.

Lewis wants a 20-cent-a-day pay increase for miners now earning a basic $14.05 a day. He also demands the operators increase contributions to the U.M.W. welfare fund from 20 cents to 35 cents a ton of coal mined.

His efforts to split the industry and sign up operators piecemeal, have resisted directly by big mine owners and major producers. Some small producers signed.

U.S. Businessmen Face Further Loss of Overseas Trade in 1950

By SAM DAWSON

New York — (AP)—Businessmen in the United States face some further loss of overseas trade during the coming year.

The dollar gap will sickle cuts off more and more of the commerce with Asia, while political and economic instability and financial troubles in India hamstring her buying.

United States taxpayers still will be shouldering a costly prop under world trade during the year. Another $3,100,000,000 will be spent in 1950 to continue the Marshall Plan. Effects of recent currency devaluations, reduced by 1951, may become apparent in 1950. But most expect this to have little effect on the world trade total-ling than will the degree of prosperity attained in the United States itself. Still, it will be harder to sell American goods abroad, while more foreign goods will be sold to and offered in the American market.

Wartime and postwar trade-ers see ahead at the year-end.

Washington Economic Associates, who bought an estimated $6,000,-000,000 or more of foreign goods in 1949, look for the total to be at least $8,000,000,000 in 1950. Few think they will. But this increase, together with an expected drop in American exports of goods by that year's estimated $12,-000,000,000, would narrow the trade gap which has yawned since the war between what Americans sell abroad and what they buy from abroad.

Trade Gap

Official figures on 1949's exports and imports will be forthcoming in February. Estimates indicate a trade gap between exports and imports of goods of about $5,900,000,000, an increase of $564,000,000 compared with 1948. The gap in services is estimated at $631,000,000 compared with $792,000,000 in 1948 and $1,-1948.

Foreign traders estimate that at least $4,000,000,000 of the United States export total for 1949 is destined to be the form of foreign aid or another.

What is coming up in 1950 to affect, maybe determine, foreign trade?

Z. C. A. — Economy-minded Congressmen will fight to whittle down funds for the continuation of the European Co-Operation Administration (The Marshall Plan).

Integration—the United States will put pressure on Western European countries to unite economically. Americans want across their boundaries as freely as they now move from state to state in the United States, and to cut out the double price whereas export subsidies on the one hand and the same items sold to the home market.

Tariffs—A third round of tariff-cutting negotiations expected to start in January, 1950, under reciprocal trade agreement authority granted by last year's extension by Congress. Between Jan. 1 and June 30 the United States will be putting into effect, as other countries sign up, the duty cuts agreed to in the second round of negotiations at Annecy, France.

Trade Treaty—In order to revise U. S. customs regulations is planned for 1950. Traders say some-times the way customs is handling keep more goods out of the United States than to tariffs.

United Church S.S. Presents Annual Christmas Concert

Frankford — The Frankford United Church Sunday School presented their annual Christmas concert in the Community-Memorial Hall last Friday night, with a fine audience. The program opened with a "Welcome" by Mrs. Johns' class, followed by a chorus by the Junior School. Recitations were given by Marilyn Christopher, Lyle Williams, Bob Williams, Brenda Patrick, Glen Reynolds, Eleanor Beach, Reg Williams and Donna Chase.

A two-part chorus was presented by the Intermediate and Junior girls classes. Dialogues were presented by Mrs. Grant Patrick's class, Mrs. Gerald Carlisle's class and Mrs. Johns' class. Recitations were presented by Mrs. Johns' class and Mrs. Halsall's class Monandos in the predominantly Canadian raid on Dieppe eight years ago and won the D.S.O. for his daring, says there are 10,-000,000 acres of forest or less in Scotland.

"One hundred years ago cattle-raising on the keynote of the Highland economy," Lord Lovat wrote in a Sunday newspaper. "Now we are producing only one-quarter of what the Highland clansmen raised."

Takes Own Tip

Lord Lovat is taking his own advice. Three years ago, he told the House of Lords, he stocked 30,000 acres of deer forest in Inverness with beef cattle. The experiment was a success. Specifically, a small black Aberdeen Angus, has brought fancy prices in Argentina.

The Earl of Runfingdon, Parliamentary secretary to the agriculture ministry, replied to the debate. He said the government wants to do what it can to assist cattle-raising in Scotland, but it needs reliable estimates first.

Lord Lovat has other ideas about Scotland. He is scornful of government regulations which don't put up a hen house without a permit"—and thinks there are too many laws for hydro-electric power development and state afforestation. He visualizes the crofter countries winding up as "a Caledonian forest with a mud hut in it."

Movie Idol

Tall, handsome Lord Lovat turned post-war farmer after a career spanning the age of movie idol. Once described as "a best roof-climber of his day" Lovat, 42, added an athletic flair his adventurous spirit in Commando raids on the Scandinavian lands, Boulogne and Dieppe.

In the D-Day landing in Normandy, he reached his rendezvous after bitter fighting accompanied, one version says, by two Scot pipers and looking as nonchalant as a stroller in Piccadilly.

Lord Lovat led the famed Scouts Regiment which trained in the Canadian Rockies before going into action in Europe.

A French citation described him as showing a "total despite of danger" on the day he won part, he said the worst part of war was not the danger, but the time "when you hear them pass, you stretcher' and you see your best friends carried off under a blanket."

MARMORA

Churches Hold Christmas Services

Marmora—With a large congregation present, Christmas Day was celebrated at Sacred Heart Church by the Rev. M. A. O'Neill. The altar boys preceeded the children in a procession to the crib, where the singing of Christmas hymns. An appropriate sermon was delivered by Father O'Neill. Other Masses were also celebrated at 8 and 9 a.m. Christmas Day, by benedictine of the Blessed Sacrament. The altar was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums.

Carol Service

Decorated with evergreens and with the music of the choir, St. Paul's Anglican Church was attended by a good number of people and children of the congregation, for a two-fold service on Christmas eve, at which the rector, Rev. J. M. Brownlie officiated.

A carol service was succeeded by a choral celebration of the Holy Communion. The choir sang the anthem, "The Heavens Are Telling" by Beethoven. The rector preached upon the text in the Book of Isaiah, "Unto Us a Child Come a Star Forth From Jacob."

At 7.30 p.m. on Christmas day, a festival service was held during which the rector sang as a solo, "Gloria in Excelsis" and the anthem "Glad Tidings" by Caleb Semper.

The Methodist United Church also kept pace with the spiritual requirements of the season. Christmas eve there was a candlelight service at 11 p.m. Rev. Reid who officiated gave a short talk on the origin of some of the carols sung. A short service was held on Christmas morning at which the senior and junior choirs joined in leading the congregation in the singing of carols, responsive readings and in the rendition of the anthem "Angels Christmas Carol" and Christmas folk song.

The topic of the sermon was "His Name Shall Be Called."

The church was prettily decorated for the services.

AT THE BELLS — Cary Grant, all dolled up in false hair as a dilettante, gets advice from Ann Sheridan on how to act as a bride' in this scene from the hilarious comedy now playing at the Belle Theatre. Whitehall Notebook:

Lord Lovat Sees Highlands As Solution for Meat Shortage

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 29 (CP)— Lord Lovat, dashing Scottish soldier-farmer in peer, sees the Scottish Highlands as a partial solution to Britain's meat shortage.

If the government takes his advice, it will encourage more cattle raising in the Highlands to put more beef on British tables.

The 33-year-old chief of Clan Fraser, who led British commandos in the predominantly Canadian raid on Dieppe eight years ago and won the D.S.O. for his daring, says there are 10,-000,000 acres of forest or less in Scotland.

"One hundred years ago cattle-raising on the keynote of the Highland economy," Lord Lovat wrote in a Sunday newspaper. "Now we are producing only one-quarter of what the Highland clansmen raised."

Takes Own Tip

Lord Lovat is taking his own advice. Three years ago, he told the House of Lords, he stocked 30,000 acres of deer forest in Inverness with beef cattle. The experiment was a success. Specifically, a small black Aberdeen Angus, has brought fancy prices in Argentina.

The Earl of Runfingdon, Parliamentary secretary to the agriculture ministry, replied to the debate. He said the government wants to do what it can to assist cattle-raising in Scotland, but it needs reliable estimates first.

Lord Lovat has other ideas about Scotland. He is scornful of government regulations which don't put up a hen house without a permit"—and thinks there are too many laws for hydro-electric power development and state afforestation. He visualizes the crofter countries winding up as "a Caledonian forest with a mud hut in it."

Movie Idol

Tall, handsome Lord Lovat turned post-war farmer after a career spanning the age of movie idol. Once described as "a best roof-climber of his day" Lovat, 42, added an athletic flair his adventurous spirit in Commando raids on the Scandinavian lands, Boulogne and Dieppe.

In the D-Day landing in Normandy, he reached his rendezvous after bitter fighting accompanied, one version says, by two Scot pipers and looking as nonchalant as a stroller in Piccadilly.

Lord Lovat led the famed Scouts Regiment which trained in the Canadian Rockies before going into action in Europe.

A French citation described him as showing a "total despite of danger" on the day he won part, he said the worst part of war was not the danger, but the time "when you hear them pass, you stretcher' and you see your best friends carried off under a blanket."

Churchill Fought His Way Toward Heart of Every Storm, Is Man of Half Century

New York, Dec. 22—(AP) — Winston Churchill—Time magazine editors say—is the "man of the half-century."

The cover of the wartime coalition prime minister by artist Ernest Hamlin Baker is on the cover of the Jan. 2 Time which contains a 16-page supplement—"The Half-Century."

"No man's history," Time says, "can sum up the dreadful wonderful years 1900-50. Churchill's story omits closest."

Describing the British Conservatives leader as "one of the half-century's greater politicians," Time said: "sometimes wrong, often right, he fought his way toward the heart of every storm.

Rose to Unimaginable Heights

"In 1900, Churchill, like his contemporaries, looked forward to a pleasant year. Like his contemporaries, Churchill came to struggle through depths and rise to heights unimaginable in 1900."

In assessing the period, Time weaves Churchill's career into the international scene.

"His chief contribution was to shape of rocks ahead, and to lead the rescue parties. He was not the man who designed the ship; What he did was to launch it and steer."

That a free world survived in 1950, with a hope of more progress and less calamity, was due in large measure to Churchill, Time adds that Churchill, "as mobilizer of two great national defense efforts (two World Wars), unwittingly contributed more than all the Fabians to the triumph of the Socialist state."

The magazine analyzes Churchill's First World War contributions to victory—his part in tank development, the ill-fated Dardanelles expedition and as Munition Minister—and his later career when in 1940 he became Prime Minister at the age of 65.

Churchill, Time says, "attained the supreme responsibility at a moment of supreme crisis. He brought to his task a deep sense of the moral and political necessity of good faith between wartime allies.

Then, Time says, in March, 1946, Churchill "performed another great service for western civilization" with his Fulton, Mo., speech. Much of the text of the magazine says, "came the Marshall Plan, Western Union, the Military Aid Program, the decline of the Communist threat to Western Europe, and the spirit of defiance that had inspired the great six lift to the heights of the South of Russian blockade."

As the half century closes, Time says, Churchill was prepared for his 13th British general election. It then asked:

"His would fight B—as he had fought all his other great battles —on the issue of freedom. Churchill likes freedom. He has been with freedom on some of its darkest and brightest days."

Western Newsmen Barred From Trial Of Young Swede

Prague, Dec. 29 — (AP) — Western newspaper men were barred today from the trial of a young Swedish business man who is on trial at Prague's Pankrac prison on charges of industrial espionage.

Czech authorities told representatives of western news agencies there was "not enough room at the trial" for the great interest shown. But the official Czech news agency Ceteka had not carried a word about the impending trial, nor had the Communist-controlled newspapers of the country.

No specific accusations other than the general charge of espionage were disclosed in the case of Ivo Delmonde, 29-year-old Holger Hjolm.

Hjolm, director of a Stockholm importing firm, has been in prison here for more than three months.

The only newspaper men admitted were reporters from a Soviet Bloc newspaper, a radio and a Ceteka representative.

Stockholm pleaded innocent, the Swedish legation announced. It also disclosed that eight Czech nationals, five men and three women, are being tried with Hjolm on charges of attempting to smuggle production tools out of the country and attempting to help Czechs flee across the frontiers.

A spokesman of the legation said Dutch officials had not as yet been able to see Lozen.

Fear Fisherman Lost, Ice Breaks Up Under Shack

Sis. Croix, Que., Dec. 29 (CP)

Mayor G. H. Marcotte reported today that Alphonse Ovila Bergeron is thought to have lost his life when St. Lawrence River ice broke up under his fishing shack.

Mayor Marcotte said two Transport Department ice - breakers are searching the spot where the ice broke during an early morning grale but little hope is held for Bergeron's safety.

The mayor said wreckage of the ice-fisherman's shack, his lantern and shovel have been located and fishing compendium thought he had lost his life.

A total of seven fishing shacks were destroyed or carried away, when mild weather and a fierce gale caused the ice surface to break.

Six Months to Live

By Nancy Garden

As Ann thought of Marry she suddenly remembered the mail that had been handed to her as she left the hotel. She must look at it now. "Oh," she exclaimed involuntarily as she saw Harry's letter. "The poor girl. Well it's a good thing she has her husband. After all, I don't believe that Gerald was much good to her. Perhaps it's just as well this happened. It may save her a lot of worry. I'm sure he would never have amounted to anything, especially if his aunt had turned over the management of her estate to him."

So much had happened since Ann had so impulsively taken her friend's place aboard ship! She smiled now as she remembered what she had planned to do—ling her own affairs without any consideration for anybody and brooking no interference from any one. It seemed as though her hands would still be tied. Perhaps it was fool's luck to go and live with her brother and make, or at least try to make up, to him for the resentment that she had denied him in her earlier years. Her recent life seemed to pass before her as a play in which she had to play her roles unwillingly. The curtain had dropped on the first act. The hero had vanished from the picture. Would he ever flash back again?

Meanwhile Jim Riddell was working his way down to the Transvaal. No letters and no cables had been brought to his attention and on this afternoon he had just returned to the hotel after a long ride across the veldt. As he glanced at the mail which had arrived for him during his absence he looked casually through it till he saw an envelop with the familiar handwriting of Harry Harper. Immediately his thoughts sped to Ann. She had never sent him even a postcard, and yet he knew she cared for him. Would she be able to solve the mystery of her silence?

"By Jove!" he exclaimed as he read Harry's invitation to stay with him for a bit on the Rand. "I never knew Harper had a sister. I wonder what sort of a girl she is."

As Ann travelled farther north a reckless spirit of adventure possessed her. She was all alone in a foreign country. There was no one to curb her desires or put a damper on her spirits. As she approached one of the points at which Jim's itinerary indicated that he should be she had a bold desire to wire him. But suddenly her fancy changed. She had made such a mystery about her reasons for not marrying him and now—everything was changed. Even when Harry had discovered her deception he had treated it quite lightly. Would Jim have made light look like. He had spoken of it constantly as a much needed joke. He had concluded it was merely a farmhouse of fair pretensions, but when she arrived at the place she was amazed. It had originally belonged to a very wealthy Boer family. It was wonderfully located and no expense had been spared. Very notable and in fact make it beautiful which it certainly was.

"I'd no idea there were such houses in this part of the world," remarked Ann as she drank her coffee the first evening after her arrival.

"Oh, but the people here are just as fond of comfort as those in America, and life in the country is really quite delightful as you will find out, you'll stay here a few days."

"Yes," laughed Ann, "that's the only thing I learned at boarding school."

"All right, there's one of the horses that I think will suit you. We'll have a look at him tomorrow, unless you feel tired and would prefer a day in bed."

"Oh, no, I'm not tired, merely deliciously sleepy," and Ann tried to suppress a yawn.

"Well, I won't keep you up any longer tonight," said her brother.

"I'm afraid I couldn't keep awake," laughed Ann as she bade him goodnight. But when her head touched the pillow and her eyes looked across the moonlit veldt, she raised herself up again. The country was like fairyland as far as the eye could see. With a languorous sigh she lay down once more. What had life in store for her next?

Jim Riddell was riding towards Harry Harper's ranch his thoughts tossed between the prospect of meeting Harry's sister and the possibility that Harper might have news of Gerald Mary Lambert. In spite of all Mary had said an old doubt crept into his mind. Perhaps she did care for Harry. Raising his eyes towards the horizon Jim saw a horse galloping towards him It was riderless, although it had both saddle and bridle. Snorting wildly it passed him as he spurred his to the point from which it had come. There were treacherous holes among the hummocks.

As Jim's eyes sought the fallen rider he caught sight of a spkotch of vivid green against the dun background of the veldt. He galloped towards it. It was a woman's scarf. As the thud of his horse' hoofs echoed in the still air a girl rose. Quickly he dismounted, She was smiling and unhurt.

"Harry!" Jim exclaimed.

"Oh, Jim!" Eagerly Ann stretched out her hands.

"What are you doing here? Are you hurt?"

"I'm alright. I dismounted to pick some flowers, and suddenly my horse kicked up his heels and took to his heels. I thought he might as well sit down till he came back again. I heard your horse galloping I thought he had" answered Ann as she struggled to her feet. "Jim, what's happened?"

"Don't do that," he said. "It's not such glorious luck. It's a shame to knee it up."

Suddenly Ann raised her eyes to Jim's. "I was thinking about you."

"Tell me your thoughts," Jim spoke hoarsely.

"I wished you come and rescue me."

"I have," he murmured as he put his arm about her. "You've something else to tell me?"

"Oh, such a lot! It's happened." Ann sighed faintly.

"You've changed your mind. You're going to marry me," Jim whispered as his eyes scanned Ann's. His horse pawed the ground impatiently.

Swiftly Ann twined her arms about his neck. "Oh, Jim. I've been horribly foolish."

For a moment Jim wondered if after all she had loved Harry more than him, and had just found it out, but Ann's words began.

"Oh, Jim, it's such a long story I don't believe I can tell you now." The horse was nosing Jim's arm.

"Tell me you love me," he exclaimed as he kissed her passionately.

"You know I love you." Ann repeated when at length she let her go.

Slowly they walked along while the horse looked for an occasional succulent mouthful. They had much to say that had indeed her eyes. "Look," she said as she put her hand impulsively on his sleeve.

In the distance several men on horseback appeared. They must be looking for you. I suppose your aunt will be having a fit."

"What?" exclaimed Jim a moment later. "Good gracious your aunt after all, and you're the utmost importance to me to meet? Well, that's a good one. By Jove there be is himself," declared Jim as he waved to the leader.

Teamwork Needed To Keep up War On Traffic Toll

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP) — Highways Minister Doucett of Ontario today repeated the teamwork among the press, radio, safety organizations and motorists to keep up a planned attack on traffic accident losses in 1950.

In a statement, the minister said there "is some encouragement, but no satisfaction or comfort in the fact that statistically there has been a marked improvement in traffic safety" in 1949.

He estimated about 800 lives were lost in traffic accidents during the year and at least 18,000 suffered personal injuries. Death losses would be about the same as in 1941, but this year traffic and accident hazards was about 25 per cent higher than in 1941, he said.

Compared with 1941, there were 300,000 more cars in Ontario in 1949 and the roads travelled increased by about 250,000,000,000.

Joint Sunday School Classes Hold Christmas Concert

Tweed—A joint Christmas concert by the Sunday School classes of the Salvation Army, the Girl Guides and Brownies was held at the Salvation Army citadel. Over 130 parents and friends attended the happy event.

The program was opened by the chairman Lieut. Joyce Jamieson of Belleville, with "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." Capt. Irene Jones read the Christmas Bible reading, and Brigadier Gage of Belleville the newly appointed head of the Central Ontario division, was introduced by Lieut. Jamieson and led the gathering in prayer.

Miss Lois Gage rendered a vocal solo, "O Holy Night" which was followed by a beautiful quartet "The Divine Spark" by the Brownies. The girls' class of Mrs. Bowerman presented a pretty drill, and the boys' class entertained with a sketch entitled "Little Town of Bethlehem"; Carol and Dianne Quinn sang "Christmas Secret" as a duet, following which a playlet "Merry Christmas" was given by the Girl Guides. Divisional Gage entertained the youngsters with a number of movie cartoons, and the program came to a close when Hazle Woodcock bade farewell to the large audience in a brief address.

Previous to the entertainment a delicious supper was served to the children of the Salvation Army Sunday School and their parents with over 40 sitting down to the well laden tables.

Flood-Control Project Started On Aux Sable

Sarnia, Dec. 29—(CP)—First phase of a modern multi-million dollar flood-control and conservation project was begun Wednesday Charles Gray, Sarnia contractor who has been at Port Franks, 30 miles northeast of Sarnia on the Aux Sable River.

The current undertaking is the first concrete move in a $2,000,000 program announced by the Aux Sable conservation authority in Parkhill last August.

The Sarnia Construction official said the huge dragline onto a float at the government dock and dispatched it to the site of the dredging project 45 miles up Lake Huron.

There it joined bulldozers and other company implements constructing the dredging project.

Work will commence immediately on the 8,700 foot trench which is to start from a point on the existing channel about 3,300 feet west of the Blue Water Highway bridge and end in Lake Huron 2,000 feet northeast of the present Aux Sable River mouth.

The new channel 100 feet wide and 12 feet deep is primarily a conservation measure and will provide quick drainage from the rich celery beds near Thedford during spring floodtide.

"Syntona Surely Surprised Me," Says This Grateful Lady

"Those Awful Attacks of Indigestion are Gone; I Am Free of Pains in My Back and Kidneys, My Nerves are Calmed, and I Sleep Soundly Once More."

All over Ontario people are talking like that about SYNTONA, the amazing herbal compound that is bringing relief from suffering and distress to thousands of grateful men and women. For example, Mrs. Louise Leigh, 136 Elmwood Ave., London, Ontario, made the following statement:

"For more than 10 years I suffered with a dreadful pain in my back. I tried this and that, but never found relief. Sometimes I felt so nervous I could scream, but no matter what I did, I just seemed to sour up my stomach and swallow gallons of gas. Then I got into my throat. One day I was so bad I could hardly get my breath and I knew I would have to do something. I was subject to spells of palpitation, dizziness and nausea. Pains would develop in my back and I would sit hunched up, moaning. Nobody knows how I suffered. I was constantly trying one thing after another without getting any help. Then I read about SYNTONA. I'm glad I did. I'm glad I wrote to the person who suffers like I did will understand why I want to make this statement. I'm not afraid to solve the mystery of her silence!

"Why not?" he exclaimed as he read Harry's invitation to stay with him for a bit on the Rand. "I never knew Harper had a sister. I wonder what sort of a girl she is."

As Ann travelled farther north a reckless spirit of adventure possessed her. She was all alone in a foreign country. There was no one to curb her desires or put a damper on her spirits. As she approached one of the points at call where Jim's itinerary indicated that he should be she had a bold desire to wire him. But suddenly her fancy changed. NEW CHANCE FOR HOLLANDER

Mrs. M. Jamieson, Brantford, has arranged to sponsor Jan Lemers, a young Hollander who tended the grave of her son, Cpl. Harold Jamieson (inset)), killed with the Queen's Own Rifles at Nijmegen. Lemers will come to Canada. His sponsor is owner of two farms in the Brantford district.

Little Girl Owes Life to Skill Of Surgeons at Children's Hospital

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP) — A chestnut, blonde Newfoundland girl who looks upon the Hospital for Sick Children as her home and its doctors and nurses practically as "daddies and mammies" is getting ready to go home.

She had not seen her parents since September, 1946, when she was two, but she swallowed lye at her home in the village of Bonn Bay. Doctors then gave her little hope of survival. Her badly-burned throat and oesophagus closed up and she could not swallow food or liquids.

She was taken to the Grenfell Mission at St. Anthony, Nfld. Doctors there decided only the best treatment could pull her through and she was brought to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

Teams of medical experts spent hundreds of hours treating Alma, but they were hampered having to work in an overcrowded, 70-year-old building.

Friends of the hospital now are conducting a campaign to raise $4,000,000 to build a new one for a new building. The campaign closes tomorrow and $637,526 still is needed.

Because Alma was unable to swallow, she was fed directly through the stomach. She swallowed bits of food as well as she could oesophagus, and later narrow ed were passed down her throat.

At 4½ Alma still is too young to know what has been done for her. All she knows is that she is going back to her other home —cured.

DOUBLE DEATHS

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)— A few hours after learning of his wife's death, Constable John Temple Smith, died of a heart attack. A joint funeral will be held tomorrow.

Neighbors said the Smiths, both over 70, were devoted to each other.

TWO RED EFFORTS TO REACH ISLANDS ARE SMASHED

Both Islands Serve to Screen Formosa from Communists

Hong Kong, Dec. 30 (AP) — Chinese Communist attempts to land on two islands of Nationalist retreat off the mainland have been smashed, government reports said today.

The most determined Red attempt was against Matsu Island, off China's east coast about 100 miles northwest of the Nationalist island stronghold of Formosa, the official General News Agency said.

The second was a smaller operation against Haitan, big island off the south coast. But the Nationalists asserted that even here the attackers lost heavily.

These claims coincided with first reliable reports that the Communists have begun the infiltration of Formosa itself.

These accounts said Red troops made small, isolated landings from junks along Formosa's long coastline, then vanished hastily into the interior.

The assult on Matsu appeared the most serious. Many military observers believe the Reds must subjugate Matsu and strongly defended Quemoy Island, about 20 miles to the southwest, before attempting the big operation against Formosa.

Screen Formosa

Both islands help to screen Formosa, as does the blockade base of Chusan Island, nearly 300 miles north of Matsu.

Central News said several thousand Communist troops landed on Matsu Christmas night from a nearby island and were pursued with heavy casualties.

The Nationalists air force asserted that a two-day aerial attack on mainland targets had disrupted Communist plans for the invasion of Haitan Island.

Haitan's coast artillery — war said to have broken up several small-scale landing attempts.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on Haitan's Communist guerrillas, who tried to seize a 10-mile strip of the east coastline, Nanfow peninsula, the Nationalist said. Government troops moved out to within 10 miles of Haitan.

Nationalist gunboats were reported to have moved in close to Liuchow's shores and shelled small craft being massed for the invasion.

The government of Formosa announced that 35,000 Formosans between the ages of 20 and 22 would be required for defence of the island. This is the first conscription of Formosans, who oppose both the Nationalists and the Communists.

NRC EXPERIMENTS MAY PROVIDE WARMER HOMES

Establish Station To Study Problems

Ottawa, Dec. 30 (CP)—Canadians soon may be able to start building homes that are warmer and scientifically designed to withstand the rigors of the country's climate.

The government's National Research Council, reviewing the work of its 9,000 scientists during 1949, reported yesterday that a regional N.R.C. station is being established at Saskatoon to study building problems.

Large laboratory facilities are being set up in the station to test wall sections under severe conditions and these tests will begin early in 1950.

In addition a heat pump has been installed by N.R.C. in its Ottawa laboratories on the Montreal road for demonstration purposes and for studying the economics of the use of a heat pump under eastern Canada conditions

The Saskatoon experiments will deal primarily with building problems of special interest to the prairie provinces.

A special test building and concrete tunnel have been constructed where the tests will be built. The huts will be subjected to the full blizzards and six world and six Canadian.

As the top Canadian break they picked unanimously Lieutenant Noronic fire which took 119 lives Sept. 17. In second place was the June 27 federal election, and third the airliner explosion crash in Quebec on September 9 which led to murder charges against J. Albert Guay.

The selection:

Second news: 2, Russia's atom bomb; 3, Devaluation; 3, Collapse of China; 4, Tito's break with Russia; 5, The Atlantic Pact; 6, Canadian Mindzrenty trial.

Canadian News: 1, Noronic fire; 2, Federal election; 3, Sault. Ste. Marie gas cracks; 4, Newfoundland's union with Canada; 5, Raking of rental tops; 6, delayed combines report.

Other selections were somewhat in contrast with those of 1948 when two stories high in human interest—President Truman's election and the birth of Princess Charles—led the parade. Except for the intensely personal appeal of the Mindzrenty trial and February, 1948, other selections were concerned mostly with the moves of nations rather than with people as individuals.

Human interest was high however in the Canadian selections. Particularly in the case of the Noronic, with its stark tragedy, and the bizarre Sault-Au Cochon Trials, people as individuals were concerned. Even the election had its lighter than usual personality-interest with three of the two main parties fighting their first national contest.

Afternoon Trains No. 9 and 10 Operating Between Toronto And Belleville Discontinued

Toronto, Dec. 30—(CP)—Curtailment of Canadian National Railways passenger train service in southern and southeast Ontario due to "serious depletion of company coal reserves," was announced today by A. J. Lomas, vice-president central region.

The announcement said that in southern Ontario, effective Jan. 8, the curtailment will affect afternoon trains between Toronto, London and Windsor. However no main line trains between Chicago, Toronto and Montreal will be affected.

Train No. 30 will be consolidated at London with train No. 16 from Detroit. East of Toronto, afternoon trains Nos. 9 and 10, operating between Toronto and Belleville, are discontinued. However, trains Nos. 8 and 14 will make some additional stops between Toronto and Belleville.

In the northern Ontario district certain branch line trains will operate on tri-weekly or semi-weekly schedules, the announcement said.

The company announced Thursday in Montreal, P.Q., that five of its six trains operating between Halifax and Montreal will be taken off the line Jan. 8 because of the coal shortage. The company said the shortage was caused by work stoppages in United States collieries.

Biggest News of 1949 Russia's Possession Of the Atomic Bomb

By The Canadian Press

Russia's possession of the atomic bomb was the biggest news of 1949.

Close second in its world impact was Britian's devaluation of the pound. In third place was the collapse of China under communist arms.

These stories ranked highest in news value in a Canadian Press survey of Canadian newspaper editors and broadcasters who were asked to choose the year's top stories and six world and six Canadian.

As the top Canadian break they picked unanimously Lieutenant Noronic fire which took 119 lives Sept. 17. In second place was the June 27 federal election, and third the airliner explosion crash in Quebec on September 9 which led to murder charges against J. Albert Guay.

The selection:

Second news: 2, Russia's atom bomb; 2, Devaluation; 3, Collapse of China; 4, Tito's break with Russia; 5, The Atlantic Pact; 6, Canadian Mindzrenty trial.

Canadian News: 1, Noronic fire; 2, Federal election; 3, Sault. Ste. Marie gas cracks; 4, Newfoundland's union with Canada; 5, Raking of rental tops; 6, delayed combines report.

Other selections were somewhat in contrast with those of 1948 when two stories high in human interest—President Truman's election and the birth of Princess Charles—led the parade. Except for the intensely personal appeal of the Mindzrenty trial and February, 1948, other selections were concerned mostly with the moves of nations rather than with people as individuals.

Human interest was high however in the Canadian selections. Particularly in the case of the Noronic, with its stark tragedy, and the bizarre Sault-Au Cochon Trials, people as individuals were concerned. Even the election had its lighter than usual personality-interest with three of the two main parties fighting their first national contest.

Establish Station To Study Problems

Ottawa, Dec. 30 (CP)—Canadians soon may be able to start building homes that are warmer and scientifically designed to withstand the rigors of the country's climate.

The government's National Research Council, reviewing the work of its 9,000 scientists during 1949, reported yesterday that a regional N.R.C. station is being established at Saskatoon to study building problems.

Large laboratory facilities are being set up in the station to test wall sections under severe conditions and these tests will begin early in 1950.

In addition a heat pump has been installed by N.R.C. in its Ottawa laboratories on the Montreal road for demonstration purposes and for studying the economics of the use of a heat pump under eastern Canada conditions

The Saskatoon experiments will deal primarily with building problems of special interest to the prairie provinces.

A special test building and concrete tunnel have been constructed where the tests will be built. The huts will be subjected to the full blizzards and six world and six Canadian.

As the top Canadian break they picked unanimously Lieutenant Noronic fire which took 119 lives Sept. 17. In second place was the June 27 federal election, and third the airliner explosion crash in Quebec on September 9 which led to murder charges against J. Albert Guay.

Belgrade, Dec. 30 — (AP) — Yugoslavia claimed today that Russian-led satellite countries are sending terrorist gangs into this country in an effort to sabotage Marshal Tito's independent government.

Sault Ste. Marie, Dec. 30 — (CP)—An ambulance aircraft was scheduled to take off from here today on a mercy flight mission which may save the life of a miner, injured Tuesday in an accidental blast of dynamite during prospect work in the Michibishi area, about 200 miles northwest of here.

Provincial police Const. Orval Watlo, at Wawa, reported by phone Thursday night that two companions of a man known only as "Red" Watson staggered into Wawa after a two-day trek in freezing weather from the Amichi gold mining property at Lake Michibishi with news of the accident. Two other follow workers stayed with the injured man, Watson. It was not known if he was still alive.

Fib on Death of Trout Gives Ohioan Title of "World Champion Liar"

Burlington, Wis., Dec. 30 (AP) — A fantastic fishing fib involving the death of a Colorado trout today gave a fabricating Ohioan the title of "World's champion liar."

The Burlington Liar's Club said its annual award goes to "Herschel" Fohn" Goerlich of Toledo "with a high of relief and by unanimous vote."

He replaces the retiring champion, L. W. Tupper, of Patricia, Ont.

Goerlich's tall tale related that, alone in Colorado, he caught a trout on a spoon bait in his excitement forgot about his landing net and half hooks.

He reeled his prize up to the top of the pole which he then heaved out of the water into an upright position. The pole was so long he couldn't reach the fish and he dared not put the pole into the water for fear the trout would escape.

"I stuck the butt of that long, limber pole into the ground, drew my trusty hunting knife, climbed up the pole and stabbed that fish to death."

Honorable mention was awarded to Bob Eiverman of Louisville, Ky., and C. E. Berry of Maumee, Ohio.

Tupper last year was crowned for his tale of seven trout which were blown out of the water by a cod over-inflated they were so full of holes they wouldn't hold air.

Eiverman won honorable mention with his story about a large fish which rowed his boat so fast he blacked out. When he awoke in a hospital he was told he had been travelling so rapidly motor boat could not catch him and there was fear he would attend to death. He escaped a lingering death after friction burned out the bottom of his boat and he tumbled into the lake.

Berry offered this story: "It became so cold in his town the mercury in the thermometer "dropped through the bottom of the tube and was three bricks below zero."

Vigorous Policy Backed by Fleet To Block Redism

Aircraft Carrier, Destroyers Sent East

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)— The United States today was reported to be shaping a vigorous new policy—backed by strengthened Asiatic fleet — to block the spread of communism in the Far East.

The U.S. Navy said the 27,000 ton, 45-plane aircraft carrier Boxer and two destroyers have been sent to strengthen the seventh task fleet, based in the Philippines.

Announcement of this shift in naval power in the Pacific closely followed a session between President Truman and his top military and diplomatic strategists. Members of the National Security Council wouldn't say what went on, but it is known that planners have prepared a blueprint on Asiatic policy for Truman's approval.

At the same time, the state department broadcast to U.S. shipping lines a warning from the Nationalist government of China that the approaches to Shanghai, key Communist "guerrilla" target, have been blocked by mines.

That brought a prompt response from H. J. Isbrandtsen, president of the big shipping line. His company is practically the only remaining American ships in the area.

Strasz Protest Sent

Isbrandtsen said in New York he has wired State Secretary Dean Acheson asking that a "strong protest" be sent to the Chinese Communists "on the grounds that mine-laying is a clear breach of American-Chinese treaties.

The three, who have been released on bail of $2,500 each, are Garnet Shilling, 19, Sigsbee Drive, 18, and Jack Turner, 21.

Eight cottages were found broken into last week, with one being owned by Frank Madison, Toronto, and the others by a number of owners. Articles stolen included one owned by a Mr. Simnett of Oshawa.

Premier Bidault Wins Two Votes Of Confidence

Vote Favors Raising of Tax On Production of Industry

Paris, Dec. 30 — (AP)—Premier Georges Bidault won two votes of confidence in the National Assembly today. Both were on 1950 budget questions. The first count was 305 to 287, the second 307 to 288.

The first vote was on the question of whether to raise the tax on industrial production from 12.5 per cent to 13.5 per cent Communists and followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle opposed it. Bidault's cabinet had recommended it.

This was intended to raise about 45,000,000,000 francs ($138,000,000) in additional revenue to meet the outlays in Bidault's 1950 budget, calling for expenditures of about 2,257,000,000,000 francs ($6,440,000,000).

Parliament already has agreed in principle to this budget, but is balking at raising the revenues to meet it.

French Indo-China Given Measure Of Sovereignty

Saigon, Indo-China, Dec. 30 — (AP)—Agreements today bestowed a large measure of domestic sovereignty on the Indo-Chinese state of Viet Nam.

An agreement giving the Indo-Chinese greater control over their own affairs was signed by Leon Pignon, French high commissioner, and ex-emperor Bao Dai at the city hall here as 50,000 watched.

Bao Dai heads a French-backed Indo-Chinese government which is opposed by the Nationalist forces of Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh.

The agreement implements a treaty signed last March by Bao Dai and French President Vincent Auriol. The treaty, which the French Parliament still must ratify, gives the new Indo-Chinese state its own army, part of the mission status, Viet Nam includes the Indo-Chinese neutral states of Tonkin, Annam and Cochin China.

The agreement signed today gives the Bao Dai government control of local matters dealing with Viet Nimese, police services and local administration.

The French high commissioner will retain reduced security forces under his command and naval courts will settle disputes between the French navy and the Indo-Chinese of the "French Union".

Mid-Century Mark Isn't Due Until New Year's 1951 Not 1950

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—If you plan to sit up tomorrow night to toast the dawn of the mid-century, be sure to put plenty of ice in your drink.

Why? Because you will still have 365 more days to wait.

Yes, that's right. The 20th century won't officially reach the halfway mark for another year—on the New Year's morn starting 1951, not 1950.

That sounds crazy, but that's the truth.

I know because I assumed that our century would be half-gone at the close o this month. And I was wrong, like this boner:

"The 20th century reaches the halfway mark Jan. 1—but halfway to where?"

Well, I couldn't have stirred up more mail if I'd printed a 10-pound bum. Scores of bewildered writers across the land wrote, some in pity, some in anger, pointing out I was as it wrong as sin.

"There's no year zero," they said in substance. "The 20th century began on Jan. 1, 1901. It will be 50 years old Dec. 31, 1951, and it will end on Dec. 31, 2000."

And a check showed these write-in readers were right in their remarks as usual.

The official observatory in Washington, the Hayden Planetarium, the World Calendar Association and Webster's unabridged dictionary all bore their arguments out. The mid-century actually doesn't arrive until the end of next year.

Don't start Jan. 1, 1950, sound more like the beginning of the mid-century than Jan. 1, 1951? Many magazines and newspapers are putting out mid-century editions in 1950 and millions of people feel that way about it.

Scientifically, they could be right. As Time Magazine points out, scholars trace the 6th century monk Dionysius Exiguus made a mistake of from one to seven years when he figured out the custom of dating the calendar from the birth of Christ. But this could really be 1950 or 1956 for all we know.

But don't let's get into that argument.

Right or wrong—and officially it appears we're wrong—it's going to drink a mid-century toast tomorrow night.

Except for that, even if the 20th century isn't 50 years old, it's half-time that it started acting like it was.

So, happy new half century to you, plus a happy new year—and that makes it official!

INDIA ACCEPTS CHINESE COMMIES AS LEGAL GOV'T.

Diplomatic Relations With Chiang's Govt. Will Cease Immediately

New Delhi, Dec. 30. (CP)— India today recognized the Chinese Communist government and said diplomatic relations with Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist regime would cease immediately.

Premier Jawaharlal Nehru's announcement thus became the first member of the British Commonwealth—and the second country outside the Soviet orbit—to accept Mao Tse-Tung's government as the legal government of the vast Asiatic country.

India's immediate neighbor and former sister in the British Colonial Empire, Burma, also has recognized the Peiping government and turned her back on Chiang Kai-Shek.

Britain and the Dominions are expected to take similar action, probably after the conference of Commonwealth Foreign Ministers opens in London Jan. 6 in Colombo, Ceylon.

Today was no explanation of why India preceded the other Commonwealth countries in proclaiming recognition. But informed sources gave these three reasons for the recognition itself:

1. The Communist government controls practically the whole of China.

2. There was no evidence that the coast of the Chinese people was opposed to the Communist regime.

3. The new government had agreed to abide by its international obligations.

India's decision was understood to have been communicated to the other Commonwealth governments and to the United States as well.

Smart Work!

Churchill, Man., Dec. 30—(CP) —Sgt. T. Wilson, officer in charge of the Canadian Provost Corps here reports a fairly fair real estate agent.

He learned recently that a house had been sold before the accommodation — short town. Provost, the owner of the house was out on the trapline.

The sergeant took a message sent to the owner by station CFCC, the military outlet here, advising the owner of the tenant's departure and recommending he sell the house as a tenant.

Sgt. Macdonnel even arranged for a plane to fly over the owner's trapline spot the next day to drop a ground signal. The answer was yes.

Junior Members Of 'Y' Pay Visit To Newspaper

As part of the holiday season program sponsored by the local Y. M. C. A., fifty junior members paid a visit to the Ontario Intelligencer today where they viewed the workings of a daily newspaper and the news gathering department.

The young people were especially interested in the Canadian Press teletype machines turning out copy from many different centres to the world. As the visitors watched, stories came in from London, England, New York City and several Canadian cities.

The visitors followed the copy to the news desk where it was edited and sent to the composing room. In the composing room attention centred around the linotype machines and mat-making machine which creates 75 pounds of pressure to the square inch in the process of completing the mat impression.

Saw Mats Converted

In the press room the junior "Y" members saw the mat converted into a half-circle metal plate, which was later locked on the press cylinder before the last printed copy left. Many little eyes followed the newsprint through the press rolls on one end of the press through the various rollers and finally to the folder and cutter from where the finished newspaper dropped down on the conveyor where it is taken to the distribution room and prepared for delivery and mailing to the city and district and throughout the whole country.

Program director Bill Pope of the Y. M. C. A. accompanied the young people on the tour and was responsible for organizing the visit to the newspaper plant. Physical director Bob Fowler assisted Mr. Pope.

The young "Y" members taking part in the tour included:—

Assessment Appeal is Heard

The assessment appeal was heard last Friday with local solicitor Kenneth Ross appearing for the seven Parkwood Heights residents, and City Solicitor R. J. Pringle appearing for the city. Mr. J. P. Coombe, member of the municipal board, also attended the hearing.

Doctor Charged With Murder by Injecting Air

Gottstown, N.H., Dec. 30—(AP) —A young doctor was under a charge today of murdering a suffering patient by injecting 10 cubic centimetres of air into the veins, but a medical referee admitted that was not enough to kill a human being.

Dr. Herman H. Saundby was charged with administering an injection of that amount of air into the veins of Mrs. Adelle Barrows, cancer patient who died 25 days ago. She pleaded innocent.

But Dr. Robert E. Biron, medical referee, told a reporter on questioning that 10 cubic centimetres of air was not enough to kill her. He claimed, however, that more air had been injected than the amount specific in the charge.

Canadian Navy Trying a New Experiment

The Canadian Navy is trying a new experiment, and the first test will take place at Kingston on the evening of January 9th.

Instead of the recruit going to the navy it will be just the opposite, when 280 young reserves will gather on the H.M.C.S. Cataraqui for classes in practically every phase of naval practice and technique.

The boys will be taken to the Navy and the centres of Belleville, Picton, Deseronto, Napanee, Gananoque and Brockville will be represented by reserve unit ratings. Members of the local unit which includes recruits from Trenton and the district will be taken to the land-based training ship by chartered buses leaving the armouries, the headquarters of the Belleville Navy Reserve.

Lieut. Commander Richard Hart, along with Lieutenants Adrian Lloyd and Wayne Simmons will accompany the new navymen on the trip.

If the experiment proves successful the classes will become a permanent item the boys will be transported to Kingston each Monday night.

TORONTO STOCKS

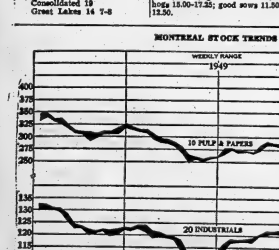
Toronto, Dec. 30—(CP)— An easier tone set in at some openings going on the Toronto Stock Exchange today, activity was the slowest of the week with trading coming in a dribble when pressure showed in mid-session.

Volume for the first three hours was 646,000 shares, about 40,000 shares less than Thursday's similar period.

Industrials opened stronger to touch a new high for the year on the Exchange's index but realizing sales appeared. Refining oils were pushed down fractions and utilities began to weaken. Papers, leadings, in Thursday's upturn, were pushed lower.

Steel of Canada moved on its own agitant the trend for a gain of $2 at $103 and a new high at $105.

Senior gold producers continued fractionally easier while Juniors showed declines ranging up to five cents. Noranda and Quemont ragged fractions in Base Metals.



Western Oils were irregular.

BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 30 (AP)— Cattle 200; beef cows 14.00-16.00; good dairy type heifers for slaughter 17.00-18.00; good weighty sausage bulls 13.00-19.00.

Calves 100; good and choice handyweight vealers 31.00-34.00; culls and bobs 18.00-22.00.

Hogs 600; good and choice bbs 15.00-17.25; good sows 11.50-12.50.

The first half-year dip and second half-year rise which characterized stock markets in 1949 is well illustrated in the graph by J. A. Granary of the Montreal Stock Exchange. It shows the action in Montreal of representative pulp and paper issues and of representative industrials. The groups acted almost identically during the year and both finished at high points. — (CP Photo.)

SOURCES OF FOOD

Interest in what the oceans and seas can do in the providing of food for the world has been aroused by an eminent scientist, Dr. Hans Hass, who claims that the vast bodies of water hold the solution to the food problems those parts of the world which know hunger. "For centuries man has been devoting his attention to land resources. He has developed and perfected new methods for tilling and growing food. But our fishing devices are like those of the stone age — the hook, the net and harpoon," he says. The Sudbury Star notes that these methods permit no selection of species as they bring out only what the sea wants to yield. But Dr. Hass has been working for new, revolutionary and modified fishing techniques and he wants to keep his secret until his methods have been patented. He points to the depth of the sea as the third dimension which can become of great importance to man who knows that land is visible on only one quarter of the globe. He states that the 10,000-foot depth of the oceans is packed with fast multiplying organic creatures, most of which are edible.

FATAL ACCIDENT TOLL

One of the most familiar phrases heard today has to do with traffic and other accidental deaths, records of which fill newspapers on Monday and after holidays and week-ends. What this heavy loss is to the nations is seen in the loss of so many lives, the injury of so many others, and financial loss through death and injury and destruction of motorcars and other property.

Already the Metropolitan Council of the United States has found out warnings of what is likely to occur this coming weekend on New Year's. In the States the estimated casualties through accidents are placed at 330 lives, a appalling thought, yet trend of accidents points to that number. Fatalities in 1949 took the lives of 2,717 in similar manner through accidents on the U. S. highways.

There are familiar causes, deaths on the highways, in the air, in burning buildings, and in the lakes, rivers and streams that make up the great loss of our neighbors across the line." - -

Accidental deaths in Canada and other countries run high.

Accidents are claiming lives which in their great numbers would populate villages. What these tragedies mean in individual and family and community life can only be estimated.

The Council holds out a grim picture for the toll of traffic in the United States on New Year's. The estimated death list totalling Christmas deaths in this country was 280 accidental deaths in the three days of which 415 were by traffic. This warning can be taken to heart by Canadians as well.

STILL WORKING

Some people look forward to the day when they can retire from work. Not so an Ocean Park, California, resident, Cipriano Chavez, 107 years old. He was reported amusing the other day and laughed when police found him and said that he had been reported missing. "Oh, I can take care of myself. I was only looking for work." One might take that as an attempt at a joke but the story went on to say that he had been working regularly as a gardener until this year.

It took a modern development to check the patriarch a bit. His daughter said he was hit recently by a bus and that slowed him down a little.

The world looks kindly on a man of his great age to see in him a spirit that is irrepressible. He has lived far beyond the usual span of life and in the eleventh decade of his life is still trying to find something to do and doing it.

The Book says the great age of 107 years, he must have been endowed with health by his parents and have lived a life of enough activity by keeping himself in fit condition through work and exercise.

That he lives so close to nature and to life may have had something to do with his success in living for association with the soil and Mother Nature is in general belief a sound basis for longevity, which in his case has extended to well. In a sense we are all hero worshipers. Examples of successful people inspire each one of us to try to be successful.

I never read an Alger book in my life, but I can understand why they were so popular. They stirred the imagination of the young and they could see that they, too, could be one of the heroes told about. Many years ago, I came across a statement that I have never forgotten, and it has inspired me. The thought was this: Make no small plans, they have not the magic to stir the human mind.

Robert Browning once wrote these inspiring words: "Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?" Before we attempt big things, we will never do anything but small things. If we try the big things often the impossible things, that we say are going to stir the imagination. How often we hear the statement: "I never dreamed that I could do it—but I did!" Once on higher ground than we thought we could attain, we are inspired to go still further.

RENOUNCES DUKE TO MAKE HIM KING

The Duke of Segovia, Don Jaime, 41-year-old second son of late King Alfonso XIII of Spain, is shown with the pretty Duchess of Segovia, as they spoke to newsmen on their arrival in Paris. The Duchess, a former Viennese opera singer, announced that she is going to divorce the Duke in order to let him his chances of winning the Spanish throne. The former opera singer's announcement said, "I was born a commoner and nobility would snub me." The Duke of Segovia announced recently that he would try to win the throne over his younger brother, Don Juan. In answer to his former announcement, the Duke said that he would never give up his Duchess, though she considers herself an impediment to his chances of gaining the throne. — Central Press Canadian.

TO STIR THE IMAGINATION

One reason why there is such interest in books of adventure is that they stir the imagination. This is true of well-written biographies, as well. In a sense we are all hero worshipers. Examples of successful people inspire each one of us to try to be successful.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By Billy Rose

HAPPY HOLIDAY

This afternoon I went down to the East Side to visit my Uncle Sheckie and Aunt Frieda the best I've been at, and by the time I managed to break away it was past 6 o'clock. As I stood on the corner of Allen and Stanton waiting for a cab, Sam Carmel the mailman, came along.

"How's Christmas down here?" I said.

"Same as always," said Sam. "For those who are doing good, it's fine. For the others —well, you used to live on Orchard Street."

"Mind if we walk along with you?" I said. "Better chance of getting a cab on Rivington."

"Rivington ain't such a good street today," said Sam.

"How come?"

"On account of somebody died" said the mailman.

"Man!"

"No, a girl. She took gas."

"What was eating her?"

"I don't know," said Sam. "Looks of things I guess. She was from Poland."

"Did you know her?"

"Not specially," said the mailman. "She was one of those refugees."

"Much to look at?"

"She looked like nothing. Only reason I never noticed her was because her mail was funny."

"How do you mean, funny?"

"Well, every Monday for the past couple of years she's been getting a letter in the same handwriting."

"So?"

"It happened to be her own handwriting," said Sam. "A mailman naturally gets to know everybody's handwriting."

"When did she take the gas?"

"Christmas. Around 9 o'clock her landlady smelled it and hollered for the cops, but by the time they got there she was dead. After they removed the body, a policeman took a look around and all he found was a bunch of letters— about a hundred of them. They were all from them, they were all from a fella named Frank, also a Pole, and some of them were pretty hot. All about how he loved her and wanted to marry her, and she shouldn't lose hope.

"The landlady showed a couple of them, and they made me want to bust out crying. The last mail on all the envelopes was Saturday night, which meant that she was up in that room making herself comfortable and stuck on her when everybody else was out at the movies and having a good time."

"Maybe there were letters from Frank," I said. "Some fellow she knew in the old country. You know—a flashback."

The postman shrugged. "That's uptown talk," he said. "The way I looked at it, she died of a broken heart because she couldn't take Christmas."

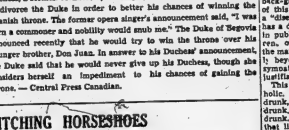
Egypt's Young King Farouk In Tight Spot



By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The name of Egypt's young King—Farouk—means "one who carefully distinguishes between right and wrong."

What's in a name? Well, if Farouk lives up to his it could put him on a difficult spot in dealing with its reported intention of marrying the lovely 16-year-old fiancee of one of his subjects.

What is right and what is wrong when a fellow falls in love with another chap's girl?

In this case, the lady is popular daughter of an Egyptian civil servant. Her fiance is Zaki Hachian, a young Egyptian Harvard graduate who is attached to the Middle East section of the United Nations Department of Economic Affairs.

Farouk is reported to have had his attention drawn to her beauty and to have fallen in love at first sight. Then, says the report, the king stopped the wedding, which was set for Dec. 8, and the unhappy fiance was ordered back to his job at Lake Success, N.Y.

The 29-year-old, six-foot monarch is a determined individual.

He was set for Dec. 6, and the nuptials were to be performed by the Moslem High Sheikh.

Farouk is reported to have had his heart set on marrying Miss Narriman Sadek, daughter of Egypt's Minister, Nahas Pasha, figured the people wouldn't support the youngster. But Farouk apparently took the initiative, dismissed Nahas and installed a government of opposition to form a new cabinet.

And Farouk got away with it.

A FLAY ON WORDS IS NO HELP TO AN ALCOHOLIC

A gentleman who is a director of a sanitarium "exclusively dedicated to alcoholism" writes me a very fine letter in which he agrees with all I had to say on the subject of alcoholism in a recent article, except for the statement I made, which challenged the concept of alcoholism as a "disease."

If the urge to drink is a disease, so is the urge to eat, if uncontrollable. While the urge to overeat invariably has an emotional back-ground, I have yet to hear of this urge being thought of as a "disease." A victim of epilepsy has a disease. It is a serious illness in public, he is absolutely innocent of pre-conceived intent in his fits. His convulsions are entirely beyond his control, and the sympathy he is entitled to is justifiably based upon that fact.

This does not apply to an alcoholic. He doesn't have to get drunk, he merely chooses to get drunk. And when he does get drunk, he wants you to believe that like the epileptic, he has a disease which "takes" him, over which he has no control, and therefore is perfectly entitled to your sympathy rather than to your disgust. Everybody knows of people who have given up drinking and stopped! Who ever heard of an epileptic doing so? The alcoholic is because he decided he wasn't going to have any more of it.

The concept of alcoholism as a disease is pure nonsense. It is people's liking. If the public regards his monstrous overindulgence as something inevitable, as equal to his "disease", his activities will be condoned and encouraged, and he is not to regard the issue of reform with much interest. Instead, he should anybody drops a socially acceptable type of conversation.

The great amount of attention in scientific centers given to the problem of alcoholism, has to my knowledge been seized upon by alcoholics as a basis for claiming that they have a "disease," which of necessity absolves them from position of lowered moral responsibility.

Why do I mention moral responsibility? A person under the influence of alcohol is a menace to the welfare of his fellow men. His acts of commission and omission interfere with the comfort and happiness of others. When he drives a car, he does so with the idea that all this results from a "disease" in the nerve centers or cells of the liver is a disease, and like the latter must be cured at all costs or accept the inevitable quirk of fate, the net effect is that the alcoholic is absolved in his infantile conduct and the issue of alcoholism is accepted on the same basis as have unwanted pregnancy.

The idea of a "disease" provides the alcoholic with an acceptable excuse to avoid reality. A man in tradition and encased in plaster in a hospital for fractures sustained in an accident, may be unable to meet his responsibilities because he undoubtedly has a disease, but I dispute that a man who leaves his pay check in a saloon and reels home to his wife and stricken family, does so because he has a disease. What he has is not a disease, but a form of immature, infantile, escapist behavior.

Every alcoholic should be sharply aware that his conduct is prodd-ctive of disgust, revulsion and outrage or the part of others, and the sooner he realizes that fact, the better off he and everyone concerned is. To palliate up an alcoholic with sympathy and to assure him that he is likewise to be envied as a "disease," is precisely the same thing as a child with a spanking, spoiled brat.

An alcoholic refuses to face facts and life. His psychology is no great, unsolved problem. The basic attitude of tolerance to an alcoholism is misguided. It breeds alcoholism. Alcoholism and self-determination is not aided by paternalism. An alcoholic is an individual who has a choice and can change that fact. Kittens born in a stable may grow up to an old alcoholic. To the realist they are still kittens.

The substitution of reality for fantasy and facts for imaginations is the basis of all forms of reform. The self-help engendered by Alcoholics Anonymous in this connection can never be fully appreciated.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Never Mind Your Blood Pressure

Is low blood pressure in itself a disease or just a symptom. A problem of alcoholism in general is claims he can cure low blood pressure in 30 days or refund money if he is down in time. (E. H. D.)

Answer — A "doctor" who makes a note like that a "cliche" would make such a preposterous claim to attract gullible customers. My advice is just this: Never mind your blood pressure. Leave it to your physician. Your carbohydrate tolerance and your nitrogen balance.

Goat's Milk

Answer—And the moon is made of cheese! Goat's milk is excellent food, especially for sickly infants who do not thrive on cow's milk, or sheep's milk. But it has no curative virtues that cow's milk doesn't have.

Strength for the Day

CONCERNING HARSH JUDGMENT

Why is harsh judgment of others such an unhappy circumstance in human relations? Not because all of us are not worthy of judgment, but because none of us has known enough about any person—his motives, capacity, etc.—to pass judgment on what he does or thinks.

Public order, of course, has to be maintained, and this makes courts and governed judges necessary; for without them an unbridled individual would destroy every vestige of happiness for their fellows. But privacy in regarding the motives of those round about us is quite another matter. We never know what leads people to act as they do. Buried in their natures may be certain deplorable tendencies which, if we knew our own natures, would drive us to much harsher judgment than we give in our dreams.

The moment we begin judging others, we begin inviting judgment upon ourselves. We are told that the brother, neighbor and friend to those round about us is to be judged by his own actions and motives. The word of Jesus was "Judge not that ye be not judged, for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you. And why beholdest thou the mote of thine own eye; and then shall thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

Quietly and unobtrusively, the Canadian Army, Royal Canadian and American troops, with the same weapons is progressing. Nevertheless, each soldier tends to persuade the others that his own weapons are the best. Even the problem of the selection lies in the immense assortment of types and number of weapons now on hand, and how readily individuals can be looked up to the standard of them.

And back of it also is the rather comical problem of nomenclature, which applies to other weapons and tools are called.

During the latest war, we Canadians had a little trouble with the Royal Artillery and Sappers.

You are all familiar with that crow bar sort of thing, used for tearing open packing cases. It is an iron bar with a sharp angle bend on one end, and a slighter bend at the other, on which there is a claw for pulling nails. We used see them in every shipping room.

Well, sir, in the Canadian army, these are called prying bars; or, in the Royal artillery, bars, prying.

Bars, prying, were very much in demand by the army service corps and other units. Every motor supply truck had one. They lay around all army depots, dumps, kitchens, tank corners and even the infantry liked to have a bar, prying, handy. Some carried a stone house habitable for a machine gun in no time with a nice bar, prying.

Now, when the Canadians got to the Rhine, they decided to be able to lay hands on any bars, prying at a moment's notice that the British didn't know of those useful tools. But ordnance officers and unit quartermasters who indented for them, drew back. Finally, it was explained that in Britain, bars, prying, are called wrecking bars.

The British had millions of them.

Besides using the same weapons, we've got to call them by the same name.

Drive to West Coast Concluded

Scenic Drive Through Cascade ountains Unforgettable Experience

By M. HALSTEAD HORN
(Conclusion)

There are several highways leading westward from Spokane, but we had selected the direct No. 10 as far as Seattle. Our first stop was in Cheney for lunch, this was a clean and prosperous appearing town with wide well-paved streets. As I am very fond of trees I was delighted to see so many large, beautiful trees and shrubs around the homes and boulevards. The National Biscuit Company have a large plant close to the highway and grounds were beautifully kept.

One thing in particular that we noticed in the towns and cities we drove through, the streets were so clean. Receptacles were placed at intervals along the streets, and the citizens seemed to be proud enough of their towns to see that waste paper, cigarette cartons and fruit peelings find their place in the receptacles, thus helping to keep the city clean.

Leaving Cheney we were once again driving through rolling farmlands, much of it sown to fall wheat. Something we had not seen before, but only the summits of those hills were being cultivated, the reason being a peculiar out cropping of rock in ridges along the sides and base of the hills. Breaking this rocky ridge from a distance it had the appearance of summer fallow but on coming closer we found it to be solid rock.

It amazed me how a power machine could be used, due to the height of the hills, the tops or summits like huge domes, but that really seemed to be the only tillable portion.

Much of Land Fenced

Much of this land was fenced and as there were no bluffs or trees in sight, the fence had been posts were brought in at consid-erable expense. Any trucks we met or saw through this section of the country were very large ones with powerful motors. Much to our surprise for a few miles we were driving through a section of badly weed-infested farmlands, soil had drifted badly and evidently the farms had been abandoned, since there were no signs of habitation anywhere. We were glad when we left that stretch behind and later in afternoon came to a better farming district where the farms were very large and it was a common sight to see from one to three combines on the farms Much, in fact nearly all, of this crop was harvested but from the well kept appearance of the house and farm machinery buildings one was safe in assuming that bountiful crops were quite common.

We were much surprised to notice a change in the picture and we entered upon a portion of country that was one of the most desolate stretches of farm land I ever hope to see. For miles and miles until the miles mounted to at least fifty, we saw what was practically a desert. Evidently this land had been overworked until all the virgin soil had been blown or exhausted in the soil and the soil had become very fine almost like talcum powder. Thus when a wind came up it drifted badly and no doubt some crops had been blown out.

Travellers Warned

A few years of those conditions and farms are abandoned and this wild stretch of country was just covered with what looked like sage brush and Russian thistle and the traveller was warned, "Do not throw away any burning material." That was about the saddest sight we saw on our trip. There were still some shells of buildings left, half buried by sand and the thought struck me, that it must have been a terrible heart break to those people who had to leave and seek new homes elsewhere, then, too, one could not help but wish and hope they had learned a lesson, because it is a crime for people to continue to misuse the soil, because what has happened there can happen elsewhere if farms are neglected.

We knew we had driven far enough but had not seen any where to stay so just kept on driving. We were gradually climbing until we were up in the hills again, with a tall cliff on one side and a sheer drop on the other, but the highway was well built, and fenced in portions of the narrower stretches.

Come to Columbia River

As we were descending a very long bridge appeared in the distance on the flats. After crossing on the bridge over a wide river we came to a small wayside filling station, it was part of a small town and I enquired the name of the river and was told it was the Columbia River. When I mentioned the bad lands my informant told me, there was a scheme to irrigate all the bad lands by putting in dams across the Columbia and have a system of irrigation ditches to supply water to the many farms needing it, I sincerely hope the plan works out satisfactorily.

Driving until long past dusk we came to Ellensburg, and decided to stay the night but found it rather difficult to locate a room. The following day was the opening day of the hunting season and it seemed as though everyone for miles around was in town that Saturday night. The people were, most courteous wherever we inquired and were kind enough to phone for us, until a room in one of the smaller hotels was held for us. We registered and found our room quite comfortable, then we went out for supper.

Believe it or not the streets were full of people just like a fair day or when a circus is in town and going into a large cafe it was difficult to find a seat, and I saw more men wearing red coats and red felt hats than I thought there were red coats and hats outside of a large city store. Most of the hunters of tomorrow carried one or two knives and the over-all picture, made on think of some of the scenes on the screen depicting some portion of the old wild west.

Crowds Disappeared

In the morning the city was almost deserted and so quiet, it seemed like a dream, the crowds we had seen everywhere the night before.

Ellensburg is a thriving city of five thousand very nicely laid out with broad streets and many trees and some fine business blocks, beautiful homes and schools. There are some fine business blocks, large theatre, several hotels, big garages and a large cottage and a number of fine churches. The district about the city is engaged in mixed farming, as the farms are eighty acres in extent. Due to the irrigation system there are many fine farms in the Ellensburg district and the Yakima district to the south are very proud of their apple orchards and gardens. At the many outside markets and stores the products of orchards and gardens were on display.

We had lunch at Cle Elum and this town is a short distance from a very lovely lake of the same name. Soon we had mountains to our right and before long we were steadily climbing, and before we entered the long and terrified our-highway passed the lower end of a very beautiful mountain lake. We were now crossing the Cascade Range of mountains and the pass is over three thousand feet above the sea level, but one of the most beautiful part in all our drive.

Overpowering Scenery

It was a beautiful sunshiny day and nature was at her best. We had towering cliffs and snow mountains on either side of us and those mountains were almost beyond description, in their beauty as most of them were heavily wooded with spruce, fir, pine and different varieties of cedar of great height and enormous girth. Many of those trees would easily be a couple of hundred feet tall and the straight end of a beautiful dark green foliage.

There were odd clumps of poplar and maple growing on the mountain sides and there was a wonderful undergrowth of from eighteen to thirty-six inches tall. This undergrowth had taken on the most gorgeous colors of different shades of red, dark crimson and gold and with the maple trees in their blaze of fall coloring made a contrast with the tall evergreens that formed a picture of unforgettable beauty. Some taller peaks were snow capped while from the little streams or springs were flowing down the mountain side and alongside the highway.

There was a great deal of traffic that Sunday afternoon, cars going up and others going down, but it was a grand wide highway and there were many spots where the motorist could park and view the scene below. We could see lakes and streams to the right of us in some places and beautiful shrubs and wild flowers to be seen. Each in the car I inquired the name of the shrubs in the undergrowth because I never seen them before, each brilliant coloring and I was told it was a huckleberry bush, I do not know if that was true or not.

Sorry to Leave

I was really sorry when we were over the pass, and leaving the mountains for a more level stretch of country. Like the farms in the climbed of the pass the farms here are only eighty acres and was told that was all one person was allowed to have.

Every portion seemed to be used as this is still a mixed farming community with dude ranches and guest farms advertised as we passed by. To right of us a chain of foothills and for miles after miles it seemed to be a wooden pipe along the base of these hills sometimes I would lose this, only to see it emerge from the earth further on. I decided it must be a pipe carrying water to some of the small towns but later I was part of the irrigation system that brought water for miles to the fruit farms.

Arrived in North Bend 311 feet above sea level late in afternoon and registered at a motel for the night. From the window in the room we could see the mountains in the distance and one could not but feel humble and small when one viewed those marvels of nature. In the town of North Bend we saw many different varieties of trees and shrubs, laurel used as hedges and another shrub just covered with red berries and no foliage. There were creeping vines and many flowers new to me.

Saw Few Game Birds

While eating our evening meal at a cafe we saw many of the returning hunters, most of them seemed rather tired but very happy as it had been a grand day to spend in the open. We did not see many birds, having been seen and I know we did not see any ducks or pheasants during our drive that day.

Monday morning we were on our way to Seattle and the approach to Seattle is a very large busy city with great wide well paved streets, beautiful homes, lovely residences and large business and shopping centre, large docks are situated at the Puget Sound entrance to an eight mile long canal that connects Puget Sound and Lake Washington, thus adding more than 90 miles to Seattle's water frontage. These locks are capable of lifting larger vessels than any other government locks excepting the Panama Canal.

We could have taken a boat from here to Vancouver or Victoria, as boats leave the port for ports in British Columbia and even Alaska, instead we took highway No. 99 up to the International boundary. Leaving Seattle and its busy traffic we drove to Everett a lovely city of thirty-five thousand All the way from Seattle for a distance of thirty miles our highway passed through numerous small towns that still nc doubt some day be part of the large metropolis. The sea was to the left of us all the way and there were several large lumber mills on the water front to load many boats in the harbors We were told that there is a plan to conserve and build up the forests. When a tree is cut down another must be planted and I thought that was a grand idea that could be copied in many parts of our own country.

Picture Windows Featured

Everett is built on the hills, there are whole streets of lovely new bungalows, and well many of the new homes have the grandest picture windows, some of them to the floor and almost to the ceiling. There were many small markets, gift stores along the highway but over about four blocks from Highway 99 was a very fine shopping centre. We drove about the city and saw so many beautiful flowers in bloom and especially roses that we almost forgot it was late in October. I was sorry to leave Everett for we were so comfortable in a motel there, but felt we had better make Bellingham the city of roses next morning. Just north of the highway was a huge stump that had been hollowed out so as that a Buick car could be driven through from one side to the other, of course we have seen some logs of Douglas fir on trucks being taken to mills, that had a diameter of from 8 to 10 feet.

Near Burlington we came to a fish hatchery and a sign "Visitors Welcome" so we parked beside a small stream and went to see what was to be seen. There was a large frame building at extensive grounds with many trees and a merry little creek rushing along in the sea.

Inside the building were many metal trays as in any hatchery but outside there was a number of cement vats filled with water and in a number of these water filled vats there were thousands of small fish from one to three inches in length. Sockeye salmon and steel heads were being raised at this hatchery.

Going around these vats I noticed several large very active salmon, that were having a grand time darting hither and fro in the water, but on one of these there were other large fish that severely moved and seemed scared to pass out of the picture. Later I learned that a spawning salmon is about dead and soon passes out.

Large Maple Leaf

The maples were shedding their leaves and I picked up one of the largest maple leafs it has been my good fortune to find as this one measured four-teen inches across the middle and it was a fine leaf sixteen as there were many that size or larger.

Bellingham like Everett is built on the hills and is noted for its many roses and rose gardens. Mixed farming and lumbering are engaged in throughout the district and many stores have grand displays out on the sides walk of fruits, nuts and vegetables. A novelty to me was a tree like this bark three times a year. Quite a handsome tree but a lady and rather a nuisance as it made too much raking up after it. The hydrangea we keep in the house in Ontario grows as a shrub outside and I saw some three feet tall and about the same in diameter and just a mass of flowers.

Since leaving Seattle we had noticed many boats along the water front, some were pleasure yachts, others were fishing schooners, others craft loading lumber. Leaving Bellingham it is but a short run into Blaine and here we were at the customs. Blaine on the American side is a nice little town but on the Canadian side there are only a few buildings and a very grand and elaborate one.

We met with courtesy at the customs and were told we were free to drive on. Just to the left of the highway was a large Memorial to Peace between the two great countries of North America.

Our Highway 99 becomes King George Highway and later Kingsway into Vancouver.

For the present we are located on King George Highway in a new motel about 1 1-2 miles from International Boundary, 2 miles from White Rock and 28 miles from the city of Vancouver. We can go into New Westminster, a very busy city about 13 miles from the motel.

I hope I have given you some idea of what can be seen when driving to the West Coast. No doubt, I missed many things, but one pair of eyes can only see so much.

Found Moicis Well Run

Think I should mention how very comfortable were the motels we stayed in south of the border.

I shall try to describe just one we stayed in. In this case it was a two roomed suite with a closed in garage for the car. There were 17 suites and an office and they were built so there were two suites in each unit, each suite had a large corner window and there was room for two cars between the two suites, each garage having a separate door. We had a very nice bed sitting room, venetian blinds, nice drapes at the window, very lovely rug on a polished floor, centre light in ceiling then a tall floor lamp, two easy chairs and a bench, a writing desk and a radio. The bed folded up in the wall behind closed doors, and we had two clothes closets, toilet and shower, kitchen with cupboards, hot and cold water and electric stove with dishes and cutlery. A door led from suite into garage. Others had electric refrigerators, and less than some tourists camps in price.

Fishing from airplanes has been improved.

For several years scouting planes have been used by commercial fishermen to locate schools of mackerel, tuna and other contestants for the 1945 Friday night ball of fame. Now enterprising shippers have gone a step further and are using helicopters so that the pilot can hover over the water, barely skimming the surface to identify the fish and give their exact location.

Cooks ought to take a lesson at this point. They ought to learn the art of arranging their old ways and profiling by new improvements. Because the meal old dishes the same old way is easy but deadly. It's a fact that, although delicious and nourishing additional, they resist any small new relief or even garnish simply because it's different.

Fish is the same fish whether it is served in the conventional way or with a new exciting dish. Fresh grapefruit wedges are a novel, but appropriate garnish for bass because their fresh tartness goes so well with fatty fish.

With a very sharp knife cut off the skin of a medium size seedless grapefruit. Be sure to cut away every last speck of white membranes. Cut grapefruit segments by slicing between white membranes and between "petals" of fruit. Cut with a sawing motion. Set segments aside.

Dip 2 pounds of split striped bass or other sea fish steaks that have been removed in 2 cups of water to which 4 tablespoons salt have been added. Let fish remain in salt water 5 minutes—no longer. Remove fish from water. Place on a greased baking pan, skin side down. Brush with melted butter. Sprinkle with paprika. Place pat in oven and bake fish 10 minutes. Remove from oven, carefully arrange grapefruit segments across fish. Return to oven and bake 10 minutes more. Remove from oven, carefully anchovy butter and it becomes

Here's to the New Year

Welcome the New Year 1950, it brings promise of good things to the Canadian homemaker with the abundance and variety of foods with which to feed her family

Just now there is a generous supply of several staple foods. We might start off with a food alphabet and say A is for apples —always appreciated.

B if for beans—so good for the budget.

C if for corn—as it comes from the can.

Put these three foods on the market list and enjoy a great many delicious and economical dishes on the daily menus.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, have been testing many recipes, old and new. They suggest these as well worth trying.

Apple Cake

2 small apples
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
or 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons sifted pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
egg
1-2 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening
Pare, halve and core apples. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Beat egg and milk in a mixing bowl. Add dry ingredients all at once, stirring only enough to moisten. Do not over-stir. Add melted shortening. Place batter in six large greased muffin tins. Place an apple-half in each muffin tin, core side up, on top of batter. Fill centre of each apple with brown sugar, sprinkle lightly with mixed spices and dot with butter. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F., until apples are tender and batter cooked, about 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with cream or pudding sauce. Yield: six servings.

Beef and Cheese Casserole

1 cup dried white (navy) beans
2 cups boiling water
1-2 teaspoon salt
1 small carrot
1 small onion

Soak beans, in water 16 sover, overnight. Drain, add 2 cups of water and 1-2 teaspoon salt and simmer covered, until tender about 1 1-2 to 2 hours. Drain. Cut carrot, onion, green pepper and celery into small pieces. Make a sauce of the fat, flour, milk, salt, pepper and cheese. Arrange vegetables and beans in alternate layers in a greased baking dish. Cover with the cheese sauce and top with a mixture of the top grated cheese and 1-2 cup fine dry bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven 350oF., until vegetables are tender, about 30 minutes. Leftover cooked vegetables may be used and the cooking time reduced to 15 to 20 minutes. Yield: six servings.

Scalloped Corn and Tomatoes

1 can whole canned cream style corn
1 1-2 cups canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1-2 cup bread crumbs

Both Princesses Had Fiery Tempers Says Governess

New York Dec. 30 —(CP)— Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret were good friends as children although both had fiery tempers which sometimes led to fights, says Marion Crawford, Royal governess for nearly 17 years, in an article to be published today.

Miss Crawford, appearing in the Ladies' Home Journal, tells how little girls grew up from childhood until Princess Elizabeth was 22 and her youngest sister 16.

Both the Princesses were extremely fond of horses, the former governess relates. Princess Elizabeth was extremely neat, and the two children of the two. They had considerable acting talent, particularly Margaret.

They were good friends, though both had fiery tempers and from time to time would set about each other in the good old-fashioned fashion, no quarter given," Miss Crawford writes.

"Schoolroom brawls often started when they had to wear hats. They hated hats. This put them in a bad humour, and they would snap each other's elastic spitefully to register displeasure, to shrill cries of 'you brute! You beast!'

Baroda Princess Breaks Obstacles fo Win Maharajah

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Headley, Surrey, England (CP) Debutantes, horse-lover, scientific woman, spendthrift, semi-invalid —and most beautiful woman in Europe.

All those descriptions have been applied to Princess Sita, second wife of the fabulously wealthy Maharajah Gackwar of Baroda, and centre of a web of legend that has spread across two continents.

The princess' dark, limpid-eyed beauty is as Oriental as the stories of Scheherezade. But — under harem-covers of India's past —she has an iron-hand will that nearly always gets her own way. She needed it in her determination to marry her Maharajah.

The Gackwar is one three daughters of the Maharajah of Pritthpur. Sita was married in the conventional way to a Bombay youth agreeable to her parents. In Bombay she met the potentate of Baroda. "They fell in love. There were two great obstacles —she has an iron-hard will that will not recognize divorce. The Gackwar already was married and had just issued to his 2,000,000 subjects a decree forbidding a man to have more than one wife.

Sita found a way out. To the horror of her father, a high-caste Brahmin, she became the Maharajah, got a divorce and re-married in Hindu faith. Thus she was able to marry the Gackwar, who maintained, in the face of an outcry from his subjects — that he was above the laws he made for them.

International Set

day, shuttling between their suite in the fashionable King George Hotel and their palatial 37-acre country home here, the couple are among leaders of international society.

The 30-year-old, black-haired princess considers herself "just a housewife." Jewels at her breast and wrists, she enjoys cooking although she never attempts anything but complex curry dishes. To keep her slender figure she refuses starchy English foods — except roast lamb with mint sauce.

She rises late and takes her five-year-old son, Prince Sayajirao, for a walk or drive. Then, in Paris, she generally spends part of the day visiting fashion shows — although she never buys anything but flimsy underand-gold saris.

If in England, she visits her husband's stables or goes to the races with him. The Gackwar, a polo figure seemingly ill-at-ease in his western-cut clothes, has a string of horses. The best is ever had won over the 1947 Ascot Leger. It was called Sayajirao.

The princess has no time for bridge, but loves the excitement of high-stakes poker, chemin de fer or baccarat. She also likes to watch racehorses heavily.

An old back injury prevents her from riding as often as she'd like but she's a tireless dancer and almost perfect.

Changes in Baroda — the state she is part of India — have stimulated the Gackwar's yearly income to a comparatively scanty £182,000. But the princess, on great occasions, still wears the

Leslie Bell Singers Will Appear Here

Organized 11 years ago as an alumni group, the Leslie Bell Bell Singers, who will be heard in a concert of choral music in Bridge Street United Church January 13th., have earned an international reputation as a "cappella" group. Critics in Canada and the United States hail them as "unrivalled" for their superb ensemble singing, beautiful colour, versatile repertoire and for the freshness and charm of the choir itself. Indeed, the perfect co-ordination of the Leslie Bell Singers and the spontaneous pleasure each member derives from participation in the singing group add to their overwhelming popularity.

A major contributing factor, of course, to the Bell Singers' reputation are the unique musical arrangements by Dr. Bell, who possesses a rare combination of musicianship, diplomacy and discrimination. Recognized throughout the world as a leading arranger of choral music, Leslie Bell arranges all types of music for "a capella" or unaccompanied singing.

Wes N.T. Acclaim

Last summer the Leslie Bell Singers sent New York into a frenzy of superlatives when they headlined the "Canada Night" entertainment, presented in Madison Square Gardens for the International Lions Convention. While there the Singers were advised on both NBC and ABC. Indications of the overwhelming success of their New York debut are the offers Dr. Bell is now receiving for personal appearances in Radio City Music Hall and an extensive concert tour of the U.S.

Last year, the Leslie Bell Singers enhanced their fame by receiving top billing on a Canadian radio program which is now heard for a second season every Sunday evening at 8:30 p.m. EST over the Dominion Network.

Praised by listeners and critics alike as "truly outstanding intellectual musical entertainment" the Bell Singers are starred on the program by Lucio Agostini, choirmaster, and baritone Charles Jordan.

Women's Activities
WOMEN OF THE MOOSE

The Women of the Moose, Chapter 485, held their annual Christmas party in Laidlaw's Town Room on Dec. 22, at which the members enjoyed a lurkey supper and all the trimmings.

The tables were beautifully decorated with miniature Christmas trees, dainties centre pieces and favors.

After the supper, the members exchanged gifts. It being Coworker Peggy Minty's birthday party, she also received many lovely presents.

The co-workers presented their Senior Regent, Kathleen Donovan, with a lovely gift which was greatly appreciated, coming as a complete and pleasant surprise.

The Senior Regent in turn presented the workers of the bingo with a gift each for their faithful work during the year. Also to the workers of the Christmas party which were a huge success. This brought the party to a end with the members singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

All then adjourned to the Saco Club rooms for their second regular meeting of the month. The meeting opened with Senior Regent Kathleen Donovan in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Recorder Mary Peoples.

Christmas greetings were read from the Women of the Moose, Woodberry, Ill., also from Grace Kenna, Dept. Grand Regent, Lexington.

After the business was over much discussion took place on the plans for the coming conference to be held here in January. Several eastern chapters are expected to attend.

The meeting came to a close with many good wishes for a big success in the coming year. The next meeting will be held the second Thursday in January.

Belgian Widow Walked 70 Days On Pilgrimage

Vatican City, Dec. 30. (AP)— A Belgian widow who emulated the Holy Year pilgrims of long ago received today in special audience by Pope Pius.

The pilgrim is 69-year-old Paulina Athanme of Brussels, widow of a Belgian colonel who died in the First World War.

She arrived in Rome several days ago, pushing a baby carriage in front of her and with a knapsack on her shoulders. The elderly, stout woman—who had made the same trip during the 1925 Jubilee—walked 70 days, resting wherever she happened to be at nightfall.

Today, the Pope, after quesitoning her about her long trip, gave his special blessing to her and to all the people in Belgium, France and Italy who gave her lodging and food and who otherwise aided her pilgrimage.

TRICKS are being done with fur coats by one house in Paris. A coat of Russian Persian Lamb has loose side panels which, when detached, leave a skirt section of black wool, paneled back and front with fur. The skirt, in turn, turns off, to leave a waist-length, bloused fur jacket.

Giving a Party on New Year's

Hospitality is in the air on New Year's Day! Bidding farewell to the old year . . . greeting the new year with a hightearted salute. It's Open House or an Egnog Party or a Tea . . . very often the big party of the year. A traditional reunion of the family's relatives and friends, perhaps neighbors, too. A grand way to pay off an accumulation of social indebtedness . . . to give a bright start to the new year.

Going to give an Egnog Party? If so, you'll probably have an ancestral recipe for the eggnog and the making of this delicious feature-drink usually will be a rite with you. Or you'll be able to find friends who will be eager to share with you their tried-and-true recipes . . . or you can probably buy your supply of eggnog from your grocer, and serve it as is or added-to.

With an eggnog, don't serve only sweet accessories. Besten biscuits are the traditional and most successful food-companions. Their blandness is perfect with the sweetness of the eggnog. You can make the besten biscuits, or buy them ready-made. For the traditional extra-added-attraction, split the biscuit, butter them thinly, oven-heat, and insert slivers of Virginia ham. Or top them with Smithfield ham shavings, and dot with sharp jelly. Or, instead of besten biscuits, inexpert slivers of ham in tiny hot (or thoroughly heated) tea-biscuits. Or small, slim bread-and-butter sandwiches. Or heated crackers, delicately not sweet. Salted nuts are another appropriate accessory.

Was it the hostess who serves an alternative the eggnog. Most hostesses set a "dessert-feature" table. The eggnog service . . . punch bowl and small glasses on a large tray . . . at one end of the buffet table, the tea or coffee service at the opposite end. For the tea or coffee enthusiasts, sandwiches of various kinds of simple fillings, or make the rolled kind. Wrap the rolled sandwiches tightly in waxed paper, store in the refrigerator, and slice as needed. Then slices of holiday fruit cake or other cake, —"plain or fancy"—or festive Christmas cookies.

Or if an eggnog party is not your dish, invite your friends to "Open House" or to "tea" or just to a "New Year's Day Party". Have the tea service at one end of the table, the coffee service at the opposite end . . . or for either, substitute punch, "white ribbon" or otherwise, or a hot mulled punch, spiced cider the base. Or if it's a cold day follow the sweet idea of a hearty large covered tureen of steaming hot borsch soup (gala color, this) or chicken or clam broth, to be served in bouillon cups or tea cups. With salted crackers, heated. (Or serve the soup or broth in cups in the kitchen and pass them on a tray.)

Setting your New Year's table gives you a grand chance to express yourself glamorously with imagination, ingenuity. Cover your table with your prettiest cloth, or use a simple cloth and sprinkle it here and there with glistening bits of Christmas sparkle—red, green, gold. Let your centerpiece sing with color . . . a huge dish of radiant, varicolored Christmas tree ornaments. Or a cluster of gay balloons. Or a silver or crystal or white-glass bowl filled with holly and mistletoe or poinsettia or rosy-cheeked lady apples and grapes, white and blue and purple. Or make a star-design by filling a big colored bowl with little ping-pong balls with radiating ribbons of vari-colored paper, starting from under the bowl and covering the tip of the table. Arrange your serving-dishes on the table with a sure sense of orderly balance and convenience-to-the-guests. You'll save space and add to convenience if you move your table, either in the dining-room or living-room, against a wall. And, if possible, have your table candlelighted, to glow added hospitable welcome to your guests.

If you're giving a large party, ask several relatives or friends to be deputy-hostesses, to preside prettily and usefully over the services at the ends of the buffet tables, perhaps too to greet the arriving guests at the entrance-door. But don't plan to have any one co-hostess or any pair presside all during the party . . . "change the guard" at the end of every hour, so that the co-hostesses will have a chance to be guests too.

Except for Mink Prices are Right for New Fur Coat

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

New York (AP) — If the lady isn't mink-mad—and she probably is—this is a wonderful time to buy her that fur coat.

Prices generally are way down. Retailers are marking down prices and advertising bargains in an effort to move merchandise. Except for the mink, broadtail and chinchilla specialists, the fur business quite frankly is in a bad slump.

The pinch is being felt where it hurts the most—in the popular and moderate price brackets, $150 to $1,000. Except for a fraction of the business—8 per cent at the outside, the fur business calls or starves on its traffic in mink, Persian lamb (the two best sellers), beaver, squirrel, raccoon, leopard and all the wide variety of cheaper furs like muskrats, rabbit and others.

While retailers are loathe to call further attention to the situation by discussing it, manufacturing furriers, dealers and processors here in the nation's fur processing centre feel that the explanation for bad business is quite simple.

"The cost of living is high, loses money isn't loose any more, and people just don't have enough money left over from food and rent to spend on a fur coat," said Morris Gordon, a manufacturer whose opinion was echoed by a number of others.

The manufacturers think that potential customers are keeping their purses locked to see if the prices don't drop further, hoping that if they wait long enough maybe they can pick up a mink coat for the price they intended to pay for a sheared beaver.

"Mink, mink," exclaimed one manufacturer, "all the women want is mink."

Mink Price High.

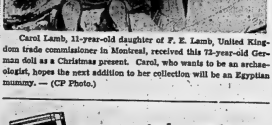
As a matter of fact, prices of mink skins broke along with the other soft natural furs months ago. They slipped off some 25 per cent. But with increasing demand for the skins, the price has bounced back and even passed the old high. The first fall auction prices were 25 per cent higher than ever.

"Mink raisers figured they couldn't make any money on their pelts so they cut down on the numbers they were raising," a manufacturer explained. "So now they are in scarce supply and most of us could use twice the number we are getting."

A Fifth Avenue retailer, tearing his hair over the lack of customers in his budget and middle-priced salons, said people who are in the broadtail, chinchilla and mink bracketa are paying higher prices for luxury furs without quibbling.

"I swear it's easier to sell a $10,000 coat today than to get a $500 muskrat out of stock," he moaned.

Many factors enter into the making of a fur coat besides the cost of skins. Labor costs are high, because it is still a handcraft and tightly unionized. Processing the furs and dyeing them costs money. Retail mark-ups run about the same as on other clothing.



The Associated Fur Manufacturers, representing firms which make about 85 per cent of the nation's new fur coats, says that compared to last year's retail prices, muskrat has dropped 30 per cent, beaver 25 per cent, and sheared raccoon between 15 and 20. Other furs have been going down considerably in price.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When you're hurt once, go slow the next time

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18, and a senior in High School. I was engaged to a very fine fellow for five months, when all of a sudden he said that he wasn't the right one for me. This came as quite a shock, because he is all I ever wanted.

After we broke up, he went back to his old girl that he had been going with a year before. She was his cause of his breaking our engagement. He has been going with her now for three months, and just lately he has been coming to see me again, claiming he is sorry for what he did and saying he now realizes I am, the only one he wants.

I am a little afraid to take him back, though, because I don't believe I can trust him as much as I did. On the other hand, I haven't been able to find anyone to take his place, and I am constantly think about him.

Recently I saw one of his buddies, who told me that the game we were with thinks I am being very cruel—that the whole thing, and I am beginning to think so myself. Why am I right. May be I am being too harsh with him, but I don't want the same thing to happen again. I am mixed up I don't know what to do.

C. A. L.

Dear C. A. L.:

It is very natural that you should feel a little afraid to trust this boy again, since he has already let you down once. If you not want to give him the opportunity to do so right.

If you feel you want to go out with him once more, I suggest you be very cautious for awhile, not letting yourself become too easily "steady" and particularly, no engagement. Tell him frankly that you would rather go slow this time, so that you can both be sure how you feel before you take such steps seriously. Don't let yourself be rushed into anything, either by him or by your own feelings; otherwise you may be in for another disappointment.

Why Waste Time on Someone Who Doesn't Care?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This is the second letter I've written you. The boy who is interested in this girl I believe I ever wrote you because you answered mine.

I am 18, and very much in love with this boy who is 19. He is very conceited and thinks he is too good for me. I have loved him for two years, but I can't get to first with him. For awhile I thought I had a pretty good chance, but things didn't turn out right.

I am a girl who wouldn't take advantage of his money and would help him in any way I could. I have been a good girl all my life but it seems that's not enough.

V. U. G.

Dear V. U. G.:

I am sorry that you did not receive any answer to your previous letter, but I cannot possibly reply to all the letters that you write me. So I try to select those that seem most interesting and that might answer more than one girl at a time who had similar problems.

In your case, I can't see that you have very much difficult problem, as I would think it very silly of a girl to concern herself for two years with a boy who obviously isn't interested in her. The fact that you see so many good qualities in yourself doesn't mean that he does, too, or that even if he did it would necessarily make him want to pay attention to you.

I suggest that you add a little good old-fashioned sense to your list of virtues and be as indifferent to this boy as he is to you.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMIESON

Time out at the Beauty Shop

Millions of girls and women are toiling in the busy marts, bringing home the bacon and spinach. The career girl is a modern institution. Grannie will tell you that in her young days woman's chief occupation was that of catching a husband, if you lost out you were just an auntie, looking after nephews and nieces and the old folks. Surely this world is a better place for a woman to live in than in the old days.

The business girl must not only be efficient, but she must look it. Appearance is important. It is to the credit of the boss to employ smartly dressed employees around the place. It isn't easy for the wage earner to find time for task that are necessary to keep her in perfect form. But she must. Half a day at the beauty parlor works will soothe her nerves and her soul, help her to retain what good-looks she was born with, ward off the evidence of birthdays.

If the balance in the check-book permits, she should not skimp on professional attentions. A Saturday afternoon at a beauty spot is the ideal antidote for clanging telephone to summon you from your desk, the job, free of the family; be-can escape with her soul. Maybe she can find out what I'm talking about.

What a nice comfortable feeling comes over her, like a freshening breeze, when she sinks into a chair for a facial, when the operator goes over her countenance with gentle, creamy fingers. Perhaps she indulges in a body massage, a luxury or luxuries. Tired muscles start to purr. Blood streams travel. Nerves go to sleep. She has dragged into the shop on weary feet; when she leaves she feels like singing and dancing.

Smartly dressed employees are a credit to the boss.

She enjoys the shampoo, especially if she has been thinking her head in soap suds at home. She may not herself in her trouble, but how much nicer it is to have somebody else do it. She may even have a hair-fair-do. That is pleasantly exciting. While she's there she has a manicure. It's as good as a vacation.

Or covers a certain amount of homework must be done, even if one has professional attention at the beauty parlor. That half hour or grooming before going to bed is priceless, pays grand dividends. The soapy bath with a brush over precious time in the morning. Before leaping into the tub she must cream her face. Oil and cream combine to refresh and vitalize the skin.

Then comes the hair brushing, the slipping on of the wave cap to help the undulations to endure. The creaming and frictioning of the fingernails. Nice and tidy! She's attended to her good-looks chores, feels right serious.

Care of the complexion

Though old-timers—the ancients and honorables among us —may glorify the good old days of the past, they are willing to add knowledge that wrinkles now come later in life, that the complexion of fine texture is more common than when they were young ladies. Well, why shouldn't it be? We have learned a lot about the effect of nutrition on the skin, the need of the balanced diet. Women have taken up outdoor sports. Physical education is a popular and an interesting subject. The daily bath has become an institution. All these matters contribute toward health, and health is the foundation upon which the temple of beauty is built.

Cosmetics have played an important part. We know that beauty magic doesn't come in jars and bottles, that an old face cannot be rejuvenated over night. But we realize that soothing creams keep the skin soft, smooth, free of certain blemishes. Nature provides sebaceous glands for the purpose of lubricating the epidermal covering, but these glands often go on strike—due usually to lack of fat in the diet—so oily lotions are necessary. Then there should be applied freely, especially in the winter season, cold winds bring a chapped condition. No matter whether the skin is dry or oily, powder, rouge and lipstick should be removed with a thin cream. Every night the face should have a thorough renovating with a good cleanser and plain soap. A few quick swishes with a washcloth are not enough.

There should be a lather with warm water, and every bit of lather must be removed. Occasional rinsing following the warm one will bring a pleasing reaction of the blood stream. Then a good face for the functioning of the glands, and the elimination of waste matter. It will contract enlarged pores if they are present. Drying should be gentle, a soft towel being used in preference to a coarse one.

As an insurance against wrinkles— and premature ones may come early if the skin is thin and delicate—a nourishing cream should be used after the bathing routine. Such creams are different from ordinary cold creams, in that they are in accordance to the manipulations of the fingertips. Nearly all contain lanoline, which is another protection.

It is not necessary to use soap in the morning. By that time the flesh has lapped up the cream. A tepid or cold rinse will suffices. If the skin is inclined to be dry, rub in an oily cosmetic, remove with a tissue and you are ready to play with the make-up kit.

Make-up should never be put on an unclean face or skin-base. That practice breeds blackheads.

Fashion Flashes

STAY-AT-HOMES have a choice of handsome fireside fashions, including the ever-popular mixmates. For a smart combination of color and fabric, one designer shows a bronze-green neckline blouse of shocking pink jersey with an almost circular skirt of gray felt. Black velvet sash with long ends in back.

HANDSOME fur-trimmed cloth suits appear on all but the very cold days. Rust wool is used for a beauty, the long jacket belted —with wide shawl collar softly scalloped—to the waist. Huge slanting patches of ocelot are centered with slit pockets, and there is a separate weskit of the fur. Skirt is wrapped in back, and buttons and belt are beige.

HIGH STYLING marks many of the new nylon blouses, with the shirtwaist type remaining first favorite for general wear. A dressy beauty is of white nylon sheer, beautifully pin-tucked with inset bands of Venise-type nylon lace. And back again comes the high- self-tie neckline.

A SPLENDID BUY for practically year-round wear is the finely tailored, well-detailed suit of rayon fabric in a wool weave. Good for the Philippines soon. The dancer, who went to New York to study voice and recently made her operatic debut in the role of Carmen, did not deny that Quirino had telephoned her several times from Manila. Central Press Canadian.

A LUXURY touch comes along in the guise of an ermine muff. Fashioned in color, the petals realistically curved.

NOT FIANCEE,

JUST FRIENDS

Filipino opera singer Conchita Gaston, 22, denies reports that she may marry President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines soon.

Washington Spotlight:

Staggering Slate of Business Facing the U.S. Congress

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 30 — (CP)— A staggering slate of legislative business faces the United States Congress when it resumes its session labors Jan. 3.

In the 10-month session which ended in October, the 81st Congress only scratched the surface of the program announced by President Truman after his stunning 1948 election victory. A weighty raft of bills was left untouched.

These include new labor legislation repealing the widely-criticized Taft-Hartley Act, civil rights bills against lynching, racial discrimination and poll taxes, compulsory national health insurance, a new farm program, universal military training, the long-awaited St. Lawrence seaway project and legislation aimed to offset growing deficit-spending by the federal government.

The government's legislative plans for this new session will be detailed by Truman in his State-of-the-Union message to Congress. This message, to be delivered within the first few days of the session, is comparable to the Speech from the Throne read to Canada's parliament by the Governor-General at the opening of each session.

Two Serious Factors

Observers here said the democratic administration will face two serious factors which threaten the fulfillment of its program.

The first is an informal but nonetheless effective coalition of Conservative Democrats in the House and Senate with the Republicans. This denies the administration's leaders majority control in Congress.

The second lies in the fact that the government is going deeper and deeper into the red each day by millions of dollars, a development which raises barriers against any costly new programs.

With a congressional election coming up in November, 1950, it is considered unlikely that there will be another lengthy session. The members soon will feel the urge, observers say, to return home to open the campaign.

In the November vote, the full House membership of 435 goes before the electorate. Only one-third of the 96 Senators will come up for re-election. Senators are elected for a six-year term; representatives have two years in office.

Cancellations Questioned by N.S. Minister

Halifax, Dec. 30 —(CP)—Criticisms began to come thick and fast today at Canadian National Railway's announcement of curtailed passenger train service because of a coal shortage.

Mines Minister Patterson of Nova Scotia said that as far as he could learn there was no shortage of coal in the maritimes and he understood that no coal operator in Nova Scotia had been asked to supply additional coal to the C.N.R.

He found it "remarkably strange" that the Canadian Pacific Railway was not compelled to curtail services while a government-owned railway had found it necessary to institute a 25-per-cent system-wide cut on steam-operated passenger trains.

Train cancellations in the Maritimes, effective Jan. 2, were announced yesterday at Moncton, N.B. They include two of the six C.N.R. trains operating between Halifax and Montreal, the two-way overnight service between Halifax and Saint John, N.B., and various other services.

The railway said a "serious depletion" of coal reserves had been caused by work stoppages and shortened working hours in United States collieries.

Cancellation of the Ocean Limited—the all-Canadian train operating daily both ways between Halifax and Montreal—will leave two trains on the run each way. Two day trains will remain on the Halifax-Saint John run.

Filling 'is Hill

At Sydney, N.S., Harold Gordon, coal operations chief for Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, said he could not understand why there should be a shortage of coal in the east, Mr. Gordon said DOSCO, biggest producer in Canada, has a yearly contract with the C.N.R., which it is filling to the hilt.

The service along Nova Scotia's south shore between Halifax and Yarmouth is to be reduced from weekly instead of daily except Sunday as at present.

Mayors of south shore towns were quick to protest.

Mayor V. Saunders of Bridgewater said: "Service is poor as it is and any curtailment of the service would be a bitter blow to the south shore."

Mayor D. F. Adams of Lunenburg: "We certainly need our daily mail and would not like any interference with it. I don't understand that there should be a shortage of coal with our big mine operators in this province."

Mayor G. A. Dauphinee of Shelburne: "I practically impossible to believe that they would do such a thing to us. . . We seem to be going backards 20 years instead of ahead."

Services in Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, where the C.N.R. operates exclusively, are not affected.

BONARLAW

School Meeting For Section Five Selects Trustees

Bonarlaw — The annual school meeting of trustees and ratepayers of School Section No. 5 was held in the school house on Wednesday evening of this week with a good attendance. W. J. Barlow presided. The minutes of the last annual meeting and two subsequent meetings of the school board were read by the secretary, W. E. Neal and approved. The auditors report was presented by Gordon T. Webb and approved.

J. F. Baker, delegate to the O.E.A. Convention at Toronto, April 18th to 20th gave his report which contained many suggestions. Citizenship training, said Mr. Baker, was stressed by a number of speakers. The boys and girls are not only preparing to live in a democracy, they are living in it now.

A splendid report of school inspector J. W. McGuire was read by the secretary and also a satisfactory report from the Medical Health Officer, Dr. E. A. Carleton. J. F. Baker was appointed auditor for 1950, the board of trustees to appoint another auditor at their next meeting when they will also name a delegate to the O.E.A. convention next spring.

The trustee board is now S. G. Rombough for one year, W. E. Neal for two years, and Ira Edwards for three years. Two monies adopted were to have a new flagpole erected at once for the school to assume the cost of scribblers and pencils for the use of the pupils.

Several tenders were received for wood and it was decided to leave the tenders open for a few days, the trustees to decide from whom the six cords of hardwood required will be purchased.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Baker for his report of the Toronto convention and to the board of trustees for their splendid work during 1949.

Leaders of Labor Congresses Express Fear of Unemployment Or Possible Industrial Strife

BY JOHN LeBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 30—(CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell made an "optimistic" forecast for 1950 in his year-end message released Thursday, but leaders of Canada's two major labor Congresses expressed fear of unemployment or possible industrial strife.

Both the union leaders—President Percy R. Bengough of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and President A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor — also united in demands for higher old-age pensions and elimination of the means test for pensioners.

Mr. Bengough, leader of 460,000 union workers, said "The fear of unemployment is still a disturbing factor in some sections of Canada." He called, too, for full social security on a government-labor-industry - financing plan.

Mr. Mosher, whose Congress has 350,000 members, said that "industrial disturbances" in Canada might result from opposition of certain employers to granting improvements in wages and working conditions.

The Labor Minister said Canadians could look back on 1949 with thankful hearts.

"For the third successive year," he said, "employment topped the 5,000,000 mark and, at the peak period in September, stood at 5,250,00. Expert demands and the domestic needs sustained the general level of production.

He continued:

"One of the most important factors supporting a high level of production and employment was the absence of serious industrial strikes. Both labor and management are to be congratulated for settling their problems in the common interest.

Canadians Indebted

"In addition, Canadians in all walks of life are indebted to responsible trade unionism for the step taken to deal with communistic elements."

Mr. Bengough said Canada's workers were willing to do their part in co-operating fully with government and industry in making 1950 a productive year. But organized labor could not do its full share in establishing industrial peace unless gainful employment was available for all able and willing to work.

On social security, he said the T. L. C. wants protection for all against sickness and old age. This was a practical objective that could be financed by government, industry and labor and, in effect, "would eliminate most of the disturbing fears that are a constant source of worry to most of our people."

There was need of increasing the "meagre allowance" of the aged, he said, in the light of present commodity costs and increased rents. Pensioners should not have to qualify through the means test by proving themselves "paupers in a land of plenty."

Indicates Callous Attitude

President Mosher said the means test and the government's "failure to increase old-age pensions indicate a callous attitude" towards many Canadians who, through a lifetime of work, have contributed to building up Canada.

He said many other matters needed redress on the part of the government. It had failed to protect the people's interests in relaxing rent controls and devaluing the dollar. It had failed to take adequate steps to remedy the housing situation.

While 1949 saw improvement in relations between organized labor and employers, there had been "very definite opposition" by certain groups of employers to granting wage increases and better working conditions.

"This may be the same industrial disturbances in Canada as were experienced in the United States," Mr. Mosher said.

Movie Boxoffice Ruler is Hope, Deposes Crosby

Hollywood, Dec. 30 (AP)—Bing's no longer king.

Crosby, after an unprecedented five years as movie boxoffice ruler, has been deposed by his best apparel, his companion over many a gag-strewn movie road and golf course—Bob Hope.

Hope went to the top of the heap in the 1949 motion picture herald survey of theatre owners in the United States. Crosby wound up second.

Two other gents just as close—Abbott and Costello—finished third in the B-O derby.

Biggest leap was credited to John Wayne, who came from no where to fourth place on the strength of several strong roles Behind him, in order, the top-10 included: 5-Gary Cooper, 6-Cary Grant, 7-Betty Grable, 8-Esther Williams, 9-Humphrey Bogart, and 10-Clark Gable.

The famed Grable legs skidded from the second rung in 1948's poll.

In the strictly western field, Roy Rogers was the top "draw" with Gene Autry, Gabby Hayes, Tim Holt and William Elliott rounding out the first five.

British exhibitors rated Anna Neagle their top attraction, with Michael Wilding second ahead of Hope, Danny Kaye and Crosby in the international balloting.

IT'S ALL IN THE WAY YOU SAY IT *

Balance of Money Is Being Sent To England

Toronto, Dec. 30 — (CP) — Money contributed by Hamilton district residents to a fund for Mrs. Jean Irving, British war bride incurably ill with cancer, is being sent to England today.

Mrs. Irving was given some money when she and her three children returned to England in November. But a recent dispatch described her as concerned because the rest of the fund, more than $2,500, had not reached her. The Salvation Army had undertaken to transmit the money through its international office in London.

Col. William Dray, the Salvation Army's chief secretary for Canada, said today in Toronto that the sending of the money has been delayed while a Hamilton committee made a final decision on how the fund is to be disbursed in England. The decision was received here this morning.

Part of the money is to be given to Mrs. Irving immediately in a lump sum. The remainder, at the discretion of Salvation Army officers in Mrs. Irving's English hometown of East Grinstead, is to be handed out in small amounts weekly to cover the needs of the family.

Col. Dray said that the money should reach England within two or three days.

Bevin Will Not Visit India

London, Dec. 30 —(Reuters)— Prophets of a February general election in Britain professed today to see fresh support for their tip in an announcement that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin will not visit India and Pakistan after the Commonwealth Foreign Ministers' Conference in Ceylon.

But political quarters generally do not think that Bevin's decision has any specific bearing upon election timing. They consider that if any immediate dissolution of parliament were planned, he would not have gone to the conference, which will keep him away for about a month.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

Unproductive Religion

By ROY L. SMITH

The little band of Christians who were left behind, following the ascension of Jesus, were a badly confused lot. The world had tumbled in on them; the future into which they gazed was utterly without precedents.

The story of their bewilderment, as it is told in the Book of Acts, represents the understanding of the case as it was held by the Christian Church half a century after the occurrences of the events described, for all are agreed that it was at least that long before Luke wrote his history.

Bewildered Disciples

There is something so very human and real about the story of the disciples gazing up into heaven. The Lord they had followed through three eventful years had disappeared. The life He had lived had been packed with surprises. It was easy for them to believe that perhaps His ascent was only one more in the long series of amazing appearances through which they had seen Him pass.

The Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 1, 1950 is "The Ascension of Disciples," Acts 1; I Peter 3:8-18.

We must remember that they had followed Him into the city of Jerusalem when He made His triumphal entry. They had watched Him meet the hierarchy of the Temple on its own ground. They had watched Him die probably from a safe distance. They had met Him and talked with Him following His resurrection. They had lived through so much they had lost their power to be astonished.

At The Opening of the Road

The last thing Jesus had done before going away was to leave the whole Christian movement in the hands of this little company of plain men. They were to overturn the world.

They had no organization, no funds, no prestige, no popularity, no plan. They had not had time in which to think out a way through on the problems with which they had to deal immediately. They did not know, as we know, what to do next. And now He was gone! They were on their own, but they were not even sure of that. Any of them would have found it easy to believe that another stunning surprise might be awaiting them with the next surprise.

He had left them with a task and a promise. The task was their total working capital.

Waiting for Miracles

It is always so easy to sit idly down and wait for miracles. Religious people — those who believe that God has taken a hand in human affairs — are peculiarly susceptible to the temptation.

It is natural that we should want to walk into the fact of a situation and understand how to solve it on the basis of reason, industry and positive effort.

Good religion was never intended to serve as a substitute for personal effort in behalf of progress. The man who prays with intelligence never expects his prayers to take the place of his own investment of energy and brain power.

Religion it is good religion, will produce positive action. It will strengthen the will, enlighten the mind, create a new respect for facts, nerve us to free reality, and drive us to seek solutions that are logical and effective.

Down to Earth Religion

Jesus of Nazareth lived all His life on the assumption that it was His responsibility to make a difference in this world.

He did it by opening up channels of power by which plain people could work transformations in themselves and in the world in the midst of which they lived.

The charge is made against Christianity that it spends all its efforts talking about "pie in the sky bye and bye." History records, however, that since the Gospel of Jesus has been preached whole areas of life have been transformed. The status of women has improved, the rights of little children have been recognized, the poor have risen to a new dignity and standing, to say nothing of the new recognition of the rights of the common man.

The temptation to look up into heaven in search of a miracle is still with us. But one devout man bringing about a transformation in his own neighborhood is worth more than a hundred people staring off into the skies and waiting for miracles.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

System is as system does. A bridge bidding system is best when it is the most consistently accurate. When you say that system is Horse Sense, brother, you "ain't just beatin' your gums."

My three-night lecture series in each city covers all departments of the game. By then my class is ready for any deal that comes out. I know of no other system that can do this so understandingly.

As an climax, some person in the audience is asked to shuffle and deal. These cards are called off to the entire audience. This is used as a drill for what they have learned.

Those present thus get a good workout in detail. Each step is tied to a rule before the next bid or lead or play. It is the kind of practice that helps iron out the doubts.

Recently was dealt at random what you see here:

NORTH
♠K Q 8 3
♥J 5
♦A 4 2
♣Q 7 5 4 2

WEST
♠9 7 6 2
♥10 9 7
♦9 8 7 6
♣K J 9 3

EAST
♠None
♥A Q 8 3
♦K Q 10 5 3
♣A 10 8 6

SOUTH
♠A J 10 5 4
♥K 6 4 3
♦10 8 4 2
♣None

Go through the various points in slow motion. Pick each bid and give the reason. Select each lead and discard, explaining what it means. Choose the play of play and state how it should operate.

Count the tricks in each hand as you pass or bid it. Determine when each pair discovers they have reached their limit. Show how they must tell each other when not to stop and where to end.

South is the dealer. Does he pass or open the bidding? If he passes will the bidding be opened, if so, by whom? If north opens, what will east say the first time? If the bidding is opened by some other player? If so, what will he say? How far will the bidding go before it ends? Who will become the declarer?

After the opening lead, what does declarer do? When does he pull trump, if at all? How many tricks does he take? Does he know in advance that he will take so many? Give yourself the workout.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 30 —(AP)— Betsy Drake, bright new bride of Cary Grant, says their family will "just happen."

In her first interview since the Christmas day wedding, the play young actress said she was baffled by the unusual question of newlyweds: "Do not plan to have a family?"

"How do you plan those things?" she replied. "After all, that matter is actually in other hands.

"Besides I think it is bad to plan to have a large family or to plan not to have one. I think those things should just happen. I think it would be very depressing for one to know that he was a planned baby. That's so cold and unromantic."

Mrs. Grant is back at work in "Pretty Baby" after a one-day vacation. But we're having a honeymoon anyway," she smiled. She indicated a full-fledged honeymoon appears doubtful for many months, since Grant starts a picture Jan. 3.

Likes Simplicity

The bride admitted that the wedding party's dash to Arizona was hectic, but said she preferred that to a big splashy affair.

"I think weddings have gotten out of hand," she said. "They should be simple affairs, not productions. It's the same with funerals. I hope to be buried in some small graveyard with tumbledown headstones, not in a big 'memorial park.' I hope Cary feels the same way."

She said there is no chance of co-starring with her new husband in a future film.

"I feel the same about that as I did a week ago," she added. "I've got to prove my ability to myself. I think it would be fun to work together, but it would place a hardship on Cary because of my lack of experience.

Box Office Pull

Motion Picture Herald, a movie trade paper, has polled U.S. film exhibitors for their list of the top moneymaking stars of 1948. The selections, in order: Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Abbott and Costello, Cary Cooper, Cary Grant, Betty Grable, Esther Williams, Humphrey Bogart, Clark Gable.

Remarkable features of the poll: Hope unseated pal Crosby, who held the No. 1 spot for five years. Abbott and Costello continue in popularity with theatre owners, if not with the highbrow critics. Ingrid Bergman Rita Hayworth, Greer Garson and Bette Davis were missing from the top 25.

HISS DEFENCE ENDS

New York, Dec. 30 — (AP) — Alger Hiss, former State Department official, Thursday ended his defence testimony at his second perjury trial, still insisting he was no pre-war communist spy tool. The second trial — the first ended in a jury disagreement— was adjourned till next Tuesday.

AT THE BELLE — Friendly enemies! Much to the disgust of Ann Sheridan, Cary Grant displays a tell-tale pair of nylons in this scene from I Was a Male War Bride," the hilarious 20th. Century-Fox comedy now at the Belle Theatre. It was the beginning of a frenzied romance that took the pair across occupied Germany and back, where the picture was filmed by Director Howard Hawks.

National League President Wants Game Pushed Ahead Not Criticized as Some do

By VIC MORRIS, JR.
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somebody within the boundaries of the National Hockey League has come in for a sound combing from the league president, but just who the culprit is remains a mystery.

Speculation was rife among the sport writer as many of them tried to figure out who was the subject of President Clarence Campbell's latest outburst.

The president started the guessing game recently when he said "hockey men should quit knocking their own game." He declined to reveal the sources the statement was aimed at, but said "if the cap fits anyone in the league—National or any other—they're welcome to wear it."

The president's feeling toward some of the foes within hockey's ranks were brought to light when he said he was "perturbed at the way some people actively engaged in making their living out of the game have grown thoughtless and careless in their duties of selling and promoting hockey.

"We never heard of a good merchant advising his customer that his wares were below par, but that's what some of our club leaders seem intent on doing," commented Mr. Campbell.

Directed at Boucher

Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll suggested that it was possible that the fiery statement was directed at Frank Boucher, New York Rangers manager, who resigned from the league rules committee in protest at what he had to say publicly about rule changes he favored.

But others have been mentioned along with Boucher.

Jack Adams and Tommy Ivan of Detroit Red Wings inspired blasts at the referees in a series that ran in a Detroit newspaper and Frank Selke of Montreal Canadiens took a few shots at the referees in the same vein.

Even Conny Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs might be the subject of the presidential scolding. Smythe benched Turk Broda for being overweight and threatened to do likewise with four more players for the same reason.

It all appears to be a family row with the fans looking in.

Meanwhile, everything is quiet around the six-team circuit. The league is idle until Saturday when Chicago Black Hawks visit Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings journey to Toronto and New York play New Year's Eve hosts to Boston Bruins.

Jethroe, Easter To Make Debuts In Major Leagues

(By The Canadian Press)

Two most controversial figures due to make their debuts as full-fledged big league ball players next spring are Luke Easter of Cleveland Indians and Sam Jethroe of Boston Braves.

As it happens, both are Negroes Easter at approximately 250 pounds, will be one of the biggest men in the majors, Jethroe probably the fastest. Their respective careers will be watched avidly from the opening day of spring training.

Easter was with the Indians as a part time man late last season, after having left San Diego club to undergo a knee operation. He will start the '50 campaign at first base, declared the Cleveland management, thereby planning such a valuable player as Mickey Vernon.

Jethroe, who burned up the International League with his base running for Montreal Royals last season, was purchased by the Braves from Brooklyn for a whale of a sum estimated up to $200,000. Presumably, he will be in the round out a fine new Boston outfield.

E. P. Taylor, Toronto industrialist, in a statement Thursday he will race a division of his stable on Canadian tracks next year. In recent years his horses have campaigned almost exclusively in the United States.

Mr. Taylor said his decision to race in Canada was due to a desire to make a contribution to sport here and in some measure to replace the loss resulting from curtailment of racing activities of the Parkwood stables owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa.

At Hastings, Sussex, England, Larry Evans, 17-year-old American "wonder boy" of chess, won his first round match Thursday when the 25th International Hastings Chess Congress got under way. Evans' opponent, Sussex champion W. A. Winter resigned after 35 moves in four hours of play.

Detroit Red Wings, leaders in the National Hockey League race Thursday lost the services of defenceman Jim Orlando at least two games. A medical examination showed Fogolin suffered a slight separation of the left shoulder during Wednesday night's 2-3 tie with Boston Bruins at Detroit.

Fighting as if the Memorial Cup were at stake, Montreal's junior Canadiens Thursday night swarmed to their third straight victory in exhibition hockey in Western Canada by taking a 5-2 victory from the Winnipeg Monarchs at Winnipeg. The contest was marked by 24 penalties, and saw the ejection of Montreal's Dickie Moore and Ernie Reche with match misconducts.

On the eve of sailing for Europe Edmonton Mercurys played an exhibition Thursday night with Saint John (N.B.) Beavers of the Maritime Senior Hockey League and emerged on the short end of a 7-4 score. Mervs, who won the Western Canada Intermediate hockey title last season, left Edmonton by plane Wednesday night and arrived in New Brunswick Thursday afternoon.

The challenge of Miss Canada IV for a Harmsworth Trophy race in 1950 has been accepted "unofficially" by the Regatta Committee of the Yachtsmen's Association of America, Harold Wilson, owner-driver of the 100-foot craft said at Ingersoll Thursday night.

Eighteen-year-old Vic Hunt, whose right hand w as amputated after a recent accident in a printing plant where he worked after school, is going to go on playing hockey just the same. He returns to the nets for Weston Junior Dukes, a minor affiliate of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. An amputation ballad to Vic's stick fits into his "hook." The photo, taken at a practice, shows the young goalie getting encouragement from Pete Topping, left, manager of the Weston team, and coach Buck Houle. — (CP Photo.)

Charlie Keller Has Been Signed With Detroit

Detroit, Dec. 30— (AP)—Outfielder Charlie (King Kong) Keller, who had become almost a fixture in the New York Yankees' baseball picture, was signed Thursday by Detroit Tigers.

Keller's entire pre baseball career up to now has been spent either in a uniform of the Yankees or their Newark, N. J., farm club of the International League.

"King Kong's" slugging ability won him recognition as one of the top distance hitters in the American League, but he has been below par physically since he underwent a back operation in 1947.

He played in only 81 games for the Yankees last season. This winter he was offered a job managing one of the Yankee farm clubs.

The 33-year-old Keller turned that offer down, saying he still felt he had "quite a bit of good baseball left."

Tampa, Fla.—Tommy Gomez, 182, Tampa, knocked out Big Bill Petersen, 210, Chicago (1).

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Dec. 30 (AP) — Part of the Vadal Peterson report on sports in Brazil:

One reason for the popularity of basketball, says the Utah coach, is that Brazil's one big sport up to a few years ago was soccer football . . . "Now," he says, "they have found a game they can play with their hands instead of their feet . . . they're eager to learn about American sports, but they're very suspicious of Yankees . . . they get their basketball rules and interpretations from Europe, with the result they're using the old 1925-40 rules . . . I think we owe it to them and to the game to send more teams down there. They wanted us to return next year but we can't . . . Some other team could arrange to do it earlier in the fall — the end of their winter — and the boys wouldn't lose so much time trying to make up their classes." . . . P. S.: St. Francis of Brooklyn already is negotiating for just such a tour next year.

The Rooter Part of Valor

The soccer players, Peterson explains, have learned how to take care of violent fan reactions . . . "We were at one game in Rio," says Vadal, "when a player had the ball out of bounds . . . I could just see some object aiming in the sun as it flew out of the stands and knocked him cold . . . His 10 teammates gathered round and we could see them pointing up into the stands . . . At they stood there trying to locate the thrower, the crowd began opening up like a big V . . . Then the players started up into the stands and the V widened out as they climbed . . . They went up to where the guy was and really took him apart; then they dragged him down on the field and beat him some more . . . Finally about 50 police came out and salvaged the remains and the players went on with the game . . . They're building a new football stadium there which will seat more than 100,000 . . . and they're going to have a 25-foot moat filled with water between the field and the stands."

Domestic Data

George Stanich, U. C. L. A. basketballer, has been offered $30,000 by the Yankees but wants at least 10 G's more. He's a pitcher with a terrific fast ball—and his coach, Johnny Wooden, also predicts Stanich will be the world's first seven — foot high jumper . . . Vincent Richards, the former tennis star who is Bobby Locke's American contact man, figures Bobby is trying to make up his mind whether to return here next year or play in Europe, Africa and Australia . . . Bobby will be approved if he apologizes to the PGA.

Sunday Sports Question Issue in Toronto Elections

Toronto, Dec. 30 — (CP) — Three men are out to win the mayors and in Toronto's Jan. 2 civic elections — Mayor Hiram McCallum; Ross Dowson, a Trotskyite steelworker, and Charles H. Mahoney, business executive and former policeman.

Eighty-one candidates have been nominated to fill 41 civic offices but the liveliest issue in the voting is a plebiscite on Sunday sports.

Voters will answer yes or no to the question: "Are you in favor of the City of Toronto seeking legislation to make amateur, professional and other commercial sports legal on Sunday."

Mr. Dowson, National Secretary of the Trotskyite Revolutionary Workers Party is running his third campaign for the mayor's office. Mr. McCallum defeated him last year by 73,236 votes. In 1948 Mr. Dowson was defeated by Robert H. Saunders, now chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, by 107,504.

Mr. Mahoney is making his first bid for public office.

Mayor McCallum, owner of a printing plant, is contesting his second mayoralty election. He took office in February, 1948, when Mr. Saunders resigned to become hydro chairman.

Smith Again Candidate

Stewart Smith, who placed third last year in the race for the Toronto Board of Control, is again a candidate for the same office. Norman Freed is seeking re-election as alderman in ward four as is Charles Sims in ward five. Dewar Ferguson, Canadian Seamen's Union organizer who placed third last year in the five-man race for the two aldermanic seats in ward six, is running again.

The mayor's office carries a salary of $11,500 a year — $10,000 as mayor and $500 each as a member of the Board of Police Commissioners, the Harbour Board, and the Board of Directors of the Consumers' Gas Company. Members of the Board of Control get $6,000 a year and aldermen $100 a month.

The issue of Sunday sports has stirred a lively campaign complete with posters, automobile window stickers, radio debates and door-to-door canvasses. All Toronto newspapers are editorially opposed to the city's seeking the necessary legislation. Opponents of Sunday sport predict that if the legislation is obtained it will lead to a wide-open Sunday with drinking, dancing and moving pictures. Those in favor of the issue say lack of recreational facilities on Sunday leads to increased crime and juvenile delinquency.

WEEKLY EARNINGS UP

Ottawa, Dec. 30 (CP) — The average weekly earnings of employees of 2,908 Toronto firms rose $44.73 at the beginning of October, an increase of 83 cents an hour for the month before.

The bureau of statistics, in a report on the employment situation in Canada released this week, said average weekly salaries and wages in other industrial areas across Canada at Oct. 1, figures for the same date a were:

Kitchener - Waterloo 41.64 (40.80); Fort William-Port Arthur 46.96 (45.66).

Ramblers Move Into Contention For First Place

New Haven Ramblers moved back into contention for first place in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League Thursday night as they whipped the pace-setting Providence Reds 6-1.

The Rams now trail Providence by three points and are only one point behind Buffalo Bisons and Springfield Indians, who are deadlocked for the runners-up position.

The only other action Thursday night, Indianapolis Capitals pulled into a second place tie with St. Louis Flyers in the western section by edging Pittsburgh Hornets 5-4.

Jean Paul Lamirande paced New Haven to their triumph with two goals while Jackie Gordon, Nick Mickoski, Jean Paul Denis and Norm Perreault fire one apiece. Art Michaluk sank the loss Providence tally.

At Indianapolis, the Caps spotted Pittsburgh a 4-1 first period lead and then pushed in four unanswered tallies in the final two frames.

Lyall Wiseman, Doug McKay, Don Morrison, Ron Morrison and Nels Podolsky were the Indians spells marksmen. Eddy Kobussen led the visitors with two goals and Andy Barbe and Peanuts O'Flaherty each fired one.

There are no games scheduled tonight and league action resumes Saturday with Buffalo at Hershey, Providence at Springfield, Cincinnati at Cleveland, New Haven at Pittsburgh and St. Louis playing host to the capitals.

Rockets Assist Owner, Waitress In Serving Food

O.H.A. hockey players turned waiters at Peterborough on Thursday morning and still maintained their amateur status since they took no wages for their work. It was a hungry bunch of Belleville Rockets that stopped off at the Chicken Palace in the early hours of the morning. It was a flustered restaurant keeper who greeted them at the door. The proprietor was genial enough but there was a tone of disappointment in his voice, when he announced that his cook had unvoluntarily left early and he had not the facilities to handle such a starving crowd. His wife and a waitress would be swamped with orders if they were to feed some 23 odd mouths.

Good sports like the Belleville boys are they volunteered to wait on the tables and help generally while the proprietor's wife and her aid whipped up the food.

For amateurs the service was good and everybody got all they wanted. The proprietor and staff were happy, the boys were happy and moved off for home with another experience under their belts as well as the big morning meal.

PS: Promoters looking for ice cream eating contestants kindly contact Bill Cook of the Belleville Rockets. More than one of his boys cleaned up porridge bowls full of the frozen food in the amazement of the Chicken Palace proprietor who suggested turning over the whole container to them to save time and dish washing trouble...

Train Wreck One of Worst In Alberta History

Calgary, Dec. 30 — (CP) — A total of 31 persons, 18 in fair or serious condition, are in hospital today with injuries suffered Thursday in one of Alberta's worst train wrecks. One man was killed.

The train disaster occurred in 20-below-zero weather at the Southesk railway siding, 95 miles southeast of here.

An eastbound Canadian Pacific Railway baggage-express train from Vancouver — behind schedule because of British Columbia storms — sideswiped a westbound passenger train from Toronto. The passenger train carried a number of C. P. R. linemen en route to Vancouver to help repair B. C.'s disrupted communication system.

Reid B. Heafern, 23, of Moose Jaw, Sask., one of the linemen, died of injuries before reaching hospital.

'Horrible' Says Witness

Capt. J. W. Turner, dental officer of the H. M. C. S. Ontario at Esquimalt, B. C., who was returning from Christmas leave at his home in Niagara Falls, said the "scene at the wreck was horrible."

"The engine of the other train sliced in half the day coach ahead of my sleeper and persons were lying everywhere. Men and women with an arm or leg torn off were lying in the wreckage, exposed to the raw winds . . ."

Passengers praised the assistance Capt. Turner gave to the injured before other medical aid arrived from Brooks and Bassano, 16 miles distant.

Dr. William Prowse of Brooks, who had to walk the last few miles when automobiles and tow trucks became stuck in the snow-plugged road, said "The accident cases were so badly stunned and so seriously injured, they were too shocked to get hysterical."

Rescue Work

"We put tourniquets on limbs that would have to be amputated . . . most of the fractures were multiple."

Orville Sefton of Edmonton described the collision as "all hell breaking loose." He suffered only ankle injuries.

"It was horrible. I still don't know how I got out of it alive," he said. "The screams, the hissing steam and the huge blue sparks from the grinding steel made it seem like hell."

CHANGE - OVER BLAMED

Kingston, Dec. 30 — (CP) — The hydro power change — over from 25 to 60-cycle was blamed Thursday for an increase in the cost of power to the local Hydro Commission and a likely boost in the future to Kingston consumers. Said Commissioner T. A. Andrew: "The commission and others in good financial standing are going to have to pay for that conversion."

Landlord Jailed, Fined $500 for Evicting Family

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)— Wilfred Ounjay Thursday was sentenced to four months and fined $500 for illegally dispossessing a family of eight from a one-room apartment here Dec. 16.

Ounjay was accused of accompanying four other men on the eviction of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Baker and their six children ranging in age from nine months to nine years.

Defence Counsel J. L. Addison argued that Ounjay had taken the eviction action after the Board of Health suggested the Bakers be moved.

Magistrate T. S. Elmore said: "I don't believe for a moment that the Bakers were behind in their rent, nor do I believe for a moment that the co-leaseholders thought they were behind."

Evidence was that the landlord —Ounjay—and the four other men smashed the door of the room occupied by the Baker family and forced the Bakers to the street.

Sir T. Beecham Sails for Home

New York, Dec. 30 (CP) — Sir Thomas Beecham, famed British symphony orchestra conductor, sailed for home Thursday aboard the Queen Elizabeth after a Canadian and United States tour. He left with this observation about Toronto:

"It is a sad city. The people look depressed and distressed. They go about with their heads hanging down."

Informed that two reporters interviewing him were Torontonians, Sir Thomas tempered his statement with this remark:

"I am bound to say that it was a very bad day when Lady Beecham and I were there. It was raining like hell."

Sir Thomas, who also visited Montreal during the Canadian leg of his tour, said he would be back next year with his orchestra of 100.

Asked if there were any reasons why British orchestras had not come for the last 40 years, Sir Thomas quipped: "probably because they weren't asked. Every so Englishman doesn't go where he's not asked, despite his imperialistic history."

Asked if he thinks the Labor Government might learn something from his "private enterprise," Sir Thomas replied:

"My dear Sir, I've been trying to teach my government the way to behave for the last 35 years. They seem to be above receiving any suggestions."

Public Inquiry Into Operations Is Continuing

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP) — The stories of the brilliant bakery driver and the boozing brakeman were told Thursday before Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, continuing his public inquiry into operations of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act.

Russell Harvey, organizer for various A.F.L. unions here, argued labor's claim for 100-per-cent compensation for an injured workman. He told of a bakery driver who had exceptional skill and ran up high commissioners through a high sales personality. One day his horse bolted, the driver was critically injured, and ended up by running an elevator.

"He lost all chance of reaching a managerial job which he certainly would have had," said Harvey. "These things justify full compensation."

On the other hand J. P. Pratt, counsel for several railway companies argued management already has heavy compensation burdens. He cited the case of a brakeman who ate and drank in a nearby hotel during a six-hour lay-over by his train. Later he was found injured on the tracks, having been run over by a train. Mr. Pratt said the railway board found it was a case of wilful serious misconduct, but because death resulted the company paid a claim of $12,121 to the widow.

Mr. Pratt said that the increase from 66 2-3 per cent to 75 per cent which comes into effect Jan. 1 would cost the Canadian Pacific Railways another $200,000 a year.

Revise Fees For Four-Cylinder Cars, Motorcycles

Toronto, Dec. 29 —(CP)—Hon. George H. Doucett, Minister of Highways, today announced a revision in the fees for the registration of four-cylinder passenger cars and motorcycles.

The new schedule provides for a continuation of the $3 fee for the registration of four-cylinder cars if manufactured in or before 1933. The fees for the registration of those manufactured subsequent to 1933 will, for 1950, be $5.

The fee for the registration of a motorcycle has also been changed from $1 to $3.

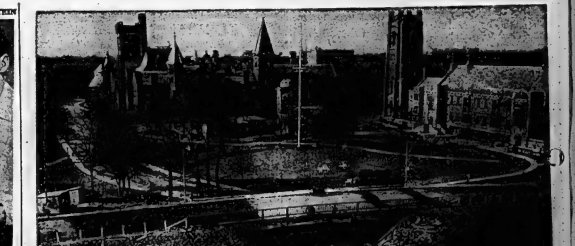
Commenting on these changes in the schedule of fees, the minister pointed out that the fees for the registration of motor vehicles in Ontario are still lower than those prevailing in the other provinces of Canada. In the other provinces the fees for the registration of four-cylinder cars range from $9 to $30 and the fees for the registration of motorcycles range from $3 to $6.

CLAIMS THEORY BEFORE EINSTEIN

Amateur Scientist William G. Graves (above), 32, Marlboro, Mass., told newsmen that he had developed the same gravitational theory as Dr. Albert Einstein. Graves said that one of the important points of the theory is that gravity is a substance and that in the "mass," it travels faster than light. — Central Press Canadian.

Britain Decides To Recognize Indo-China

London, Dec. 30 — (AP) — Britain has decided to recognize the French-sponsored government of Indo-China headed by Bao Dai, erstwhile Emperor of Annam.



Reliable informants reported the decision today. Bao Dai probably will be told of it, they said, during the first or second week in January — about when Britain is expected to recognize the Chinese Communist government.

British recognition of Indo-China is to be de facto, which means an acceptance of the fact that the Bao Dai regime exists. It could lead to full-scale diplomatic — de jure — recognition, which acknowledges a government's legal right to exist.

Half-Naked Boy Found in Field

Three Rivers, Que., Dec. 30 — (CP) — The story of a wandering, half-naked boy found in a vacant lot on the outskirts of the nearby village of Charette was revealed Thursday night by Henri Jean of St. Leon.

Mr. Jean said that he found the 15-year-old boy starving in a field near a railway line last Tuesday. He said the boy, who identified himself as Maurice Boucher, told him that his mother had died some time ago and that his father had taken him "on the road." The boy said he didn't want to be a hobo and ran away from his father and hid in the field for four days before he was discovered by Mr. Jean.

New Year's gift to Toronto motorists will be the reopening of the roadway on the west side of Queen's Park — if it doesn't snow, that is. The subway and bypass into the University of Toronto campus has been sufficiently completed to allow paving of the Queen's Park thoroughfare. Finishing touches, however, depend on continued good weather.

VIGOROUS POLICY

The Nationalists, led by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, now have their headquarters on the island of Formosa, not fa from Okinawa.

The new policy recommendations, said to have been prepared for Truman by the state and defence departments, is reported to call for an American Military mission to Formosa — a proposal which was offered separately in an interview by Senator William Knowland (Rep. Calif.)

Knowland said such a mission, even though "relatively small," would be invaluable in directing American military aid and in helping to train Chiang's troops.

Besides the provision for a mission to Formosa, the policy blueprint was said to lay down lines of action around the whole communist perimeter in Asia for Truman's consideration.

The navy, in announcing the sea-power shift, referred specifically to its job as a prop for American foreign policy.

NRC EXPERIMENTS

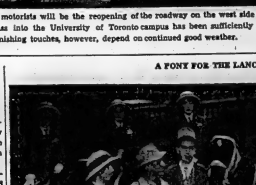
The report also said that:

1. Problems associated with movements of logs in rivers, including diversion of logs past power plants and formation of log jams, are being studied.



2. Aids to navigation, both for marine use and in the air, are being provided. Promising results have been obtained from experiments designed to meet problems of marine craft not equipped with radar under conditions where navigational lights are obscured by heavy weather.

3. Work is being carried out with a view to increasing efficiency of foghorns.

4. Radar systems are being tested as part of a program to accelerate the accurate survey of Canada.

The council now is offering postdoctorate Fellowships on an annual basis. More than 50 highly-skilled scientists from 37 universities, including 11 Canadian institutions and 32 located in 10 other countries, have been brought into the laboratories to work under direction of the council's leading scientists.

Three Students Feared Drowned In Hemlock Lake

Hemlock, N. Y., Dec. 30 (AP) — A rowboat outing on Hemlock Lake by five seminary students, one a Canadian, ended in tragedy Thursday when the boat was upset by a sudden wind. Three of the students are feared drowned; another died of exposure after reaching shore.

The three missing students are Lawrence Malloy, 26, Penetanguishene, Ont.; John Griffin, 22, Paterson, N. J.; and George Leo Burns, 19, Auburn, N.Y.

The other two managed to reach shore by clinging to the overturned boat and paddling it with their hands. Philip Safina, 19, New York, was in a "fair" condition in hospital Thursday night.

The party was the first in a larger group to attempt the two-mile crossing. It was about half way across when the boat upset.

Six Months to Live

By Nancy Garden

Quickly dismounting Harry Harper threw the reins to one of his men. "I guess you can go home again. Miss Hampton's all right." Then turning to Jim he said "what's the idea, is one Lorze better than two?"

"Oh Harry" said Jim reproachfully. "You should thank Mr. Riddell for finding me and bringing me back."

"So this is the little sister you wanted me to meet, old man." Jim's eyes were twinkling as he grasped Harry's out-stretched hand. "Maybe you'll be sorry you invited me here for now I've found her again I don't intend to lose sight of her,. Come," he said "about you want to congratulate your future son-in-law!"

For a moment Harry looked bewildered. "I thought you told me"—he began as he turned to Ann who quickly declared, "she's the only man I want," and slipped her hand in Jim's.

"Well, I'm mighty sorry I'm going to lose my little sister just as I was beginning to get accustomed with her," declared Harry Harper a few days later. "However as I don't intend to lose you Marjory, Jim's a fine fellow. Only remember you must come back again and see me."

As Ann packed her things a little pocket calendar fell to the floor. Picking it up she turned its pages. Tomorrow was her wedding day. The next was marked in red. She smiled. "Tomorrow was to be the end—just six months to live—and now it's the beginning."

You're Mrs. Kelly, aren't you?" said a vivacious young woman as she approached the former Mary Lambert who like Ann was pacing the pier.

"Yes and you're Mrs. Madison" returned Mary, "I thought you must be the girl Ann talked about. I'm so glad you spoke to me, for I'm always afraid to make the first move myself."

"Oh, you sweet thing," exclaimed Lucy impulsively, "isn't it just wonderful about dear old Ann! I'm so glad, for it was a shame to think that she had such a drab life when she's really one of the dearest girls I know."

"Well, I think you've quite got a lot to you for I guess she acted on your advice," returned Mary Kelly.

"Oh, I didn't really do anything I guess right down in her heart she's wanted to do this for ages but you know how it is. You get into a rut and you're afraid to get out. It may be bad enough in the rut, but you know what's what there, Once outside it you don't know what glorious adventures you may have."

"That's so," replied Mary.

"It was awfully sad about your poor aunt," remarked the talkative Lucy.

"Yes, I felt quite badly about that, but then on the other hand I had never set eyes on her, and I never from the letters Aunt Margaret wrote to her lawyer, Ann more than filled the bill of a devoted niece."

"She's left all her money to you hasn't she?"

"Yes," answered Mary, "I'm glad however, that I won't have the bother of looking after it. Everything is splendidly arranged Terry says. You know her lawyer said before she went abroad she had a strangely feeling she would never come back again for the light of it had so long laughed lightheartedly.

The boat was drawing near and animated excited travellers were signalling frantically to those on land, Eagerly Lucy and Mary scanned the closely serried ranks of passengers. "I don't see them."

Meanwhile Ann who was not expecting anyone to meet them, had gone below to take leave of some of the acquaintances they had made aboard ship. As they returned to the deck Ann noticed Ann had left her coat, she gazed for a moment through the "hole in the skyline. "Somehow I can't really believe I'm seeing New York once more. You know Jim, you've no idea how strange it seems to be alive and well when you'd been told you would certainly never live more than six months."

"Well honey," said Jim as he took Ann in his arms, "that just proves that you don't have to believe all you've told. I don't think you ever had T.B., I believe you were just all tired out slaving in your office. But it's all over now."

"I'm so glad," whispered Ann. "Why I believe we're in," she exclaimed as she slipped from Jim's arms and glanced once again out of the porthole. "We are, and I see Mary—the real Mary Lambert. I wonder if she's come to meet us. Oh, do hurry, Jim, I'm so proud of my husband." She smiled at him archly. "I want her to meet you."

Through the corridor they hurried in spite of the fact that Jim assured her it would take another half hour or so before everything would be in readiness for them to disembark. Suddenly Ann heard a gay "hu-hu." "That sounds like Mary Lambert" she exclaimed as she laid her hand on Jim's arm. "Oh, there she is. They're both there," and she waved her hand gaily while Jim doffed his hat.

A few minutes later they were all chatting together, "Oh Ann, how wonderful you look!" exclaimed Mary. "I'm so glad to see you again."

"It is nice to be back, and you know I'm perfectly well now," Ann whispered to Mary.

"Now we want you to come out with us," said Mary, "Terry will meet us at the station."

"Oh, but we'd never dream of doing that," said Jim Riddell. "It's awfully good of you to give us such a welcome. We'll run out some day later on and see you."

"Indeed you won't. You'll come with us now—at least Ann will. You know we've been counting on this for a long time," answered Mary spiritedly.

"Well, if you insist on taking Ann—"

"And Ann insists on going," said the bride while her eyes sought Jim's.

"Then I surrender."

Winter Slowly Releases Grip on BC Roads, Passes

Vancouver, Dec. 30 (CP) — Trainloads of weary storm refugees poured into Vancouver overnight as king winter slowly released his icy grip on British Columbia's roads and passes.

Nine Canadian Pacific Railway trains carrying more than 1,000 passengers rolled over newly-cleared railbeds after 48 hours of isolation, caused by the worst December blizzard in 20 years.

Clear and cold weather today diminished fears of flash floods for hundreds more who were still marooned on the province's highways, mainly around Princeton, 163 miles east of here.

Mountain-trained snowplows driven by a "silver thaw" Thursday, were being restored by line crews who have been working steadily in shifts since the storm began.

Release came none too soon for some trains as food supplies were getting low. A sudden flood brought on by thawing snow might have imperilled passengers.

Art Russell of Victoria, one of those marooned said: "everybody was well but fed up. Two and three days in one seat not going anywhere is awfully tiresome."

To keep their spirits up, one 80-year-old Christmas traveller played his mandolin.

Lady Party

Harry Philbrook of Vancouver "led sing songs, played solos and was the life of the party," said Mrs. Lily McKella, also of Vancouver. "We were very grateful to him."

For motorists along the newly opened Hope-Princeton highway the prospect of release was not too bright. The road is not expected to be clear for another 48 hours. The Coquihalla Canyon highway is still blocked.

The hydro power picture brightened with electricity restored in the Chilliwack-Hope-Agassiz area but pulles report service is intermittent.

Floods in the Fraser Valley, brought on by the sudden thaw Thursday, have imperiled the Sumas Valley district, 40 miles east of here.

PICTON

School Repair Job at Wellington Costing $3,500 Let Without Tender

Picton, Dec. 30 — A $3,500 school repair job was let, without tender, to the 16-year-old son of a member of Wellington Consolidated School Board, it was claimed here Wednesday when members of the board were charged with breach of the School Act regulations.

Leslie MacDonald, son of board member Donald MacDonald, was given the contract because, as the 1948 board chairman, Douglas Taylor, said: "We felt it better to let the contract to some one in the town." Another member, Wesley Cunningham, said the board felt it was too small a job to advertise for tenders.

J. M. Hartwick, ex-chairman of the board, and manager of a milk products plant, led the attack on the trustees. He charged that labor costs on the job amounted to more than $2,000. Mr. Hartwick failed to obtain answers to questions put to Mr. MacDonald Jr.

Hartwick told the board it was "their job to get the most value for their money if you have to go to Timbuctoo to get some one to do the job."

It was also claimed that the school board was making a gift of four new boxes to the drivers by increasing their salaries $1,000 a year, for five years, the period of the contract. At the end of five years the buses become the property of the drivers.

Board members denied any wrong doing, pointing out that the Ontario Department of Education had said the old buses were obsolete and the four drivers among the lowest paid in the province.

A capacity crowd of ratepayers attended the meeting and the atmosphere became heated at times. Mr. Hartwick clashed with individual board members as he sought to know why so "inexperienced boy of 18" had been engaged without calling for tenders.

The job undertaken by young MacDonald was repairs to the parapet around the roof of the school.

Situated in the Village of Wellington, the consolidated school serves a large area of Hillier and Hallowell Townships and has an enrollment of 300 pupils. Buses bring the rural pupils to school daily.

Montreal Woman Beaten in Sleep At Rooming House

Eight Persons in Home Not Able to Supply Clue

Toronto, Dec 31 (CP)— Mrs. Meteriously attacked by an unknown assailant in a downtown rooming house, a 58-year-old Montreal woman today was taken to hospital with scalp wounds and a fractured skull.

Police said little hope was held for recovery of Mrs. Dora Feeltner who was beaten in her sleep in a room she shared with Mrs Mary White.

Although the two women occupied the same bed, police said Mrs. White told them she heard no disturbance or outcry during the early-morning attack.

Investigators said eight other persons in the Jarvis Street house at the time were questioned but none was able to supply a clue to the motive for the beating or the woman's assailant.

Police said the assailant might have been a prowler who possibly climbed entrance to the house through a kitchen window.

They said fifteen stitches were needed to close a deep gash over the woman's right cheek. Another gash and a deep three-inch cut behind the right ear.

Police said her husband had been notified and now was en route to Toronto.

THREE ASBESTOS COMPANIES READY TO END DISPUTE

Suggested Settlement Was Devised by Premier Duplessis

Quebec, Dec. 31 (CP)— Three asbestos companies at "Ietford Mines, have accepted "in principle" a settlement proposal to end a labor dispute between the companies and some 2,000 employees.

Acceptance of the proposal was announced Friday night in a telegram to the Quebec Government by John F. L. Duquet, counsel for the Asbestos Corporation, Johnson Mines and Flintkote Mines.

The suggested settlement, devised by Premier Duplessis, calls for an automatic wage adjustment basing wage increases on cost-of-living hikes. The miners would receive 40 cents weekly for every one-point increase in living costs above 169.3 level.

Jean Marchand, general secretary of the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor, said reports of the companies' acceptance were "not clear and could lead to new disputes unless the companies' telegram is defined."

He did not elaborate. The C.C.C.L. is the parent-body of the Federation of Asbestos Workers.

The companies' telegram said acceptance was subject to "settlement of appropriate clauses in satisfactory form constituting our understanding that no adjustment in the cost-of-living bonus will be made on the basis of fractional fluctuations in the cost-of-living index less than a full point."

Accept Proposal

The companies also fixed as a condition the acceptance by the National Federation of Asbestos Workers of the majority decision of the arbitration board announced two weeks ago, except where the 1858 wage increase is concerned.

C.C.C.L. officials announced Thursday night that they accepted the proposal and would recommend it to the unions. They also accepted the majority report as it applies to 1949.

HUSBAND, WIFE CHARGED AFTER DRUNKEN BRAWL

Face Murder Charge After Fatal Stabbing

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — A noisy drinking party led to the fatal stabbing Friday night of Thomas Monteith, 50-year-old construction worker, police said today.

Held on a charge of murder are Mr. and Mrs. Keith Leland, tenants of a flat in Monteith's home on Hiver Street near Queen, not far from the Don River in East Toronto.

Police said that Monteith was drinking with Mrs. Leland's wife, Rose, and that the Lelands were drinking in their upstairs apartment.

Mrs. Leland had been away from home for several days, leaving her four-year-old son, Keith, with the father. Monteith went upstairs and started to admonish Mrs. Lelanc for leaving her son.

Police said that Leland got into the argument with Monteith, and that they moved into the bathroom. They charge that Mrs Leland entered the room and stabbed Monteith with a knife.

Tells His Wife

A trail of blood showed that Monteith made his way down the stairs and headed for the front door. He gasped his wife: "Rose, she stabbed me."

Police were called about 10 p.m. Monteith was taken to hospital but was dead on arrival.

All the rooms in the house were searched without success for the murder weapon. It is believed the wound was made with a knife with a 9½-inch blade.

Eight persons were held as material witnesses — John Gerula, a fellow who drinking with the Lelands, and Mrs. Monteith. Police said that Mrs. Monteith was so drunk that when she called police she was unable to give any information. Gerula slept in a roomer in the house had to complete the phone conversation.

Monteith is survived by his widow and a 13-year-old daughter, Rose.

Canada's Weather Made Snow And Heat Headlines in 1949

Bureau's Survey Shows

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — It was cold — then hot. It was wet — they dry. That's the way the weather was in Canada during 1949 — a series of extremes.

Andrew Thomson, controller of the meteorological division, Department of Transport, has been consulting his seven district public weather offices. Friday night he issued a report considered by of Canada's outstanding weather events this year.

The list includes last winter's cold wave in British Columbia; a year-round spell of mild weather in Eastern Canada; heavy January snowfalls in Southern Manitoba; a heat wave that registered 110 degrees at Rosetown Sask.; violent thunderstorms in the Ottawa area; 99-mile-an-hour winds in Cape Breton, N.S.; five weeks of Indian Summer out west; 10 inches of rain in one day near Vancouver and the recent green Christmas period throughout the East.

The weather gods aimed their first 1949 punch at Winnipeg where heavy snowfalls broke all January records back to 1916.

In Eastern Canada, the mildest winter ever was in full swing. Lumbermen were idle, waiting for snow in the woods. Youngsters built sand castles on Toronto's Sunnyside Beach. Navigation got under way along the St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes ahead of schedule.

This warm weather trend lasted throughout 1949 for most of Eastern Canada — particularly low zero.

In the Maritimes.

The Maritimes' only tough period centred round Cape Breton, N. S., when a March wind storm blew down a large radio tower, toppled billboards, telephone poles and smashed plateglass windows. Gusts of 99 miles an hour were recorded at Sydney airport.

The summer heat reached its peak in August when Rosetown, Sask., reported a temperature of 110 degrees. Winnipeg had 105. Then the heat wave edged eastward and mid-August provided the year's warmest days in Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal.

An extended spring and summer drought in Central Alberta was tempered in mid-July when a combined rain and hail storm struck Edmonton. Subways and basements were flooded with floating hailstones.

Ottawa and British Columbia took their share of rain, too; Ottawa had violent thunderstorms in late summer, and 10 inches of rain fell in one day at Capilano Creek, just north of Vancouver, in November.

As a parting twist, 1949 brought along green Christmas holidays from Windsor, Ont., to St. John's, Nfld. Out west, Alberta and British Columbia were plagued with heavy snowfalls and biting cold weather.

The lowest Canadian temperature for 1949 was recorded Friday at Snag Airport in the Yukon where the mercury fell to 65 below zero.

Free Nations of Western World Have Clearer Understanding Of Duty to Safeguard Peace

—ST. LAURENT

Ottawa, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent said today in a New Year message that there still is some reason for concern over the international situation.

A year ago I said that the international situation was very grave; that war was not inevitable, but we would be lacking in the spirit of the season if now we considered war an impossibility," Mr. St. Laurent said.

"The year that is just ending has brought with it new reasons for uneasiness. Human freedom has lost still more ground in countries which ignore the advantages of genuine democracy, in many, honest people continue to be persecuted for their religious beliefs or their political affiliations.

Clearer Understanding

"On the other hand, it is reassuring to know that the free nations of the Western world have a clearer understanding than ever of their joint responsibility to safeguard the peace of the world."

The message was released by the Ottawa office of the Prime Minister, who spent the holidays in Quebec.

Mr. St. Laurent said he was addressing his "best wishes to the people of Canada" and also to "all those who, throughout the world, are striving to realize the promise of peace announced to men of good will on the first Christmas morning."

He said 1949 marked the signing of the North Atlantic Pact. The year had witnessed great benefit from the European Recovery Program.

He added:

"The free democracies have had to face serious economic difficulties. We have had to learn something new before have they much determination to understand one another and help one another.

"From the international point of view, when the accounts for 1949 are balanced they have not been found to lack the cause of peace . . .

"From a national standpoint, 1949 has been a good year. We have had a general election, and general elections are the very foundation of our democratic system. We have added a new province to our territory through the union with Newfoundland;

"We have taken certain steps of which our children will be proud in the years to come. We have in Canada; we have gained a new appreciation of the wealth of our country; we have enjoyed a higher standard of living than anywhere else in the world outside the North American continent . . .

"To all men and women a happy new year in 1950!

"And may the second half of the twentieth century bring closer co-operation among the nations, all of whom many count on the goodwill of Canada."

CANADIAN CHEESE PRICES MAY DROP AS SUPPORT ENDS

New Anglo-Canadian Contract is Expected

Ottawa, Dec. 31 —(CP)— A slight drop in the price of Canadian cheese is forecast in 1950 as government price support for cheese came in an end.

Both government and industry officials said end of support action would lead to a drop in prices. But a new Anglo-Canadian cheese contract, expected to be completed the end of next month is expected to prevent a major decline.

Cheese has been supported at 30 cents a pound by the federal government since May 25, when the 1949 Anglo-Canadian contract was signed.

Since, that time, the government has stockpiled about 19,000, 000, pounds of Canadian cheddar and is aging it in hopes of selling it to the United States market.

One government official commenting on the end of support action, said there is "no need for panic" among producers. The Anglo-Canadian cheese contract, he felt, would act as a break on any drop in prices.

A spokesman for the National Dairy Council, however, said the cheese industry would have good cause to worry unless a reasonable British contract is completed soon.

Price May Be 36 Cents

The spokesman said price would be fell all through the dairy industry and likely would penetrate into butter and other milk products.

There is no official indication yet of what the new Anglo-Canadian contract price for cheese will be. It is believed the final price may be around 36 cents a pound, compared with the 30 cents paid in 1949.

A price of 36 cents a pound probably would cause the domestic price of Canadian cheese to drop about four cents a pound in the coming year.

Agriculture Cheese Producers already have asged Agriculture Minister Gardiner to continue supporting cheese at 30 cents if the British contract fails below that price.

He added:

"There is opposition, however, to the idea that the price support in several cabinet quarters. Some ministers believe that if farmers continue to receive certain prices at a high level, they may continue to lose world markets.

Family Forces Priest To Walk in Communist Funeral Procession

Naples, Italy, Dec. 31 (AP) — Communists broke into a parish house Friday and forced a Roman Catholic priest to march in a Communist funeral procession. The priest, Don Domenico Pietro, had refused to accompany the cortege of a worker because some of the marchers carried red flags.

MEATS TO BE CHEAPER

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Pork, including bacon, will be cheaper by about six cents a pound in Toronto retail stores Tuesday, meat trade officials said Friday.

Cheese is also expected to come down.

Eggs, after dropping four cents this week to 45 cents a dozen for grade A large, may also go down further, trade sources said.

4 Young Convicts Kill Trusty-Guard In Prison Break

Bloodhounds Brought in To Aid in the Manhunt

Tucker Prison Farm, Ark., Dec. 31 —(AP) — Four young convicts, armed with five pistols and a riot gun, broke out of prison here early today. A trusty-guard was killed in the escape.

Arkansas State Police headquarters at Little Rock broadcast an alarm for the fugitives. Bloodhounds were brought to the farm to aid the manhunt.

Leader of the escape was identified as James Perry Williams, 24, Pine Bluff, Ark., a trusty.

Warren Hosmer, assistant to prison superintendent W. V. Leslie, said Williams killed trusty Bill Johnson, 36, and then disarmed three other guards on duty in the prison yard.

Hosmer said Williams unlocked the door to the stockade and three other prisoners followed him in the escape.

The stockade is not surrounded by a wall or fence.

Hosmer reported another convict prevented what would have been a riot when he jumped from his cot and locked the stockade door.

Apparently none of the other 312 prisoners attempted to escape, he added.

Williams, who was serving a 21-year sentence for second degree murder, burglary and grand larceny, was shot four times at close range.

400-Mile Mercy Flight May End In Failure

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 31 —(CP)—Severely injured in a dynamite blast, Stewart (Red) Watson, 33-year-old mining prospector from Wawa, Ont., was brought to hospital Friday after a 400-mile mercy flight.

Doctors described Watson's condition as critical, while the story of his courageous 400-mile trek in sub-zero weather over snow-covered wilderness by two of his fellow-workers was told by Don Nichols, mercy plane pilot.

Nichols, flying the service pilot, said he found Watson bandaged from head to feet and bleeding Friday when he reached the Amikgold mining property camp on Achemeta Lake, 200 miles north of here.

The workers had been applied by the only four other workers in the camp following the blast of five sticks of dynamite last Monday, which set fire to their camp and they were shattered by the explosion.

61ST CONSECUTIVE TIME

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—Today will be the 61st consecutive time that 76-year-old Walter A. Lee has rung in the New Year from St. Andrew's Church in downtown Toronto. When he started as a lad of 15 the system chimed 150 steps to the bell tower. Today he plays a piano-like keyboard on the ground floor and machinery does the rest. He rings the Sunday bells 104 times a year.

Kiss the 40's Goodbye; World Toast in New Decade Tonight

(By The Canadian Press)

The tired old "forties," having run their stormy course of life in fire and death, bow out tonight, to return the world over to a new decade.

At midnight, men and women around the world clasp hands with a new year, and a new era. Man will celebrate in many ways.

They will kneel to pray in the churches of Rome. They will sing in the streets of Rio, clink wine glasses in the sidewalk cafes of Paris, and on West 42nd Street in New York. A Moscow orchestra will blare a symphony of welcome to the 1950s.

To some, it is a time for counting the hours of record joy that is done, for remembering the record and studying its lessons.

What was written in the history of the "forties?" Mostly, it was a story of war, of many dying, of a bomb, and of a new kind of destruction and conflict between two ideologies.

But it was also a story of more money for most, of more men coming home in ships to hunt their dreams, of a new international kind of charity, of bodies brought from across the seas, of new hope for the persecuted of Europe, of the birth of an uncertain thing called the United Nations and of a new development called television.

These were a few of the things borns of the "forties," and many of them must find their maturity and their success or failures in the "fifties."

The outlook was not all good,

Mankind's Age-Old Dream of Elixir For Longer Life Seen as Possibility

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Dec. 31 — (AP) — Man's oldest dream, an elixir for longer life, was given a boost at the closing sessions of the American Association for the advancement of science.

The new hope came from studies at four cities and at the University of Utah. Cortisone is a new hormone that stops the pain of rheumatoid arthritis, and helps half-a-dozen other diseases.

The new drug may be the key to keeping certain body tissues younger and lengthening the life span was made by Dr. Thomas F. Doudherty.

One of the few known facts about growing old is a change in the chemical of your body known as connective tissue. These tissues are fibres and sheaths. They are in the skin and in the girder of all the body's organs. They permeate the skin, vital organs, bones and form the covering of blood vessels.

Safe and Sane Driving Urged Over Holiday

An appeal for safe and sane driving over the New Year holiday was made today by Police Chief Walter Probert.

"Motorists in Belleville and district were on good behavior over the Christmas holiday last week and we trust the same conditions will exist this weekend," stated Chief Probert. "Just in case, however, we are going to have extra men on duty and their instructions will be to take the keys away from drivers who show the first indication of intoxication."

The chief pointed out that not one motorist had been charged with drunk driving as result the Christmas holiday weekend while there was only one accident resulting in personal injury.

"If motorists use care and common sense, accidents will also be kept to a minimum on New Year's."

Nurse Dorothy Vinson at Nenana, bundled up against the 40-below-zero cold, made the travelled 50 miles down the railroad in a flange-wheeled "gasoline" speeder.

Jack Swift, Nenana railroad agent, kept telegraphed communications open from Berg to Fairbanks while doctors Gene Cranford and William Smith passed along instructions to the nurse.

Albert College Students 'Adopt' Greek Boy

Students of Albert College have adopted Solirios Stathopoulos, a Greek boy, through the Foster Parents Plan for War Children, it was announced yesterday. The "adoption" is financial and carries with it no legal obligations. The "foster parents" merely promise the contribution of $15 monthly toward the child's support, for at least a year.

Albert College students have pledged themselves out of allowance money to pay for the education and keep of their adopted boy. They have already donated the sum of $100. Each week they will set aside part of their spending money for the purpose.

All Men Killed

Sotirios and his brother, Konstantinios, who is nine, are the children of Nicholas Hanakiolis and Vasiliki Hanakiotl. The father was a merchant and provided fairly comfortable living for his family until tragedy struck December 13th, 1943, when the Germans committed one of their massacres of the occupation years in Greece. As reprisal for courageous resistance, all the men 18 years and over, in the little village of Calavrita, were killed—some were burned in the village square, others were hanged from the trees in the central square and others were shot. The male population of the village was reduced by 70 percent. Solirios' father was among the victims. After this mass murder, Konstantinios and the little boy fled and burned it completely.

The Stathopoulos, his mother and brother were left destitute. They now live in one room—the floor of which is used the roof is covered with old tins. There is one bed, made with planks covered with a few torn blankets, a stool and a table. Their only income is a government pension for the father's death—$16.66 a month—totally inadequate to feed three people. The tragic and dire need of this family came to Plan attention, they were given emergency aid and the boys are now in Plan care. Packages of food and clothing are brought to Solirio's home each month and to supplement this, his mother is given a small cash grant monthly toward his home needs. He attends school and medical care is provided him.

Good Looking Lad

Solirios is a good looking lad—brown hair and searching black eyes. He is courageous, and with a natural curiosity, he has a keen sense of observation. He thinks he would like to be a mechanic one day and in his spare time he carefully examines everything he can find that has moving parts. In school he is a quick, alert pupil—although he was tardy in starting school.

Smart Musicals Get Top Rating for 1949 Shows

By FAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York (CP) — With "South Pacific" its most shining example, the musical scaled the straight of turns in the Broadway theatre realm during 1949.

There were three top-notch musical plays and three others of better-than-average quality. In the field of the straight drama, "Death of a Salesman" stood head and shoulders above all other offerings of the year.

Ballet received a tremendous boost with visits by the Sadler's Well Company of London and Les Ballets de Paris in performances that stirred both audiences and critics to outspoken admiration.

"South Pacific" was another triumph for the celebrated musical-satire-like team of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. Based on "Tales of the South Pacific" by James Michener and with a splendid cast that included Zolo Pinza and Mary Martin, it won the New York Drama Critics' Circle award as the best musical of 1948-49.

Another brilliant job in the same field was "Kiss Me, Kate," with music by Cole Porter and a book by Bella and Sam Spewack. They based it on Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew." Alfred Drake, Patricia Morison and Lisa Kirk topped the company.

"Lost in the Stars," a tragedy based on a novel in a South African setting by Alan Paton with music by Kurt Weill, was the third of the top-ranking musicals. Musicals considerably better than the average in production of this type included "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Regina" and "Miss Liberty."

"Death of a Salesman"

The plight of a little man broken on the wheel of industry was explored with great feeling and humanity by author Arthur Miller in "Death of a Salesman." Brilliantly staged by Elia Kazan and well acted by Lee J. Cobb and Mildred Dunnock, this play was far ahead of all rivals among straight drama. Gene Lockhart, a native of London, Ont., in September took over the strenuous leading role of Willie Loman from Cobb.

Harmond Massey, Toronto-born actor, both directed and appeared in the part of "The Father." August Strindberg's bitter tragedy of married life. The revival opened on Broadway in November.

Alexander Knox, originally from Strathroy, Ont., headed the cast of "The Closing Door," a melodrama of his own writing which came to New York in December. He showed considerable versatility in the leading role but it was not enough to keep the play itself and it closed after only a few weeks.

Judith Evelyn, whose first stage bow was in Winnipeg and who is widely known in Canada, won high praise for her acting as the neurotic heroine of "A Streetcar Named Desire," the Tennessee Williams play.

Kitty McKaye, a native of Grand 'Mere, Que., displayed her acting talents in "Miss Liberty," a musical which the critics greeted coolly but which proved a hit at the box office.

George Haig, a former Toronto-ian, appeared to advantage in two revues during the year, "Lend an Ear" and "Alive and Kicking." Johnny Coy, Montreal tap dancer, had a featured position in the revue, "Along Fifth Avenue" and Betty Low, once of Ottawa, stepped into a dancing role in "Lend an Ear." Mary Avril Keitler, of Montreal, won a part in "Anne of the Thousand Days" and Ivn Gorrie, of Ottawa, was seen in "As the Girls Go."

British Columbia Shakes Self Loose From Blizzard

Vancouver, Dec. 31 — (CP)— British Columbia today continued to shake itself loose from a blizzard as weather conditions improved.

A northwesterly wind swept intermittent snow down the coast but the fall was negligible. Friday's strong winds, sweeping eastward, did not add much more snowfall to the interior.

Rail communications continued to improve. C. N. R. trains arrived Friday night and early today while a combined train left at midnight. C. P. R. runs are on schedule.

Cars and buses trapped in interior points are mostly cleared but telephone and telegraph gangs still are working to repair sleet damage.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA WILL BUY PAKISTAN COTTON, UTE

Prague, Dec. 31 — (Reuters)— Czechoslovakia will become one of the main buyers of jute and cotton from Pakistan under a new trade agreement announced here Friday.

Czechoslovakia will supply light investment goods, vehicles, tractors, paper, chemicals, textile goods and matches. The turnover for 1950 — the term covered by the agreement — is to be 1,000,000,000 crowns (about $19,-000,000).

HASTINGS IN ERIN

By LAVONIA STOCKELBACH

The past is all holy to us; the dead are all holy, even that they were base and wicked while alive. Vanity, meanness and wickedness was not Tbey, was but the heavy unmanageable environment, that lay around them, with which they fought unprevailing; their lifelong Battle, go how it might is all ended, with many wounds or with fewer.

—Thomas Carlyle.

Everything is mixed up in Ireland. You sit down to sketch the ruins of the Franciscan Abbey in the Park of the Earl of Dunraven in Limerick, and you find yourself resting your sketch-book on a stone let into the ground to commemorate the visit of John Wesley who preached here in 1758 under an ash tree that has long since given up living.

In passing, it may be noted, as he did in his diary, that he was never molested nor mistreated by those who came out of curiosity or interest to listen to him. After taking a rubbing of the stone for some Methodist friends, the sketching continued with a growing appreciation of the building ability of those old monks and stone-masons.

Nearly five hundred years ago this abbey had been built by the order founded by St. Francis of Assisi. It is said that he is the only saint accepted by the Protestants! One noted with deep pleasure that the English settlers combined with the great Irish Chieftains in the burning during the time of Henry VI. It was suppressed by his grandson, Henry VIII, but the friars did re-establish themselves some years later: and along came Elizabeth.

Sketching these old ruins is a rewarding pastime, also a good rest after two or three hours' tramping. The manner of placing the stones is most with the architect's design, the proportions, the types of mortar, the colors of the stones themselves, sometimes the outlining of stone by stone; a beautiful window, all can lead us up and out in one search for beauty.

What an immense satisfaction for a stone-mason to come on a walking trip over here if only to enjoy the beauty of the placing of the stones, from those of the old Roman walls, the ramshackle field walls of Mayo or Limerick —those walls that must have taken millions of man-hours to build—to the well-thought-out planning of these old masters, or for a bricklayer to walk about Denmark where can be found the most enchanting samples of the bricklayer's genius. The uncommon laborer has so many chances to enjoy and broaden his life besides getting into the rather dull white-collar class.

As ruins go, these are in good condition and one can enjoy the church, cloister and usual conventional buildings. Near by is a golf course with many players this Sunday afternoon and all around are the tamest birds, and full of curiosity, to be found anywhere, all busy with their spring building, though work and song seemed quite equally divided. It is well that the meal hours are so flexible in Ireland; there was time to add still another dozen cote to one's collection. And there was still time to attend vespers in the Trinitarian Abbey, an order founded for the relief of captives from the Mohammedans.

In Ireland there is variety! In the morning there was service in the protestant church of a restored Augustinian order, an unforgitable experience both as to sermon and singing, to say nothing of the training of the racing greyhounds in the field next the church.

For some mixtures much can be said. A favorite bookmark is just a strand of soft green wool given me by the man who was showing me around the weaving plant in the Vale of Avoca near the Meeting of the Waters celebrated by the poet Moore:

"There is not in the wide world a valley so sweet, "as the vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet."

he wrote with Irish exuberance —but he had been in Hastings, or had he?

The strand of wool was going into a scarf a weaver was making and looked to this careless observer as only the finest of lovely soft green but a piece was pulled from another and itself a mixture of the most vivid green, white, yellow and a little tannish brown, the mixture more lovely than any of its parts.

Great efforts are at present being made in Eire to improve and enlarge their industries in order to keep their young men at home and to bring back the workmen who have gone and continue to go over to England. I did not visit a factory or plant where I did not hear the same story of wanting to emigrate. I could easily understand "Every one of us has only one ambition — to get to America." I could understand that, but why Britain? How far does it go to explain away the immigration into England after the famine and potato blight of a hundred years ago?

Again, you expect to eat and eat potatoes, than which there can be no more satisfying vegetable, and in all of Eire I did not find really good potatoes. Of course, May is not the best season for vegetables. They have been held over during the Winter but in Canada the situation is the same and the potatoes are better.

The Irish word is "Prata", pronounced praw-te. In the first place the skins were for the most part the color of mud, and though sensibly boiled with their jackets on, (it is also easier) they were not appetizing to look upon. The one really good thing to be enjoyed about them was their ability to retain their heat. The huge dish in which they were served made a comfortable fingerwarmer in that cold month of May. But they were not often boiled right; they were lost in their hearts and mushy under the skin.

Also, there were so few ways of cooking them.

However, to sit down to a breakfast of porridge with very rich cream, a dish of Eire, where there is no lack of food, except a good boiled potato) ham, and two fried eggs with fried potatoes, nine slices of three kinds of bread, jam, marmalade, buttered toast and tea, was enough to give strength to the faintest of heart. It took time not to have them place those nine slices of bread before me and still more time to have only one egg, for time in Ireland is of the essence of living.

Are potatoes fattening? There are not many fat people in Ireland. I found them, even the priests, quite the opposite.

In North Ireland your table partner peeled them for you with a deftness and a speed which a hot potato usually inspires. But they were always hot which is more than can be said of the cauliflowers, which were so abundant and when cool and overcooked so as likely to put one into a hot temper. There are two simple rules for the boiled potato (the poached salmon at the side is a great asset) and two that meet with massed Irish assent—and mine—they shall be boiled in their jackets at full speed and must never be kept waiting any more than you would keep your telephone waiting. But first find your potato!

Another of the many unexpected features in Ireland is the College of Maynooth for it is a Roman Catholic College founded in 1795 by an act of parliament of prince by a Protestant government in London. It is about fifteen miles out of good road from Dublin and pleasantly set among the hills, a range of rounded granite summits that though they be beautiful as one own scenery around our Maynooth has the advantage of the softening effect of surrounding mists.

The present building dates from a hundred years ago and its outstanding merit is its chapel with its fine oak stalls, mosaic pavement, marble altar and stained glass, a fine example of the work of the ill-fated English architect, Pugin. Nearly are the ruins of the 12th. Century castle, still another building has been demolished by Cromwell's armies. It must be remembered that they did it quite a bit of demolishing in England, too.

Just why the government founded such a seminary is worth going into. Not all of Maynooth accept such a large measure of control from a foreign government? Parliament was deluged with petitions against the grant for such a college .. "it was destructive to the souls of our fellowmen" .. "it is petuating falsehood by the Treasury," etc. Was it founded to render the Romanist clergy more loyal? Was it to perpetuate Romish error or to purify it? It was a trouble-world a hundred years ago, as much so as it is the present for.

But Maynooth is still carrying on. We read in the papers of August that the college received from America through Cardinal Spellman of New York the sum of eighty thousand dollars to ward the million dollars needed. Before the foundation, and for the evil days of the Penal Code, hundreds of ecclesiastical students had been obliged to go to the Continent for their education, to Louvain, Antwerp, Rome, Lisbon, Paris and most interesting of all, to Salamanca. Their education was in their homeland but their outlook abroad were sometimes paid by the gentry, sometimes by foreign donations, but for the most part it was a story of great hardship, compared with which the modern working one's way through college, is almost easy. But they brought back to Ireland "a foreign culture and its foreign grace, which did much to embellish Irish life. Their earlier prejudices were corrected and their knowledge of foreign lands had a real and varied knowledge of the world which they had the manners and feelings of cultivated gentlemen and a high sense of clerical conduct, and had no sympathy with insurrection ."

Of those who came from Paris imbued with the evil tenets of the French Revolution, it was quite another story. Perhaps some of our Protestant and Roman Clergy would like to go into the matter and acquaint us with the type of priest evolved by Maynooth.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

CALLING ALL GROSBEAKS

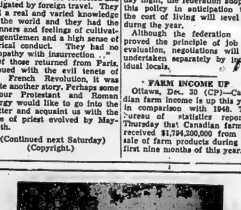
Evening Pine, and Rose-breasted Grosbeaks naturally have some characteristics in common, but their habits of migration are considerably different. The very beautiful Rose-breasted, like many of our summer birds, spend the cold months of our year in Central and the North Eastern corner of South America. The two other varieties have no such systematic ways.

Whereas it is possible to predict within a few days just when Rose-breasted Grosbeaks are liable to appear in any locality after they leave their breeding grounds in Autumn, Evening Grosbeaks might be listed among the grazies of birdlandia. They may wander either east or west as well as south, though they are more likely to be around southern Canada in Winter, we should not be surprised to see a flock of these lovely black, white, and gold birds at any season. Until a few years ago, ornithologists thought that their breeding grounds were in "the northern coniferous forests north of Lake Superior, in eastern Manitoba and along the western mountains from British Columbia southwards." But in Eastern Canada the Manitoba maple attracts Evening Grosbeaks, and the planting of these trees in recent years has probably affected their habits as well as their migration habits. However Manitoba maples grow it is possible to see Evening Grosbeaks, the bird enthusiasts expect soon to discover them in their home settlements, as flocks of them have been observed in mid-August less than 50 miles north of Montreal.

In general appearance the bird is like a Grosbeak, the Pine, in very similar to the White-winged Crossbill, except that it is one of about 9½ inches makes it considerably larger than either that bird or its own first cousin. The males are rosy red, the females a dull olive green or yellow on their heads, and both have narrow but white brimstone. They nest in Canada's northern coniferous forests west to the Mackenzie River Valley and only erratic in their movements afterwards. In Winter they do not go south, keeping pretty much to the evergreens, but visiting parts of Canada, here and there, where mountain ash berries or the fruit of the sumac can be found.

July now seems to be the only month of the year when neither of these kinds of ramblers is seen. This leads to the conclusion that Evening Grosbeaks do offering them some tempting food, and before they leave they are favored as residents of Southern Canada rather than visitors.

Will Seek Re-evaluation Of Dollar Than General Increases in 1950



London, Ont., Dec. 30 (CP) — Most civic labor groups will seek re-evaluation of wage scales rather than general increases in 1950, spokesmen for federation of civil employees unions said today.

Meeting in special session Tuesday night, the federation adopted the view that, generally speaking, the cost of living will level off during the year.

Though the federation approved the principle of job re-evaluation, negotiations will be undertaken separately by individual locals.

FARM INCOME UP

WINTER'S SECOND FESTIVAL

New Year's is a pale reflex of the color and high spirits of the Christmas festival. The latter is the high time of the year, while New Year's, though it brings the first of a new twelvemonth of time lacks the emotional heights which Christmas achieves in the hearts of millions. The mind and fancy which are characteristic of that season of the great midwinter festival are now more subdued for the exaltation of Yuletide is equalled only when another Yuletide and Christmas festival comes around.

The characteristics of the two celebrations are so different that they never be confused in the mind of anyone for Christmas is ever Christmas and New Year's is New Year's year after year. In time the spirit of the new year more and more manifests itself and in time it is in full command. In time as the days and nights of January and February become familiar the look forward to spring becomes paramount. Hope rises as the weeks go by and the promise of spring is read in the signs of nature as the sun's heat grows and the buds on the branches expand.

In the meantime we packed winter activities of all kinds. Reopened schools steadily advance the training of the boys and girls and young women and men.

It is natural to look forward as the days start to lengthen. A portion of the winter is passed and its character may suggest something of the sort of weather we are likely to have, and then again, it may not. Forward lies the promise of a revival of life in spring and the promise of healthy outdoor sports for the young who at this time are enjoying fully the lull in training and the outdoor life though one of the characteristics of an out-and-out winter is lacking, namely snow.

In the days ahead the resolutions which many people are supposed to make as the New Year enters may come to fruition and other resolutions will soon be forgotten.

Eastern Ontario escaped the worst of the storms which swept Western Ontario with a considerable depth of snow a few weeks ago. Still the landscape misses the signs of winter, all but cold and ice which are still with us. Instead of the brilliant lighting by the snow, there is the dull grey and brown of the grass exposed to the sun at an unusual time of the year.

EINSTEIN GENERALIZATION

To Newton the universe was a machine, space was something to be filled with objects which could be proceeded to fill it not only with stars and planets but with preposterous ethers to account for the transmission of light and magnetism. Einstein showed that space and matter are not inseparable. It was impossible to unity the two by thinking of space in Euclidian terms — that is, in terms of a three-dimensional room infinitely extended to include the whole universe. So Einstein welded time and space together into a fourth dimension and therefore invoked a four-dimensional geometry to explain what happens in the universe. The need for welding time and space together is seen when we consider an event on Arcturus, a star forty light-years distant. If, we could see an event on Arcturus now would it be 1909 or 1949? Evidently bodies are not only somewhere in the universe but somewhen.

Both Einstein's experiments confirmed Einstein's conclusions. He had unified matter and energy. Mass is simply so much frozen energy, energy so much attenuated and extended mass. But Faraday's old problem still remained. The atomic physicists had decided that energy is emitted by any and all conditions in the piecemeal — in bits called quanta. Light, radio waves and other radiation appear as bullets, quanta or jerks. But what of gravitation? It obeys the same law as light and magnetism. But does it come in corpuscles or quanta? There is no proof that it does. Yet the quantum physicists insist that the unification of gravitation and electromagnetism will follow an extension of the quantum theory. Einstein holds that relativity must be applied to radiations of all kinds. It will be hard to reconcile these conflicting points of view. If Einstein has succeeded he will have outdone himself.—New York Times.

HOW WEATHER HELPS

Rain, which came down around the Christmas holidays, making getting about a little unpleasant served more than one good purpose, it filled the sources of water supply and helped out the power situation, and it also will have the effect of making a brighter picture for next spring's fire hazard. Conditions during the early part of the season are usually related to the precipitation during the winter months and degree of water levels, says the weekly information bulletin of the Department of Lands and Forests for Quinte District.

CELEBRATING FATHER

That's your father, little chap,
In that silly paper cap
Blowing on that hooky horn.
Do not look on him in scorn.
Watch him closely and you'll see
Just how playful he can be.
That's your father — do not grieve,
Celebrating New Year's Eve.

That's your father dancing round
Making such a fearful sound;
Grinning glasses with the men;
Kissing women, time again;
Calling everybody "whoop!" as they say,
Celebrating New Year's Day.

If you watch him you will see
What a comic he can be.
That's your Dad who frowns on you
When some mischief small you do,
And when you are having fun
Shouts at you: "Pipe down, my son!"
He's our headache, now, but when
Morning comes — my sins or
When from slumber he awakes,
His will be the head that aches.

The number of building permits issued this year by the city engineer was never exceeded in the history of Belleville; eighty-nine permits were taken out for a valuation of $333,700 and as a result of these building operation the complexion of Front Street has been almost entirely changed. Belleville today is a prosperous and contented corporation with everyone working for the common good.

The new gas plant erected at a large cost and started in the spring of earlier councils was completed this year and will be a credit to the city; the plant is up-to-date in every respect and is considered the finest for its size in the Dominion of Canada. The gas is of good quality and saves from one to two mains are in first class condition.

Miles of new sidewalks were laid during the past year and considerable street paving was done.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHY GET ANGRY?

People usually get angry when they are about to slip. That's their excuse for it. If you are right, and know that you are right, you can afford to take things easy and not waste energy and peace of mind.

I am often amused at two people in an angry argument. I am amused at myself for being caught thus at times. I think it over and am ashamed, and resolve that I shall not be caught again. An angry argument between two human beings always makes me think of the rumpus of two dogs, snarling and snapping at each other, and I wonder why it is that dignified people bark at each other.

Many times, in noting a boxing contest, I have seen a superior fighter lose, simply because he lost his temper, while the other fellow kept his and hit cleaner and harder.

There is a gentleman from Columbia University of whom I have been reading. He is a great authority on international law, and on human nature. His name is Philip Caryl Jessup and he has been performing at a sort of second to Secretary Dean Acheson wherever in the world things look tough and need smoothing out. Especially has this man been very much at home in meeting the fire and brimstone hurled at by our Russian ex-associates. He has a sense of humor which has served him well at his country well. He doesn't get mad! He thinks things and refrained a smile.

After we have spent our anger, and things have smoothed themselves out, we always regret that we didn't have more control, for though we may have won or lost, a certain amount of bitterness is left behind — and that is sometimes hard to difficult to bury or forget. Why get angry?

I have noted people, not only abusing another human being, but I have seen them abuse their automobile, or some other contrivance, because of some simple trouble that could easily have been eliminated by an extra effort at thinking. I have had a wonderful asset, especially unique patience. If I have had much of it we could pass up our ways and strive only for peace and good will among men.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

PRESS ON!

"Clonal gone forever is the sorrow
Of earthly being—and its last low tones,
Wandering in broken accents in the air,
Are dying to an echo."
Well, what can we do about it?
We can do one thing that is very current and another thing that is very courageous.

The craven thing is to whine about the past, brood over it, lose all hope and plunge into despair. And that of course is the worst of all possible procedures.

But there is another way of regarding the past. St. Paul said: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus". (Phil. 3:13-14). Paul had much to forget. He had been implicated in murder. He says, "Of many of the saints . . . when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them."

Certainly he did not forget this in a light-hearted fashion. He spent the rest of his life trying to make amends, but he never looked back and brooded. He pressed on.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

"Letter, I Never Posted" is the name of a book someday I may write; and so might you.

When I was a young man, I took tremendous affront at something that was done to me. I have happily forgotten what it was. But I sat me down and wrote a letter that would have fairly frizzled the offender.

I read it to my father. He was enthusiastic. He made some useful suggestions for small changes, and offered me a few powerful phrases for incorporation. I rewrote the letter. It was a masterpiece. But when I read it in its finished draft, my father had still better suggestions; and still more damning and lucid phrases. I wrote it for keeps.

"That's perfect!" my father cried, when I read it over to him. "Perfect! Now chuck it in the basket."

"Chuck it . . ?" I gasped.

"Certainly. It's served its purpose," said my father. "You have got it off your chest. You feel a great deal better now. Chuck it in the basket."

Which I did (and learned at an early age one of life's great secrets of a happy and healthy life. A hundred times those hundred times in my life, though I am a writing man who can get a great deal off his chest in the writing course, I have written a Letter Never to be Posted. It is fun. It is gratifying to the very last. It has been the relief of a thorough physical examination from first before deciding what you need is to "relax." Chronic fatigue may result from reversible causes, as a physician is working upon any type of self-prescribed treatment, it would be a very fine idea to have the village doctor give you a going-over, including an X-ray of the chest.

Regardless of how tired one may become, from any cause, eight hours of sleep should be sufficient to restore energy and vitality. The person who wakes up tired in the morning, or who, during the day, is, in all probability, suffering fatigue from some other cause.

Ottawa to Absorb Three Times Its Present Area on January 1st

Ottawa, Dec. 31.—(CP)—Ottawa will be nearly five times bigger tomorrow.

In one overnight gulp of surrounding municipalities, it will absorb more than three times its present area, increase population by 17 per cent and assessment by more than 14 per cent.

On the first day of 1950, it annexes 22,000 acres of Nepean township to the west and Gloucester township to the east and south. The city's present acreage is 8,000.

The capital's population will jump from 152,000 to 185,000, within 6,000 of displacing Hamilton as the fifth-largest city in Canada. Assessment will be boosted by $21,000,000 to more than $210,000,000.

Nearly one-third of that assessment is exempt from municipal taxes, most of it federal property for which the city will get $400,000 this year in lieu of taxes.

Annexation of these areas is a major step in the development of Ottawa as a national capital.

The national capital plan, initiated by the federal government at the end of the Second World War, envisions a 25 to 50-year period.

It calls for the annexed lack sidewalks and an adequate sewage system and water supply over the next few years and new roads to be built.

In addition to residential areas the areas to be annexed include two airports—R.C.A.F. station at Rockcliffe in the east end and the Trans-Canada Air Lines terminal at Uplands in the south-Britannia Bay, a summer resort on the Ottawa River, and a golf course.

Progress, however, has not been smooth and peaceful. Turbulent scenes followed the dismissal of

PHYSICAL ACTIVITY ESSENTIAL TO WELL-BEING

Many a person who convinces himself that what he needs is to go somewhere and "relax," would be much better off to go somewhere and work. The chronically tired person who follows a sedentary existence suffers from boredom as much as anything as well as lack of physical exercise, and while he may escape the psychological aspects of his plight by a change in scene or routine, the further relaxation does nothing for his physical well-being.

A business man died after all the time. He took a month off and went to Florida where he followed his habitual sedentary habits—in different environment—characterized by plenty of "sitting around," and "relaxation." Upon his return to his business, he was still chronically fatigued. He felt no better. Upon consulting a physician, it was found that he had leukemia, a very serious blood disease.

Of course, leukemia is not caused by "sitting around," but it has been noted that the effect of a thorough physical examination first before deciding what you need is to "relax." Chronic fatigue may result from reversible causes, as a physician is working upon any type of self-prescribed treatment, it would be a very fine idea to have the village doctor give you a going-over, including an X-ray of the chest.

Regardless of how tired one may become, from any cause, eight hours of sleep should be sufficient to restore energy and vitality. The person who wakes up tired in the morning, or who, during the day, is, in all probability, suffering fatigue from some other cause.

Department Merged

Suburban police and fire departments will be merged with the city's departments and township administrative staffs will be absorbed as far as possible.

In addition to residential areas the areas to be annexed include two airports—R.C.A.F. station at Rockcliffe in the east end and the Trans-Canada Air Lines terminal at Uplands in the south-Britannia Bay, a summer resort on the Ottawa River, and a golf course.

Progress, however, has not been smooth and peaceful. Turbulent scenes followed the dismissal of the Gloucester township Clerk a month ago for opposing annexation which was favored by the town council. A delegation protest sent by some ratepayers to the Ontario Municipal Board came close to delaying the move.

Two isolated duels did not spill ill within the outer boundaries of Ottawa after tomorrow. They are sharply separated from Aylmer, Quebec Park lying side by side in the east end. The first is a low-incidence residential area, the other an exclusive residential area, inhabited largely by senior civil servants and diplomats.

It is possible that annexation proceedings will be taken on these next year. Their annexation would add another 690 acres to the land area and 13,500 to the population.

DOCTOR CHARGED

Goffstown, N.H., Dec. 31 — (AP) —A country doctor charged with murder in the alleged "mercy killing" of a pain-wracked cancer patient Friday described it as a "wonderful man" by the dead woman's husband.

Dr. Isador Greenhill, 35,000 bonds, Dr. Hermann H. Sander walked out of the courtroom expressing confidence he would be "vindicated."

He is charged specifically with killing Mrs. Abbie Borrow, 59, of Manchester, last Dec. 4 by injecting a fatal dose of alcohol into her veins with a syringe.

Mrs. Borrow's husband, Marshall, expressed his sentiments in a typewritten statement handed to newspaper men.

Fine Christmas Concert Presented by Teachers and Pupils

Shannonville — The pupils and the teachers of the United Church Sunday School presented an enjoyable Christmas concert last Friday evening in local Orange hall.

The Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Ernest Crape, served capably in the capacity of chairman. In his remarks he thanked all who helped in the preparation of this entertainment and also extended the compliments of the season.

Shirley Crape gave the recitation of "Welcome" to open the program. A number of girls and boys comprised a chorus to sing "A Welcome Song". "Santa's Handyman" was recited nicely by Jimmy Ucna.

Miss Bernice Houston read the well known Christmas poem, "The Night Before Christmas" after a number of pyjama-clad girls and boys. Gail Tubby and Tommy Hinchey took the solo parts of a chorus "Merry Christmas" to conclude the first item on the program.

Mrs. Malcolm Little's class presented the old familiar carol "We Three Kings of Orient Are" with Tommy Hinchey, Jimmy Ucna and Donnie Little taking the leading roles, suitably garbed in costume. "The Gimmie Boy" was recited nicely by Jimmy McRoberts.

Fine Program

Misses Bernice Houston and Muriel Miller led the audience in the singing of several old Christmas carols. Miss Ann Sine was presiding at the piano for the musical portion of the program.

Rev. L. W. Scott, the pastor of the church, was requested to give a few remarks in which he expressed thanks to the teachers and superintendent of the Sunday school for their leadership in the concert.

Tommy Hinchey rendered a delightful solo "In a Bethlehem Manger". Tommy's singing showing great promise.

Several of the senior girls presented an amusing play which depicted a discussion of the members of the Ladies' Aid following a supper. Elsie, the cook, was played by Helen Jackson; Mrs. Gravel, president of the Ladies' Aid, by Muriel Miller; Mrs. Cora Jane, by Myrtle Neal; Mrs. Pryor by Marina Mastin; Miss Gardner by Shirley Crape; Mrs. Richards by Mary Corey.

Ernest Crape rendered several selections on his "over-sized" mouth organ.

"The Reason We Have Christmas" was well recited by Beverly Martin. Donnie Little recited "When Santa Was a Boy" in a humorous manner. Rudolph, the Red Nosed Reindeer" was sung pleasingly by Muriel Miller and Bernice Houston. Little Stanley Ucna, in a little timid way when it came his turn to recite, "Half Past Three," which was in the neighborhood of his years.

Mrs. Malcolm Little's class presented an amusing skit "Dressing the Snow Man". Tommy Hinchey made an exceptionally fine snowman. Other participants in the recital and singing were Beverly Mastin, Rosella Pringle, Jimmy McRoberts, Carman Crape and Shirley Crape.

The recitation "Compensation" was the next item on the program, by Carman Crape.

A solo, "Infant Lowly" was sung sweetly by Bernice Houston.

Santa Claus was the closing recitation by Helen Crape.

The program concluded with a most impressive dialogue by the senior boys and girls under the direction of Mrs. Scott and Beatrice Ucna.

"Birth of a Song"

This dialogue "The Birth of a Song" depicted the setting and circumstances under which the hymn "Infant Lowly" was composed. Mrs. Currie supplied a beautiful background to this play with her rendition of the old carol. As the curtain rose, Carl Wood portrayed the composer; Alfred Ucna the pastor of the church; Leona Ucna and Gail Jubby, the composer's wife and child. Others taking part were Jimmy Hinchey, Muriel Miller, Bernice Houston, Shirley Crape, Beverly and Marina Mastin.

Santa Claus appeared at the conclusion of the program and each child present received a bag of candy.

All who assisted in the presentation of this program deserve praise for their fine effort as an enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

Doctor Is Freed Under Bond In Injection Case

Gottsloum, N.H., Dec. 31—(AP)—A young doctor accused of murder in giving an injection to an incurable cancer patient was freed Friday under $25,000 bail—even as members of the dying man's family divided on their feeling toward the doctor.

Dr. Hermann N. Sander was charged specifically with murder by injecting 10 cubic centimeters of air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie Barrotto, 58-year-old wife of an oil salesman.

When arrested Thursday, 26 days after her death, the 40-year-old doctor was quoted by investigators as saying calmly:

"It was an act of mercy. There was never any malice in my heart."

Mrs. Barrotto's three brothers held different views.

One — Thomas Constantine of Bangor, Me.—told reporters: "I did not suggest to anyone that my sister's suffering be ended by any means. As far as I'm concerned she should have been left to the will of God."

Louis Constantine said he wasn't familiar with the injection but felt "now that she is dead she is better off."

Bernard Constantine said he held "no malice toward the doctor but thinks he thought he was doing what was right, I think his actions were wrong."

Meanwhile, a medical referee admitted to reporters under questioning that 10 cubic centimeters of air pumped into the woman's veins—the dose Sander testified in the warrant—was not enough to kill a human being.

Medical referee Robert E. Biron said, however, that more air had been injected than the amount specified in the murder charge.

FEWER DEATHS FROM ACCIDENTS

Toronto, Jan. 1—(CP)—Police announced Friday night there were more accidents and injuries — but fewer deaths, on Toronto streets during 1949.

Figures released by Inspector Vernon Page show that the 6,784 accidents investigated by police resulted in injuries to 2,949 persons, death to 58 and material damage of close to $1,000,000.

Inspector Page said that in 70 per cent of the pedestrian fatalities, the pedestrian had caused his own death through carelessness.

Asst. to President

Within the Canadian Northern, he became assistant to the president and later vice-president in charge of purchases. With the birth of the Canadian National, his rise continued. He was vice-president in charge of purchases for the new system when war broke out in 1939. He was called to Ottawa to head the Defence Purchasing Board. Even then he had to deal with railroads.

By 1941 the railroads were faced with a tremendous job as the fuel crisis increased. He was called to the C.N.R. system and became president.

On the eve of his retirement, to be succeeded by Donald Gordon, Mr. Vaughan had this definition of railroading: "An enthralling occupation because demands constantly constitute a challenge to one's ingenuity and resourcefulness and whose rewards far transcend the pay-cheque."

The arbitration board was appointed to rule on the dispute after a 4 1-2 month strike early this year.

The majority report awarded the miners a 10 cent hourly increase for 1949, retroactive to Jan. 1. It also recommended the increase be carried through 1950. The union sought a further increase of five cents an hour for 1950 to bring their basic wage to $1 an hour.

They struck for a 15-cent hourly increase Feb. 23 to bring the basic wage to $1.

Chief Justice of the C.C.C.I. said that under the proposal the miners would receive about $1.06 an-hour basic increase. They will receive about $150 each in retroactive pay for 1949, he added.

ARRESTS IN HAVANA

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 31 (AP)—About 400 stevedores were arrested Friday for striking illegally. The longshoremen quit work Thursday, tied up cargo operations on six ships in the harbor. Police said they were arrested and charged against a firm which had failed to abide by social security laws. Authorities termed the strike illegal and arrested most of the workers.

MANKIND'S

Leather is a good example of connective tissue in aging, these tissues become more fibrous, a process called fibrosis. This fibrosis process, Dr. Dougherty said, appears to be slowed down by cortisone.

Connective tissues are by no means all that must be kept youthful if we are to live longer. But they are apparently one of the key structures in long life.

The Utah experiments on mice show clearly, Dr. Dougherty said, one way in which cortisone benefits the framework tissues.

It does not work by the same mechanism as the new popular anti-histamines for common colds, and for allergies. They counteract the histamine which the human body naturally manufactures.

Cortisone gets at the source of histamine troubles by slowing down the production of this powerful chemical.

but it was better than it was 10 years ago, when that period was ushered in in the fury of marching armies and sounding cannon.

North America was prosperous. Life flowed strong in the veins of the Toronto, Montreal, and New York stock exchanges where fingers spat out tickertape and measure its pocketbook. The New York market closed out the old year on a historically high mark.

There was a pulsing new vigor in the religious life of the continent, and many church leaders moved more boldly into the stream of events, seeking to reform the morality of Canada and the United States and their people.

Science captured new ground in the closing days of the old year. Dr. Albert Einstein brought forward a new concept that promised a possible new understanding of the universe in the year's ahead.

Across the seas, a sick world was recovering from the wounds of war. The economic and reparation administration said Western European countries had achieved the highest industrial and farm production in history. The forecast for next year was for even higher production.

Air Force Bonnet For 13,000 Girls Is Style Puzzler

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — London's topline milliners are competing to design a hat style that will suit 13,000 women.

It won't be a sumptuous fur felt or ratskin baby creation but a plain air force blue barathea.

It's the new "walking-out" hat for air force women, requested by Dame Felicity Hanbury, director of the W.R.A.F. Her orders to the hat-makers are these:

"I want something smart, but essentially feminine. It must stand up to hard wear, not lose shape, not fall off in a howling gale. It must be suitable for all climates from the tropics to the Antarctic."

Designers have a clear field. They can produce what they like —with two musts; a mohair band and a gold wing badge.

The present hat is made of soft air force blue barathea, the circular crown gathered into a stiffened band, and trimmed by a black mohair band and gold service badge. The heavy, green-backed patent-leather peak is topped by a black patent chinstrap.

"It's a shocker," groan the girls in general.

Right," says Dame Felicity. "We'll cut out the patent peak and the chin-strap — provided it doesn't blow off in a gale."

One Woman Judge

Closing date of the competition is mid-June. Designs submitted will then be judged by the Duchess of Gloucester, two senior R.A.F. officers and Aage Thaarup, royal milliner.

Thaarup has designed hats for Princess Margaret, says: "Hats worn in the service would be something which does not hide their face and hair, something which is uniform yet chic."

The judges will choose three designs which will be worn on duty by three chosen air force women. "To find out the candid opinions of other airmen."

When the final choice is made, it will be nine months to a year before the new headgear reaches service stores, depending on the speed with which skilled stocks are used up.

Meanwhile the King has approved a new tropical dress for the Women's Royal Naval Service. Designed for ceremonial occasions and social functions, in white bleached mercerized drill with a belt of the same material it has a blue and white collar with revers.

There are four buttons down front of the previous five and the skirt is slightly flared with a single pocket insert. Officers, chief petty officers and petty officers wear gilt buttons while other ranks wear white horn buttons.

CASE FOR SOLOMON

French legal experts are at odds over this little girl, Nicole Vayssieres, and her python. Nicole says the snake was part of a carnival act in Paris. Police took action to stop it on grounds that the child is placed in danger when handling and kissing the reptile. Another school of thought is of opinion it is the snake who's being abused. Nicole's pop says that the snake's temperature is kept low and its senses are dulled, leaving it indifferent as to what goes on. Nicole and the snake are the only interested parties who haven't upset by the whole thing.—Central Press Canadian.

Company 2—

On Thursday evening Dec. 22, Company 2 Girl Guides entertained Company 1 at a very enjoyable Christmas Party in the St. John Ambulance Hall.

When they returned, games were played under the leadership of the captain and lieutenant of Company 2. This was followed by another interval, this time the singing of Guide songs led by the captain of Company 1.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cakes and drinks were then served by the Senior Guides and Company Leader, Ann Brisco.

Following this was an exchange of gifts among the girls—Jessie Scames and Josephine Brisco presenting the girls with their gifts.

Dewey to Press For Development Of St. Lawrence

Albany, N.Y., Dec. 31 — (AP) — Governor Thomas E. Dewey stepped at the Truman administration and today for not letting New York State develop the long-proposed St. Lawrence River Hydro-electric project.

He indicated the state would continue to press for federal permission to undertake the project jointly with the province of Ontario as proposed by Dewey in April 1946.

Dewey announced a move to acquire an abandoned, federally-owned power line in Northern New York state "in the hope it will be useful" in the future for transmitting power from the St. Lawrence to major power lines deeper in the state.

The governor said he had authorized the state power commission to sign an option to purchase the 90-mile line, between Massena, which is near the St. Lawrence and Taylorville in Lewis county. The price is $300,000.

The federal government erected the line during the war, at a cost of $4,000,000, to carry electricity from central New York sources to Massena's Aluminum plants.

"Firm Expression"

Dewey said he had authorized the power commission to couple the preliminary purchase action with a "firm expression that New York State desires to develop the power without any more delay the delay which has denied it to us for 30 years."

He hit at a recommendation by a federal power commission examiner Dec. 30 that the F.P.C. deny New York's application to develop the power project jointly with Ontario at an estimated cost of $400,000,000.

The examiner, Glen R. Law, recommended instead that the St. Lawrence be developed as a national level between the United States and Canada, both as a seaway and power project.

Dewey told newspaper men "it would be a shocking thing, of course," if the F.P.C. accepted the recommendation, which would mean further delay.

The governor favors both the seaway and power projects but wants to go ahead with the power project while the seaway phase is fought out in congress.

ROB DICE GAME

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Three armed thugs with stockings over their faces today robbed 20 card and dice players of possibly $4,000.

There were three women among the guests playing cards and dice in the cellar of the home of William Murray, police said, the bandits entered at about 12:30 a. m.

One gunman tired a single shot, police believe for intimidation purposes. John Sterling, 43, was wounded by the bullet.

48,000 Persons Now Unemployed In Province

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP)— The Toronto Globe and Mail says today that 48,000 persons are unemployed at present in Ontario, an increase of 20,000 over a year ago.

In a front-page survey of the province's unemployment situation, the newspaper says that reduction in export business for certain industrial products and curtailment of woods operations are contributing factors to what it termed "pockets of unemployment more serious than at any time since the end of the war."

Of the 48,000 unemployed in Ontario 22,000 are classed as unskilled and 4,000 are registered for general labor in the construction industry. Approximately 20 per cent of the total are believed idle because of seasonal slumps.

The Globe and Mail says that, based on reports from National Employment Service offices, the situation in the following Ontario centres shapes this way:

Toronto: December unemployment increased 3,100 between December, 1948, and December 1949. The totals for the two periods were 9,400 and 12,500.

Sarnia: Unemployment almost double that of a year ago. A slow-down in the construction industry and the end of the navigation season contributed to push the unemployment figure up to 863, compared with 570 at this time last year.

Kitchener: Unemployment total higher than that of 1948 but N.E.S. official considers the 853 figure normal for December.

Brockville: Some workers at the Canada Foundries and Forgings plant are employed only three days a week.

Owen Sound: Seasonal layoffs in the shipping and lumbering industries have created unemployment. Some 1,700 are registered for jobs compared with 637 last year.

Oshawa—One new industry is expected early in the new year to absorb 100 of the 1,700 now registered for placement. Not since November, when 500 were laid off by Ontario Malleable Iron Co., has there been any serious employment disruption. A new plant at nearby Ajax is expected to hire 100 workers soon.

Peterborough—Lack of bush work has contributed to the 1,000 registered for work. Demand for fuel wood and lumber is considered an important factor. Officials report an abnormally large number of transients.

St. Catharines—Loss of export markets has brought to 1,220 the number out of work. Expansion of the McKinnon Industries plant is expected to take up some of the slack in a few months. Some of the unemployed worked as fruit pickers during the summer.

Sault Ste. Marie — Algoma Steel Corp. laid off 300 men three weeks ago, but some will be re-hired in February. Work on a $2,000,000 armories may begin in 1950.

Simcoe—Labor turnover in the base metal mines is the lowest in history. Curtailment of such operations has brought the number of unemployed to 1,240. Many lumber camps will complete their winter's log haul next month, forcing many more out of work.

Timmins — Beginning heat week employment in the lumbering industry will be available for loggers and truck drivers. The largest number comprises men from the gold mines.

Kirkland Lake—A hydro shortage which has reduced expansion in the mining industry is blamed for keeping out of work 200 of the district's 311 jobless. The unemployment rate per capita is still one of the highest in Canada.

Niagara Falls—More than 1,000 are unemployed, chiefly due to an influx of workers anticipating an early start on the proposed addition to the Queenston hydro plant. Unemployment has reached the highest point in several years.

Belleville — A slowdown on construction projects is considered the key factor in the 628 unemployed. One year ago the figure was 316.

Kingston—Several major construction projects have kept unemployment to 900. An addition to Nylon plant and erection of married quarters of the Barriefield millitary camp are providing employment in the building trades. Extra workers will be engaged soon when the shipyard begins overhaul of large freighters.

RELIEF FOR ARAB REFUGEES

Washington, Dec. 31 — (AP)— President Truman will ask Congress to authorize a contribution toward a $54,900,000 United Nations fund for the relief of 750,000 Arab refugees from Palestine, it was announced Friday.

AT THE CAPITOL — A scene from the musical "Goldwyn Follies," in Glorious Technicolor starring Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Adrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou, Zorina, Phil Baker, The Ritz Brothers, Kenny Baker, Helen Jepson, The American Ballet and host of other stars, opening New Year's Sunday midnight after 12.05 and continuing Monday with continuous shows from 2.00 p.m. On the same program those two funny men Laurel and Hardy in their funniest hit "Our Relations."

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 31 — (AP) — Let me tell you about my holiday dream.

The mind doctors say that dreams relate to actual experience. I can believe that because I think this dream is the result of questions that I am often asked by actors. Such questions as: "Why is the press always concerned with Hollywood scandal? Why don't they print more nice things about Hollywood? Why are film critics so critical?"

Anyway, here is my dream:

Once upon a Christmas, every correspondent in Hollywood was gifted with a gaily-wrapped white box. Inside the box was a bottle of champagne and card which said, "For a happy New Year's Eve.—S. Genesius."

"Who is S. Genesius?" one correspondent asked another.

"I think he's an independent producer — isn't it Sam Genesius?"

So on New Year's Eve, every correspondent in a Hollywood poured the champagne and toasted Sam Genesius, the independent producer.

Now it so happened that the gift giver was actually St. Genesius, the patron saint of actors. And the champagne was not pure. It contained a magic potion of good will.

And when the correspondents wrote their columns on New Year's Day, they found there nothing bad about Hollywood and its people. Their copy was nothing but sweetness and light, bristling with the good deeds done by stars. And all the pictures they reviewed were beautifully-acted bits.

Everybody Happy?

After two weeks of this, editors began peppering the correspondents with demands to "get on the ball and cut this sob-sister stuff!"

Then the public became aroused. Crowds marched on the newspaper offices and hurled rocks through windows. The harrried editors finally fired all the good-willed correspondents and hired new ones.

And so the new correspondents began writing the kind of copy that people wanted and everybody was happy again.

Everybody, that is, except the actors — and St. Genesius.

AT THE BELLE — Marion Marshall, left, is the bearer of bad news to Cary Grant and Ann Sheridan in this scene from "I Was a Male War Bride," the hilarious comedy from the 20th. Century-Fox which closes today at the Belle Theatre. She just interrupts a honeymoon with orders from the army for Ann to return to the States, that's all, but it starts the film's second phase of hectic romance for Ann and Cary and its many laugh-provoking repercussions.

WILL HAVE TO MAKE GOOD

Ottawa, Dec. 31—(CP)—Canada's chartered banks next month will have to make good to the Bank of Canada for all their own currency still in circulation.

Any notes issued by any of the chartered banks will, for accounting, purposes, be out of circulation by Jan. 31.

But if you happen to have a sockful of chartered bank notes in your attic, they'll still be as good as they ever were.

The $14,000,000 transaction simply marks the end of a 15-year Canadian currency Bank of Canada notes.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

A set of single-standard rules will apply to all deals. Get a liberal education from the deal shown here:

♣ Q 7 5 4 2

WEST — EAST
♠ 9 7 6 2 — ♠ None

♠ A J 10 5 4
♥ K 6 4 3
♦ 10 8 4 2
♣ None

Start with the first hand. The dealer was south. To open with a bid of one he needs five tricks, four of which are high cards, two of which are sure tricks. If he bids a suit it must be biddable.

A trick is a high card (ace or king or queen) or a short card. He has five; two highs, three shorts in clubs. So, he has enough tricks for an opening bid of one. Yet he passes. Why?

He has only two high cards, Yea. His four suits promises four. Furthermore, he has only one sure trick, whereas an opener makes a promise of two. Sure tricks are: ace, one; K Q, one; A K, two.

West, of course, will also pass. But how about north? He has a count of six tricks; four highs, a short in hearts, a short in the diamond suit. Not only has he enough tricks. He has one over.

Has he enough high cards? Yea. His four are just enough. How about sure tricks? His diamond ace is one. His king and queen of spades make one sure. Two are all an opener promises.

A biddable suit is four cards with two faces, or five cards with one face, or any six cards. He has two biddable suits, one in clubs and one in spades. Which should he bid first?

With two biddable suits of the same length, first bid the higher rank. With suits of different length, first bid the longer. Thus, the opening bid by north is one club.

What you have just learned about an opening bid of one in a suit applies to every hand in a bridge pack. There are no unusual conditions to remember. There are no exceptions.

Remember only the four needs; five tricks; four highs, two sures, a biddable suit. Your opening is then expert.

Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" Provides Holiday Treat

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 31—(CP)—Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lilli Palmer have brought New Yorkers a holiday treat with a thoroughly beguiling and light-hearted production of Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra."

The first revival of the Shavian comedy in New York since 1925 moved into the National Theatre just before Christmas. Sir Cedric directed the play as well as acting the part of the Roman general.

The accent is on the amusing incidents of the play, with Sir Cedric himself depicting Caesar as wryly humorous and Miss Palmer portraying the 16-year-old Cleopatra as still a hoydenish child in most of her moods.

An excellent supporting cast help to make this an enjoyable and worth-while production. John Buckmaster, as the affected artist, Apollodorus; Arthur Treacher as Britannus; Nicholas Joy as Pothinus and Ralph Forbes as Rufio are admirable.

Actors' Evening

Grace George and Walter Hampden lend their distinguished acting talents to "The Velvet Glove" and the play at the Booth Theatre is worth seeing for their presence on the stage. The drama itself, a comedy centered in a Roman Catholic convent, is thin and rather draggy. But Miss George, as the Mother-General of the order, and Hampden, as an elderly Monsignor, make it a rewarding evening.

In "The Hat Race," author Garson Kanin again searches entertainingly into the slightly shady side of Metropolitan life. While in his highly successful "Born Yesterday" the setting was a lush hotel suit, the slower-paced, more humored venture which opened last week at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre peeks into a London-town Manhattan rooming house. Betty Field's interpretation of a disillusioned dance-contest winner gives spark to the story, woven around her relations with a naively ambitious saxophonist played convincingly by Barry Nelson.

The fourth newcomer, "How Long Till Summer," is an ambitious attempt to deal with the conflict between Negro and white in the United States. Unfortunately it is a rambling, disconnected drama which fails to convince, despite the acting endeavors of Josh White, the noted singer; Josh White, Jr., and others.

Fire Hall Burned, Only Ambulance Also Destroyed

Haliburton, Dec. 31 — (CP) — An early-morning blaze in which damage may reach $40,000 Friday razed a building used as a fire hall and destroyed this village's only ambulance.

The fire swept through a large frame commercial garage on Main Street operated by Fire Chief Tom Chambers and his brother Wally. For a time it threatened other buildings in the business section.

With the temperature only a few degrees above zero, water pumped from a nearby river froze almost as soon as it was poured onto the blazing structure. Chief Chambers blamed the outbreak on a spark from a sawdust burner used to heat the garage.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

This is the last column for the year 1949 and it is going to be brief. We'll have the yearly roundup for you in the first edition of the New Year. And before we forget, to all of you out there a Happy and Prosperous New Year. And that is from the Carver heart. From me and mine to you and yours, the best of everything. And we mean that.

* * *

And a bit of gossip before we write "thirty" to the old year. We saw a Diesel Electric team, that appeared to have the game in the well-known container go down to defeat before a savage Kingston Nylons' second period offensive in the Jock Harty Arena last night. We could scarcely believe our eyes. We had a, well, what looked to be a comfortable 5-1 lead a few minutes after the second period opened. Then, they flashed a sudden surging offensive that was not to be denied. Fueled by the starry line of Joe Catlin, Ken Partis, and Wall Gerow, the old so-and-so's, the Nylons swept our heartless off their feet and we don't mean maybe. The red light was flashing so often in the Belleville end of the Jetsi that the goal-judge developed a set of writer's cramp and had to be relieved.

* * *

So help me, 900 Kingston fans and they tell me that's a record more or less, suddenly spread over the ice. The dark-sweatered hometown heroes surged into swift goal-getting offensives. And, kiddies, they were full value for their money. Then, in the third period the Diesels regained part of their stride but it was too late and the better team on the night's play, skated off the ice with the grandeur of victory. The result gives Diesels five wins and three defeats and they are still safe in second place. Nylons, on the other hand, have now won against four losers. They clash again next Wednesday according to schedule.

* * *

And we evened the hockey count so our man Friday tells us, as far as Kingston is concerned, when our Rockets took the road to Kingston Vics to town by a 6-3 score here last night. We heard the period scores in Kingston, and it was heartening to say the least, especially in that second period when the Nylons were sharpshooting our nets. They tell us that a couple or eight hundred fans saw the fray and that the kids staged a good game. Well that's the first win for the Cookian youngsters, and as this Kingston team is noted type in the Junior "B" groupings, well that win means something. Don't worry about these Rockets. They've got everything and when they hit their stride they'll go places.

* * *

And that's it for 1949. Aside, the happiest of New Years to all of you, and may God bless you and keep you all through another year in a world that needs above everything, the help and guidance of Him.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Kingston Nylons Score 9-5 Win Over Diesel-Electrics With Strong Second Period Drive

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

A surging revitalized Kingston Nylons team, that appeared to be well beaten in the first period, roared back with a snarling second-period offensive that netted them six goals in ten minutes to defeat the Belleville Diesel Electrics by a 9-5 score in a setto for "B" tussle in the Jock Harty Arena, Kingston, last night.

It was a tough game for the Belleville team to lose and it was a grand victory for the hometown crew.

It was clean hard hockey all the way through with only eight penalties being handed out by the officials. The only mar of the game came when Doug Day of Belleville and Ohlke, Kingston got to a fist-cuffing and drew major penalties. In fact, that incident seemed to take the heart out of the Belleville team, and they weren't much good from there on.

Ugly Udall, crack Kingston goalie, received a stomach injury when one of his own team crashed into him The game was held up for ten minutes while he was getting repairs, but a local doctor ordered him off the ice and Jack Stone, a former junior, took over the pipes-minding job. And did a good one.

Appears In Bag

It appeared to be in the bag for the Diesel-Electrics in the first period. The visitors skated, outplayed and outchecked the Nylons while 900 people looked on glumly. They grabbed a 2-1 edge with Jackie Wardbaugh and Al. Meagher opening the scoring after twelve minutes of play. Ken Partis and the Diesels went into the lead just before the gong when Keith MacDonald on a picture-passing play with Leo Goyer and Tim Williams clunked Goyer.

And they appeared to be well on the way to victory at the start of the second period. Wardbaugh again roared in with Don Catlin right at his heels after the three-minute mark. Diesels were skating fast. They were checking hard. Then came the flaticuffs between Day and Ohlke.

Nylons Strike

And then it happened. Out of the proverbial blue the Nylons struck. They struck hard. They struck savagely. It was bang, bang, bang. Catlin, Partis and Gerow fired home goal after goal that demoralized the Belleville squad. They hit their stride at the 3.30 mark and at 8.30 had rammed home in brilliant forays no less than six goals. The period ended 7-3.

And they maintained their brilliant play in the third period. Joyce sank two goals in less than four minutes and then the Diesels remained part of their strike. They poured in on the attack and Bowie Day and Peter Jones fired home two goals to make the score 9-5. And that was it.

Nylons deserved their win. They, as we said before, struck hard and fast in that second period offensive and they were not to be denied.

Partis, Catlin and Wall Gerow teamed nerfectly in a scoring line and with Ken Joyce and Ohlke were the pick of the Kingston crew.

Diesels-Electrics, were, after an all-out first period, badly disorganized by the fire and fury of the second-period Nylon offensive.

The teams:—

Hockey Helmet Made of Pressed Rubber Fibre

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 31—(CP)—Make a better hockey helmet, says Frank Green, former Winnipeg hockey star, and you can beat your way into the dollar market.

Frank, following a career in British hockey, has set up a one-man business—F. Green anti-fracture products. Now he's outgunning for export trade.

His strongest selling card is a revolutionary type of helmet, weighing only 6½ ounces. Canadian players performing in British calain it is better than anything obtainable from North American makers.

Fashioned from pressed fibre and rubber, the helmet protects vulnerable parts of the skull without obscuring vision and is nylon-lined to shed sweat.

Frank figured out the design while lying in a London Hospital in 1947.

He had suffered a skull fracture playing for Wembley Monarchs and knew his need of a helmet when he returned to action. From a study of his own X-ray plates and a long discussion with his doctor, he doped out a helmet that would give adequate protection without wasted weight.

Other players liked the new headgear when Frank came back and several asked him to build helmets for them.

Others with trick knees and shoulders then asked for special protective equipment.

"The first thing you knew," says Frank, "I was in business."

Now he makes every type of protective hockey gear. His products are worn throughout Britain—and he wants to go to camp.

Born 32 years ago in county Cork Frank went to Winnipeg when he was six months old. He played junior hockey with St. Boniface Seals in 1935-36 alongside Terry Reardon who later went to Boston Bruins and now plays with Providence Reds in the A.H.L.

Then left for London, hooked up with Wembley and, apart from a brief coaching sojourn in Italy, stayed there until the outbreak of war.

He spent the war in a British munitions plant, played in the wartime Brighton League that included such N.H.L. stars as Johnny Sheppard, Reg Hamill, Turk Broda and Reardon, and then went back to peacetime hockey at Wembley.

He had Britain's National Hockey League's scoring in 1946-47. Then came the injury that shortened his career—and put him in business.

West Point, claims a New York boxing commissioner for the proudest moment of his life ... Tom, who is a husky, six-foot-four broth of a boy, was walking into the Polo Grounds between two notably round 200-pound gentleman, Herman Hickman and Lavelle ... the ex-Norman surveyed the trio in awe, then gagged to another cop: "did you see the size of that major?"

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By JACK TRACY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Dec. 31—(CP)—Like to see Clarence Campbell, president of National Hockey League's Chicago Black Hawks has a word for it—instead of saying "we had bad breaks," he said the puck has not been kind to us."

"That, so far as we know," says Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson, "is an entirely new phrase to describe the vicissitudes of a hockey team. And, as Tobin told the story, it's by no means inappropriate."

The Chicago general manager came here for tonight's game with Canadiens and Elmer gives a verbatim report of his story about Hawks being beaten by New York Rangers in a wild New York fourgoal scoring orgy late in the game. The four markers were scored in two minutes and 37 seconds, an N.H.L. record.

"We are leading by a goal in the last period," Tobin said. "And look like winning. There is less than five minutes to play, and all of a sudden the Rangers cut loose, get a goal, then another, take the lead. There is then less than three minutes to play, so Charlie Conacher pulls out Brimsek and tosses in six forwards to pull the fat out of the fire, which was daring and good strategy.

"What happens? The play is in the Rangers end. There's a faceoff. Laprade draws the puck, and to get rid of it, he just hurls it into the air. He wasn't even aiming it, just desperate to get it out of there, and where does the puck go? Right into our empty net. No, the puck wasn't kind to us."

Nat Dubious

Tobin has one more observation:

recent declaration. We are not among those named as being dubious characters, trying to bash the selling of our game. All I know is that the puck has not been good to us."

Biltmores Move Ever Upwards In Junior Race

(By The Canadian Press)

While still well off the pace set by Toronto Marlboros, Guelph Biltmores are moving upwards in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A race at a steady clip.

The Biltmores defeated St. Catharines Teepees 7-6 at Guelph last night and took over second place from St. Kitts. It was their seventh victory in eight contests and gave them a one-point hold on the berth. However, they've still a full 11 points behind Marlboros, unbeaten leaders.

In the only other junior A contest, Windsor Spitfires edged the last-place Kreshlers 5-4 at Stratford. The Spits moved into a fifth-place tie with Toronto St. Michael's as they continued their fight to get back into contention following the committee - room decision that dropped them from second position.

One of two monday games ran to form, the other saw an upset. The last-place Hamilton Tigers toppled Kitchener — Waterloo second-place Dutchmen 6-2 at Hamilton while the front - running Toronto Marlboros shut out Owen Sound 6-0 in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens.

Guelph gained their hard-fought victory over St. Kitts on Herbie Dickenson's goal at 15:12 of the final period after the Teepees matched the count with two quick tallies. Coach Art Jackson took out goalie Purkis Guelph would be 15 seconds left but to no avail.

It was Dickenson's second goal of the night. Other Guelph scorers were Plumb with two, and Guidolin, Palmer and Clune. Con Switzer was St. Kitts' only two-goal shooter. Others were notched by Jack White, Ron Clark, Orie O'Brien and Dick Brown.

Skov Nets Three Goals

Glen Skov netted the Spitfires' first three goals at Windsor. The Kreshlers held a 4-2 edge at the end of the second period but Bob Bailey evened the count and then his brother John gave Windsor the victory with nine minutes left. Perrulaz, Dunnette, Flanagan and French were the Stratford scorers.

The Tigers took an early 2-0 lead over Kitchener and never looked back. At one stage in the third frame, the Dutchmen narrowed the margin to 5-3 but Tigers staged a fast-scoring spree, three goals by Tom Smellie, Bill Fleming and Johnny Conick within 46 seconds.

Scrappy Jackie Taylor fired two of Hamilton's first three goals and Murray Cawsell got the other. Ted Grasser and Mickey Roth were the Kitchener marksmen.

Marlboros had things pretty much their own way as Pat Boehmer shut out Owen Sound Johnny McCormack gave them a 1-0 lead in the first frame, Blair and Johnson increased it in the second, and Hope, Lee and Johnson fired three more in the third.

Hogan Blistering Fairways After Long Illness

Los Angeles, Dec. 31 (AP) — Ten months ago one of the greatest golfers of all time lay near death on a Texas roadside. Doctors feared he might never play again.

But they couldn't banish Ben Hogan of that. Now, he's blistering the fairways again, and another round like Friday's 3 under par 69 may be enough to put him into entering next Friday's Los Angeles Open, richest tournament on the winter circuit.

"I was chipping and putting like a madman," Hogan quipped as he left the tricky Riviera course.

After his operation last spring, doctors said Hogan might not be able to walk well enough to play.

"I use one of those golf carfery folding chairs and rest when the other fellows are shooting," Hogan explained, adding that the legs still swell somewhat and are sensitive.

Hogan said he'll be back for more today and tomorrow. If he feels up to it and he continues to score well, he'll be on the firing line for the $15,000 event he won in 1942, '47 and '48.

Rockets Defeat Kingston Vics 6-3 to Register First Win In Current Junior B Group

(By Staff Reporter)

A win-hungry bunch of Belleville Rockets hit their stride and roared to a 6 to 3 win over the vaunted Kingston Vics in a thrill-packed Junior "B" O.H.A. fixture at the Memorial Arena here last night.

Take 15 fast skating hockey players, mix them frantically on a hard ice surface for 60 minutes with 15 more good men and what do you get? You were right the first time . . . A great hockey dish fit for avid consumption.

Just that was the result when the locals fused by the brilliant Ted Pletsch skated rings around the Limestone City crew to come up with their first victory in three starts. There wasn't a happier couple of men in the arena than manager Bill Cook and coach Dan Cowley when the final bell rang the curtain down on the best game their team has played this season. Approximately 700 fans witnessed this swift-moving affair.

The sock was on the other foot as times too and the Kingston men gave Tripp plenty of trouble on more than one occasion, particularly two lads named McGaughey and Andreas, the former scoring two of the visitors three points, while the latter was in on the assist on each. Montgomery Snowden rang the bell for the other Kingston count soon after the second period got underway.

Continually Stormed

From the outset the play was in the Kingston end of the rink and the Rockets continually stormed the Kingston goal with blasts from every angle. The local shooters showing an improved brand of game whirled into the fray with added zest and deliberate stubbornness.

Tripp had to display his goal tending wares many times when the Vics' line of Montgomery, Bendin and Shepherd closed in for the kill. A penalty at the 3.15 mark left Kingston short and it was then that the Rockets spoiled the pressure.

Lineman Bone missed a beautiful chance scooping the puck over the Kingston net while cageman Anderson looked on bewildered. There was only an afterpile up around the Vics cage with Anderson saving beautifully and standing up to every attack

Pletsch Scores Easily

In the dying minutes of the period Pletsch was sent to the penalty box leaving the Rockets a man short. But even with a one man advantage the Kingston boys didn't seem to have the organization to hold the Rockets in their own territory and Tripp never had to extend himself until his squads were back at full strength.

With only 40 second remaining in the period Bone shoved a goal-labelled pass over to Pletsch who made no mistake and drilled the puckster into the corner of the Kingston cage for Belleville's first score of the evening.

Apparently crazed by their one-goal lead the Rockets came out storming the Kingston end and their ganging display resulted in a goal by Semark from Murphy. Centreman McGaughey for Kingston attempted to further rub the impetus for his team's attack but his efforts were to no avail and the Vics hopes of scoring up the contest drizzled away as Belleville turned on the heat again.

Both sides gave no quarter and as fisticuffs ran sky high a scuffle between Wright and Shepherd left both sides a man short Both were banished for five minutes for fighting. Kingston seemed relieved at this split in ill Tripp held out everything that was thrown at him and the tables turned once more in favor of the Rockets.

Suffer Another Penalty

Belleville suffered another penalty to make the sides even and with only three linesmen apiece on the ice Hogan netted Belleville third point. The score now was 3 to 1 for the locals, the combination of Montgomery and Wesse having tallied the visitors counters.

After Shepherd had returned from a stay in the cooler for high sticking the Kingston crew took the play into the Belleville area but Tripp appeared completely calm as his mates reorganized for their next show of force.

Ted Pletsch wangled through again and plunked Hogan's assist with only 40 seconds to go before the middle session ended.

Swarmed Over Anderson

It was the same old story for the first seventeen minutes of the final period and the spectators saw the Rockets swarming all over Anderson in the Kingston cage. The avalanche of banging attacks paid off when Graham and Murphy hooked up for a well-deserved goal at the 3.05 mark. Defenceman Turland pulled the poorest piece of luck out of the bag after he broke right through the Kingston forwards only to be stopped by the goalie who skated well out of his net to clear a puck that just drifted too far ahead of the big defencemen's stick. The crowd roared as they followed Turland down the ice on his luckless solo effort.

Kingston appeared bewildered then but didn't lose heart even after Pletsch garnered his third and the Rockets sixth from right in on top of Anderson.

The play slugfested again and Gilmour of the Rockets was rewarded when a flying puck opened a gash under his left eye. This incident seemingly was the turning point for the hard pressed Vics and in the next three minutes the Belleville boys began to realize the potency of their Kingston opponents.

Two quick posts from the stick of McGaughey left Trippe a little amazed and his teammates stemming off the infuriated Vics.

The teams:

Kingston: Goal, Anderson; defence, Wickin, Latimer; centres, McGaughey, Wright, White, Aikin; subs, Montgomery, Shephard, Weese, Bailey, Tinkess, Gommer, And.ea, Bender.

Marchildon Given Clean Bill of Health by Doctors

(By The Canadian Press)

Phil Marchildon has been given a clean bill of health by doctors but New York Yankees aren't willing to take a chance on the Philadelphia Athletic pitcher, a club spokesman said Friday at Philadelphia.

Marchildon, 34-year-old native of Penetanguishene, Ont., underwent a complete physical checkup last week in Baltimore. Dr. George Bennett reported, in effect, that Phil was okay and should go out and pitch.

The A's wanted to trade Marchildon even-up for John Lindell, long-ball hitting Yankee outfielder Connie Mack has coveted for several years. But the Yanks have passed up the deal.

But the Yanks apparently don't want to take a chance on a pitcher who hasn't produced for two seasons. They indicated interest in another of Philadelphia's pitching staff top cast of them is fact, a spokesman said.

The spirit of ring comebacks is a fighter and the dream of a champion is a manager never seem to die. Bubbling over with such hopes are Sammy Angott, former world lightweight champion and manager Jack Laken.

The two managers, Baltimore Friday for a bout next Monday night with Sonny Boy West of Washington. But their target is a title fight with welterweight champ Sugar Ray Robinson.

Montreal Junior Canadiens Friday night made it a clean sweep on their four-game tour of Ontario and Manitoba, defeating Brandon Wheat Kings 3-2 in an exhibition hockey game at Brandon. Wheat Kings have the third Manitoba Junior Hockey league club to bow to the conquerors. Port Arthur Juniors of the Thunder Bay circuit also lost a tussle.

Larry Evans, 17-year-old American "Wonder Boy" of Chess, drew after 25 moves in his match at Hastings, Sussex, Eng., Friday with the Dutch Master, Dr. Max Euwe. Evans was playing his second-round match in the 25th annual International Hastings Chess Congress which opened Thursday.

The Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League Friday returned Zellio (Topper) Toppazzini, 20-year-old right winger, to the Hershey Bears, Eastern Hockey League Club for further seasoning. He was subject to recall to Hershey late last season.

Dr. Vincent Nardiello described as "very serious" Friday night the condition of Carmine Vingo, 20 - year - old Bronx heavyweight knocked unconscious in a 6-Round Square Garden fight. Nardiello, the Garden physician, examined Vingo at St. Clare's Hospital after Rocky Marciano of Brockton, Mass., knocked the Bronx boy unconscious in the 6th round of a seven-round fight.

At Annapolis, Md., George Sauer stalked out as head football coach of Navy Friday because the academy fired two of his assistants. Sauer quit with two seasons to go on his four-year contract when the Academy Athletic Association informed him it was not re-hiring line coach Bob Ingalls and backfield coach Vic Bradford.

Home-and-Home Series For all Six NHL Teams

By VIC MORRIS, JR.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The National Hockey League will greet the New Year with all six teams engaged in home-and-home series during the weekend.

Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks, who haven't been sharing in the league spoils of late, meet at Montreal Saturday night and return to the Windy City Sunday. The league-leading Detroit Red Wings visit Toronto Maple Leafs New Year's eve and return to the Motor City Sunday night. Boston Bruins celebrate the big night in New York, returning to the Bean City Sunday for the nightcap of the twin bill.

Make Surprise Switch

Toronto Maple Leafs made a surprise switch Friday by sending forward Fleming Mackell to Pittsburgh to Hawks and bringing up Johnny Arundel from the same team.

Arundel, 22, was a rearguard last season with Sydney Millionaires of the Cape Breton Senior Hockey League but had played forward during his four two games with the Hornets. Leafs coach Happy Day plans to use him up front in Saturday's game. Mackell is being sent to Pittsburgh to get steady work and will be brought back if he starts clicking again, Day said.

President Weston Adams of Boston Bruins figures there's nothing wrong with the modern style of hockey served up by the N.H.L. but he has a couple of ideas on possible changes.

Interviewed Friday night at Port Arthur, Ont., he said any changes have to be well thought out because attack and defence must be balanced. He said scores precede by the puck over the red may legally pick it up after it crosses the line."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop came home on the train late this afternoon from the insurance Men's Convention, and this morning I was eating breakfurt with me, and I said, G, ma, pop will be eating with us again tonight. How glad are you, ma? I said.

I'm so glad, I wish he had never gone away, ma said.

Being a good sport, and I said, Well hay, ma, why dont you welcome him home with a big surprise for dinner by having frankferters and powerkrurt?

If I remember correctly, frankferters and powerkrurt happen to be one that's been away, ma said. But just a smole it's a very good idea in principal. I mean it'll have liver and onions for dinner, because there's no question that he's in the 7th heaven whenever he sees and smells liver and onions under his nose and before his eyes, she said.

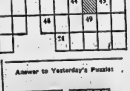
G, tahh's rite, ma, and here's another idea, I said. Pop always eats so many helpings of liver and onions he never has room for mutch dhsert, so why dont you just have plane simple ice cream in 3 flavors, or maybe three? I said, and she said, That's a sensible suggestion.

Making me feal partly lucky, and ma said, I'll give him a real surprise. I'll meet his train at the station and he and I will have a real homecoming celebration by exactly the way I had it. I said, and you dont happen to be the famous sweet-breads. I'll drop you off at your sister. Gladdies'? — and, you can have dinner there. You had an excellent idea, Benny, she said.

Wellyaw heck, ma, that's not exactly the way I had it. I said, the rgilled liver is famous, and I'll have thair

Suppose they have something dum for dinner at Gladdie's house! I said.

Which they didn't having frankferters and beans, with angel cake for dizert.



Making me feal all a ways lucky.

Virtual War Powers Given Hong Kong Governor to Use In Possibility of Strike

Hong Kong, Dec. 31 — (AP) — As British crown colony, faced with the possibility of a general strike, has bestowed on its governor virtual war powers to use at his discretion.

Emergency regulations were published empowering the governor to take steps to meet attack or internal disorder. He was authorized by requisition manpower, property, bar strikes and lockouts in essential services and to utilize extraordinary police powers that would put the colony on a war footing.

The governor may also ban sedition, Sea Organizations' tious organizations, prohibit meeting, strike to cause disturbances, detain or expel any person from the colony, search premises, vehicles, ships and planes. All types of traffic in and out of the colony were placed under his rigid control.

The stringent regulations have not been applied to present labor strife in the colony. But the governor may invoke them if he thinks they are necessary.

Publication of the regulations came as the colony suffered from a rash of labor difficulties which may develop into a general strike.

The most serious threat comes from a wage dispute involving essential utilities workers.

Trolley workers already are on strike and the company has discharged several hundred employees and locked out the rest for refusal to collect fares and for slowdown tactics.

Other utility workers are threatening to strike. They demand, like the tram workers, an increase of three Hong Kong dollars (about 53 cents) daily in their living allowance.

All unions in the colony are now under strong Communist influences. Well-informed official observers believe, however, that political factors in the labor unrest are secondary for the movement; at least.

S.S. No. 4 Tyendinaga Holds Fine Concert

The school room at S.S. 4 Tyendinaga was filled to capacity on a recent Tuesday evening by the parents of the pupils, and the people of the community, who had come to enjoy the Christmas concert that had been prepared by the teacher, Mrs. Ross Shelley, and her pupils.

The room was tastefully decorated for the occasion. In one corner, stood a pretty Christmas tree with its many colored lights.

Mr. Raymond Clarke acted as chairman for the evening's program. Mrs. Harry Sine acted as accompanist at the newly acquired piano, which added a great deal to the enjoyment of the evening's entertainment.

Mr. Clarke moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Shelley and her pupils for the fine program which was greatly enjoyed by all present. The pupils of the school all took their parts exceedingly well, and showed the results of the careful training they had received.

At the conclusion of the program Santa Claus arrived to distribute the gifts and candy from the well-laden tree.

The following is the program that was presented during the evening:

What's Ahead in 1950

NINETEEN-FIFTY should see the continuation of the rapid growth of the London Life because its progress has been built on a solid basis.

The strong financial position of the Company, its record for low cost, and competent representation are prompting Canadians to purchase more life insurance from the London Life than from any other company.

The coming year will mark the completion of an extensive addition to the Head Office building. Need for additional space has been present to an ever-increasing extent since the Company was half its present size. The new facilities will aid greatly in maintaining its high standard of service.

Two-Year Term For Possessing Counterfeit $10 Bills

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)— For having counterfeit $10 bills 19-year-old Paul Faucher on Friday was sentenced to two years in penitentiary.

Registrate S. T. Bigelow told Faucher, "This is a most serious offence and one for which you could be sentenced to 14 years. The only way to stop the passing of these bills is by imposing penitentiary terms and as far as this court is concerned that is what offenders can expect."

Police said they found six counterfeit $10 bills on Faucher when he was arrested Dec. 18.

Says Japanese Plotted Germ War

Moscow, Dec. 31 — (AP) — The communist party newspaper, Pravda, reported today from the germ warfare trial in Siberia that the Japanese plotted during the war to drop bacteria-filled bombs on all major Soviet cities in the Far East.

Groups for the germ campaign were trained and ready, said the communist party organ in a dispatch from the war crimes trial of 12 Japanese charged with operating bacteriological warfare.

Pravda said the Japanese also had planned to hide germs in candy, in canes, and in fake fountain pens which were to be distributed behind the allied lines by spies.

Challenge to Love

By Ethel Hamil

I knew that if she had just turned from the enchanted near sleep of the fairy tale if there had been calendar in exile, she still could have that this was the day college girl. She could have told by the look of the crowd which taken over Kremolka's Candy ion, taken it over simply nolately, like the annual in- of migrating starlings blackened the chapel's vene- le cornices for one weekend autumn. Yesterday the coun- favorite eating place had quiet as a churchyard, ding in its golden Septem- letherby. Today—a shambles, ches between the high- and booths were jammed with ge people, yelling and scuf- ir back and forth with ex- gantly waving arms. The racks were all deep with nury jackets with gloriously pork-pie hats and ey's-hair topcoats. Under each se for four, six pairs of saddle s were jammed together in cozy companionship of re- ide Kremolka, hovering near front door of his revivified emporium was perspiring in stains and flashing that wide gold-toothed leer of welcome ch Camella Austin had known his "mid-September" smile no way back in the days when irst-of-college had swept upon with all the excitement and ve color of Christmas or a hday, interrupting her preoc- ion with her dolls, quicken- her pulses and brightening ks.

Sipping the dregs of her malted he first food she'd had since breakfast—Cam tried count the opening days she had seen since that time. But there s been too many. They were ds on a string which seemed run back forever. They all ered together, like running ers, into a giddy melange of fitement which left no clear pression nor sharp-cut outline ory, a warm, muted general ng.

Being the only daughter of the n who had served Carter Col- as its dean for years before were born, Cam decided, was treacherous thing. It gave you memory of an old woman, rtlessly before your time! Here e sat feeling like a refugee m a museum, when, actually was still an undergraduate herself.

She was just working up cour- to book a table for a friend ward the doorway when Her- Powell dropped into the seat from her, winded from his r buffeting amid the menaces the slide.

Cam knew it was Herbert be- she glanced up, even though had not seen him all through summer months. There was antalizing thing in the way he cleared throat in preparation for eaking to her—just as if he were about to unveil for his eshman class in English Lit the inner mysteries of the Chau- rian verb.

"Well, Cam! I've been search- the town for you!"

"Have you Herbert?" She tried her best to make herself sound ressed, although actually she didn't care particularly what ung Professor Powell had been oing. "Didn't anybody at the ce tell you where I was? I've been up at the hospital. That's here I always go on Thursdays. ure's Aldo."

"Thursdays? It was Tuesdays I left on my vacation." It was something of a feat, the way Herbert could manage to look both a kicked spaniel and a ruffled owl at the same moment. A combination of injured right- ousness and censure, well lard- with a cringing wistfulness. as not precisely the recipe to oke animated response from a irl who had been on her feet the convalescent ward since noon. "I guess I'm not up to date on your schedule, Camellia. You haven't written to me very often this summer."

Cam felt ashamed. The possibility of having dealt an unintentional hurt always affected her this way, with a sense of wrong-doing more the less acute because he often was patently illogical. Letters from Colorado, addressed in Herbert's precise and disciplined hand, had arrived at the Dean's house punctually three times a week all summer long.

"I-I'm sorry about that Herbert. You know, I did mean to write to you often. But whenever there were so darn many other—"

"Other letters," he finished somberly. "Your postwar V-mail."

Delicate color burned into Cam's cheeks, climbing to the roots of the silver-gilt hair still soft smooth under her cap. The clear emerald color which made her eyes, through no fault of her own, exotic, clouded swiftly. Herbert had intended his sally reference to her voluminous overseas correspondence to hurt.

She was ashamed of so many of those letters, now. Not for what she had written in them, but for what the boys in uniform who had received them might perhaps have read between the lines. They seemed, now, with the war yoke fading, so much too easy, too impulsive— yes, too cheapening.

"I was terribly glad to hear from you Herbert," she said quickly, to cover her confusion. "You must have had a real whirl for yourself climbing all those mountains."

"Very exhilarating experience" Herbert admitted, sounding more professorial than ever. Yet he wasn't old enough to be pompous really. He was only 26. And he wore that ridiculous pale line of moustache to make himself look older—more like his own conception of a man with a full professorship practically staring him in the face. His gray eyes, despite their earnestness, were young. So was the cowlick which ruffled the part in his grizzled brown hair, no matter how carefully his military brushes might belabor it.

Cam was gathering her possessions from the table and joining them into her purse. "You must come over to the house some evening soon, Herbert, and tell us all about the mountains. I'm sure we'll enjoy hearing about them too."

"Much as I admire the Dean, I had in mind was seeing you alone." For the instant he didn't sound like a master at all. "I've thought of very little else all summer Cam. You know how crazy I—"

"Now, Herbert," Cam cut in firmly. "I told you last May how I feel about getting emotional. Romances are out. Any and all romances."

"But I thought the summer might have changed that, at least a little. After all, you can't go on grieving for Gary Marlowe forever."

Cam's fingers had clasped hard on the edge of her purse as he spoke the name. Here it was again! That persistent belief with everyone in Carter College blandly refusing to relinquish it, that she had been in love with Gary Marlowe. That her heart had gone down in a spiral of flame over Iwo Jima, with his bomber.

And it was her own fault if the college thought so. Her own foolish fault.

It had seemed so exciting when —three years ago —her father's institution of learning had swung into wartime role of basic training for navigators. Suddenly the campus had been heavily dotted with young men in uniform, replacing the young men in rumpled tweeds and sweaters labeled with big block "C's" who just as suddenly had disappeared. Everyone had plunged with a patriotic frenzy into the job of seeing that these lads who presently would be flying over enemy territory took along with them the surest possibly memories.

Cam herself had been only a freshman then, awed by the glamor of her first months in the Big Men's society as though she had not been looking on at campus life the very close sidelines ever since she could remember.

The dinners, the picnics, the dances which everyone in Carterville suddenly felt impelled to give as entertainment for the young warriors-to-be had made a giddy background to days packed with unfamiliar activities —bandage-rolling, blood donations, bond selling rallies. She had felt like a girl on a merry-go-round. The colors were blurred around her. But stabbingly bright.

Young warrior-to-be. . . .

That was the way she had thought about Gary Marlowe 3 years ago. The new boy of 18 who had been so very new, then. He had been among the first class of navigators to appear.

They had gone canoeing on the river. They had barbecued steaks over the open-air grill in the Dean's garden. They had canoed out the first of Carterville's block parties on the green grass of the Commons. They had kissed in the moonlight on the shadowy steps of Carter's Ivy-covered chapel. Impulsive, almost frightened kisses, as if this were the end of Creation and they had to snatch at what they could. As it rocketed past them into some lost and lonely chasm.

But—what had Gary Marlowe looked like?

Dark she thought. Yes, dark. Grey eyes? No hazel! Or green like her own? A deep cleft in his chin—or had that been Bill Mitchell, the next summer? Had that husky laugh which had climbed a scale as if it were tap-dancing up a flight of stairs belonged to Gary—or was that Fred Wayne and her thinking of?

Everything had happened so fast.

Those navigators of the future had lingered at Carter only for a few months' course before the Army moved them on to advance training elsewhere. They had come through so fast, they were gone before you really could find out what they were like. They all wore the same uniform. They were all in such a hurry to cram every minute of liberty with fun —because this so well might be the last fun they ever would have.

So now—now that the training program was a thing of the past and the war was over, now that Carter was opening for its first normal academic year since the hostilities had ceased, now that the flow of desperately gay young faces with the mantle of doom behind them had been cut off—they had all blurred together in Cam's memory.

She had written to all the boys who had begged her to write. She had kissed them all good-bye on the chapel steps. She had sent them boxes at Christmas, packed with candy bars and gay little trinkets which might make them feel a fraction closer to home. But time had mixed them all up in her mind, had sifted them together.

TECHNICAL ADVANCE FOR TEACHING

One of the newest marvels of science, shown at a science exhibition in New York, is the "scopicon" — a device that permits as many as ten persons to view microscopic slides at one time. Edward Ellis, foreground, is adjusting the master instrument and changing slides while eight persons view the slides simultaneously around the table. The instrument is expected to be of great value to schools.—Central Press Canadian.
